$4,000,000 Laundry Merger in Atlanta Announced

TEN LOCAL FIRMS ARE CONSOLIDATED UNDER BIG DEAL

Personnel of New Organization Is With Few Exceptions Same as Under Old System.

ATLANTA TO GAIN BY CONSOLIDATION

Unsurpassed Service for Promptness, Quality and Reliability Promised by Management.

Consolidation of ten of the largest Atlanta laundries into a $4,000,000 organization under central management, to be known as "Atlanta Laundries, Incorporated," was announced Saturday. The consolidation will give Atlanta one of the finest and most modern laundry and dry cleaning services in America.

Laundry plants participating in the consolidation are: American, Capital City, Decatur, Excelsior, Guthman, May's, Peerless, Piedmont, Trio and Troy.

The personnel of the new organization is with very few exceptions the same as when the ten laundries operated individually. The executive board is composed of B. C. McClellan, chairman of the board; George H. Fauss, president; Thomas A. Martin, executive vice president; Arthur I. May, second executive vice president. The board of directors is composed of Sam R. Greenblatt, T. C. Perkins, Earl D. Knight, George M. Brown, Jr., W. M. Camp and V. F. Todd, treasurer. The vice presidents and plant managers include B. F. May, V. F. Todd, W. H. Harris, Sam R. Greenblatt, George A. Matson, T. C. Perkins, T. Marion Martin, William A. Fauss and Earl D. Knight.

Fauss' Announcement.

In announcing the new company George H. Fauss, former president of the Capital City laundry and president of the new company, made the following statement:

"The Atlanta Laundries, Inc., is the outcome of a great deal of thought and study on the part of the laundry owners of Atlanta. While we believe the individual plants that comprise the Atlanta Laundries, Inc., have for many years given Atlanta laundry users a service that is unsurpassed anywhere for quality, promptness, and reliability, we also realize that there are many advantages that our customers can gain from centralized ownership and centralized control of these plants.

"Not the least of these is the fact that the new organization will have at all times the advice of a group of men who know the laundry business thoroughly and who know what laundry services are best fitted to Atlanta's needs. The men who will be associated with me in the direction of the new organization have spent their business lives in the laundries of this city. Many of them started in business as laundry drivers and have worked up to their present positions through every department of the laundry.

"Thomas A. Martin, who will be first executive vice president of the

One person met almost instant death and eight were injured, three of them seriously, in train and auto accidents in Atlanta Saturday night.

Mrs. Tuggle Dies.

In the crash in which Mrs. Tuggle met her death and in which her husband, an employee of the Georgia Power company, and their infant daughter were seriously injured, the automobile in which they were riding early Saturday night was struck by the southbound Royal Palm De Luxe No. 101 of the Southern railway at Henderson's crossing.

Mrs. Tuggle was dead when an ambulance of H. M. Patterson & Son arrived on the scene. Tuggle and the 8-months-old girl were rushed to the Atlanta hospital. Doctors stated that both Mr. Tuggle and the infant are suffering from internal injuries.

Only meager details of the accident were learned by police, who were told that several freight cars on a side track probably obstructed the view of both the engineer and Tuggle, who was driving the automobile. The train left for Jacksonville, Fla., at 7:40 o'clock from the Terminal station. Mrs. Tuggle's body is now at J. Austin Dillon's undertaking parlors.

Alexander Injured.

G. D. Alexander, 40, an employee of the Georgia Power company, is in Grady hospital and believed to be in a dying condition as the result of an automobile crash late Saturday night at Decatur and Pratt streets. Doctors stated that the entire left side of his face had been badly crushed by the impact.

Alexander was in an automobile crossing Decatur street, when another car containing two youths and going east on Decatur crashed into his car. Both machines were badly damaged.

Patrolmen Smith and Scoggins arrested W. M. Dewberry, 19, of 519 Cherokee avenue, and Olin Garvin,

JUDGE W. D. ELLIS TAKEN BY DEATH; ILL THREE DAYS

Prominent Atlantan Served Twenty Years on Atlanta Bench, Retiring From Service in 1926.

Judge William D. Ellis, retired jurist of the superior courts of the Atlanta circuit, and one of the most widely known and beloved barristers in the south, died suddenly Saturday night at his residence, 44 Eleventh street, N. E., following a short illness. He was confined to his bed only three days before his death.

For the past five months, Judge Ellis, who was 83 years old, had been very feeble but his condition at no time had been thought dangerous. The family physician had visited his home Saturday night, relatives said, and was in the act of taking Judge Ellis' pulse when death came.

Judge for 20 Years.

After nearly 20 years' service, Judge Ellis in 1926 retired from the bench of the superior court and on October 28 of that year more than 250 prominent members of the local bar met at a dinner at the Biltmore hotel to pay him tribute.

Judge Ellis was born in the District of Beaufort, South Carolina, August 17, 1844, in that turbulent period when the mind of a nation was inflamed over the slavery question and his early life was concerned particularly with its results—in his serv-

ATLANTA COUNCIL TO PASS MONDAY ON FINANCE SHEET

Fight To Amend Sheet Will Be Waged by Fire Board and Two Committees.

Allocation of $16,969,318.74, the entire estimated revenue of the city government for 1928, will come before city council Monday when the finance sheet is presented by the finance committee, and a councilmanic battle over at least two of the appropriations loomed Saturday.

The Atlanta public schools will receive $277,000 more than last year and the total available for budgeting purposes will be $2,948,008, about $168,000 short of the amount asked by the department. If plans of the finance committee go through this $2,948,008 will be set aside definitely and finally for school purposes, and will not be subject to change as it has been in the past.

In order to appropriate as much as possible to schools, the committee has slashed every department allocation to the very bone, and left "barely enough to operate on," according to members of committees of several of the departments.

Amendments Proposed.

A strenuous battle will be waged to amend two items of the sheet providing for appropriation of $15,000 to the Stone Mountain Memorial association and $24,000 to the forward Atlanta commission. The fight will be led by members of the Atlanta fire board, the streets and sanitary committees.

Members of these committees hold that the sum set up for schools has so depleted the city treasury, that appropriations for urgent needs can not be made without jeopardizing operation of the departments this year, and will seek to divert the $39,000 as follows: $5,000 to assist in purchase of the John B. Gordon home for a memorial shrine to the famous Confederate general; $10,000 for additional fire equipment; $9,000 for sanitary trucks

BANDITS' RETREAT IN "OUTLAW" AREA BOMBED BY FLIERS

400 Communists Routed in Front of Brooklyn Navy Yards; Others Besieged State Department

MARCHERS OPPOSE U. S. INTERVENTION

Major Bourne Completes Hop to Battle Center From Florida Without Stop.

The situation resulting from American intervention in Nicaragua apparently was swiftly nearing a crisis last night.

While airplanes piloted by marine fliers were bombing rebel forces in Nicaragua yesterday, New York police broke up a parade of 400 communists who paraded to the Brooklyn navy yard in protest against the American Nicaraguan policy.

Simultaneously a group of men and women communists marched around the state department building in Washington in a similar protest.

Forty rebels were reported to have been killed during the marine air attack. The planes unexpectedly swept out of clouded skies and bombed the bandits' retreat.

Reinforcements and more ammunition are expected to reach the marine forces in Nicaragua tomorrow. Six hundred marines are on a United States destroyer which last night was nearing the Nicaraguan coast.

MARINE AVIATORS BOMB REBELS.

Managua, Nicaragua, January 14.—(United News.)—Forty Nicaraguan rebels were killed today by United States marines flying more than 5,000 feet high.

Darting through the clouds which concealed their maneuvers from the strongly entrenched forces of General Augustino Sandino, on the mountain of Elchipote, 5,000 feet below, the American detachment used bombs, machine guns and hand grenades to work destruction on the rebel forces. Major R. E. Rowell commanded the United States marine airplane detachment making the attack, according to a statement made by Colonel Mason Gulick, in charge of United States marine forces in Nicaragua.

It was the first time the Americans had used hand grenades on the rebel forces. Sandino's men used two anti-aircraft guns which, with rifles, kept up an incessant fire on the American planes. One plane was struck twice and an American pilot narrowly escaped injury.

Marine officers said today's bombing had been the most disastrous since the aerial warfare against Sandino began.

CHAMBERLAIN OFF AGAIN ON MONDAY

Aviator, Who Fails To Break Endurance Record Because of Leaky Tank, Will Try Again.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., January 14. (United News.)—Undeterred by their failure to create a new world record for endurance flying, Clarence D. Chamberlain and Roger Q. Williams announced tonight that they would try again next week, starting at dawn Monday.

A short time after they had been forced to land with almost 52 hours in the air behind them, the two aviators were back at the field directing repair work on the plane. They brought their Bellanca monoplane to earth at 2:04:17 p. m., just 51 hours, 52 minutes and 24 seconds after the take-off Thursday morning.

In that long stretch they had known hunger, cold, sleepiness, and other discomforts. But they kept bravely on, cruising back and forth over Long Island until the gasoline tanks were empty. By the time the plane rolled to a stop the propeller was stationary.

Set New American Record.

Chamberlin and Williams set a new American record, bettering the mark of 51 hours, 11 minutes and 25 seconds established by Chamberlin and Bert Acosta last April.

But the new record will not be accepted officially due to the recent ruling of the international aeronautical federation that endurance records, to stand, must exceed previous marks by at least an hour.

Hence the fliers would have had to stay aloft until 3:34:24 p. m., to have been credited with breaking the world record of 52 hours, 22 minutes, 31 seconds held by Johann Risticz and Cornelius Edzard, Germans.

One minor accident after another was recounted by Chamberlin and Williams in the story of the flight which they told after they had wash-

TALLEY RENAMED RESERVE CHIEF

Texan Reelected Governor of Eleventh District Bank Despite Opposition of Small Bankers.

Dallas, Texas, January 14.—(AP)—By a vote of six to three, Lynn P. Talley today was reelected governor of the Dallas federal reserve bank. All other lesser officials of the bank were reelected.

Immediately following the election T. P. Perkins, representing more than 250 member bankers who have been seeking the removal of Governor Talley, announced that a congressional investigation of the affairs and policies of the Dallas institution was inevitable.

Rural Bankers Brought Charge.

The reelection of Governor Talley occurred at a postponed annual meeting of the board of directors of the bank as a result of a hearing into the tactics employed by Governor Talley in dealing with member banks.

The hearing was based on charges of the complaining bankers, led by J. P. Williams, of Mineral Wells, Texas, who alleged Governor Talley was discourteous, officious and dictatorial in dealing with rural bankers.

Talley, in a statement, made a blanket denial of all testimony offered by complaining bankers. After the action of the board of directors today Mr. Perkins issued the following statement for Mr. Williams and his other banker clients:

Congressmen May Act.

"Members of congress have signified their intention to act immediately if Talley was reelected. These include the majority members of congress from the eleventh federal reserve district. However, it may first be taken up with the federal reserve board at Washington before a resolution is offered in congress.

"While we are disappointed to a certain extent we are not disheartened or discouraged. We had anticipated that this hearing would become a matter of official record. It has, and now the next move is from representatives in congress."

Talley's only statement after the election was: "I will continue to pursue the same policies I have been pursuing."

TALMADGE HOLDS UP SALARY CHECKS

Entomology Employees Must Wait Pending Meeting in Governor's Office January 23.

Salary requisitions for the employees of the state department of entomology aggregating more than $3,000 were held up Saturday by Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, pending a meeting of the state board of entomology called to meet in the office of Governor L. G. Hardman January 23.

At the meeting in the governor's office the various angles of the controversy waged by Commissioner Talmadge on one side and E. Lee Worsham, state entomologist and two associate members of the board of entomology on the other, will be "threshed out" in the presence of the governor, according to Commissioner Talmadge.

The controversy developed over the disposition of certain fees collected by the state department. Commissioner Talmadge has sought on two occasions to turn these fees into the state treasury but the state board adopted rules which require the countersigning of checks on these funds by the secretary of the state board. State Entomologist Worsham is secretary of the board.

For several weeks a division of sentiment has existed between the commissioner of agriculture and the entomologist relative to the disposition of the fees and Commissioner Talmadge said he called the meeting of the state board in the governor's office in an effort to settle the matter.

RELATIVE DENIES EMBALMED BODY IS DEAD KING BEN

Ashland, Ky., January 14.—(AP)—Those who watched over the bier of "King" Benjamin Purnell, awaiting his reincarnation, were not gazing at the features of the ruler of the House of David colony, but at an aged cobbler, member of the colony, Dr. James Stallard, brother-in-law of Purnell, declared in a statement here.

Dr. Stallard added that he since has seen Purnell alive, and that he is in hiding in Greenup county, Kentucky, from where he intends to leave the United States, together with his wife, "Queen" Mary Purnell. Dr. Stallard said that the aged cobbler took Purnell's place during the recent court trial of the colony leader, and it was he who died instead of Benjamin.

Wade Johnson In Death Cell Third Time

Governor Hardman Considers Plea To Commute Sentence.

Macon, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—James A. Swain, sentenced to die in the electric chair on January 18, for the murder of J. Walter Johnston, and Wade Johnson, sentenced to be hanged at Gray, Ga., Jones county, on January 20, for an attack on an aged Jones county woman, were placed in the death cells here today. The death watch was established at noon and the prisoners will be kept in solitude until the execution date arrives.

Both prisoners have petitions for commutation of sentence resting before Governor Hardman, but he has not yet acted upon them. This is the third time these two prisoners have been confined in the death cell.

Governor L. G. Hardman announced, through his secretary, that no decision was expected to be reached before Monday.

DEATH PENALTY HIT BY ATTORNEY IN N. Y. DEBATE

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—Capital punishment and that part of the New York state law which approves it was attacked tonight by Samuel Untermeyer, one of the state's leading attorneys, in a debate onight.

Untermeyer, who debated the question with Dr. William Lathrop Love, state senator from the eighth district, advocated suicide of the prisoner convicted of a crime now carrying the death penalty and quoted the law of ancient Greece to support his recommendation. With Dr. Love he appeared before the Roebling unit of the Steuben society at the University club in Brooklyn.

The law permitting capital punishment Untermeyer called immoral, brutal and an incentive rather than a deterrent to the weak minded and emotional.

Earth Tremor Recorded.

Santiago, Chile, January 14.—(AP)—A strong earthquake tremor was felt at 9 o'clock this evening in the provinces of Coquimbo and Apapama followed throughout the day by other shocks of lesser intensity.

TRAIL NEW CLUES IN KILLER SEARCH

Worried Mothers of Flint, Michigan, Keep Children Indoors as Police Hunt Murderer.

Flint, Mich., January 14.—(United News.)—Worried mothers kept children indoors for a dull holiday today as clue after clue to the slayer of 5-year-old Dorothy Schneider proved useless.

Police were convinced the man who kidnaped and killed the child nd mutilated the body with the skill of a surgeon, was a resident of this district. They sought a man of unusual intelligence, possibly a respected member of the community gone suddenly insane.

A slightly stooped man, wearing a fur hat, and when last seen traveling in a dilapidated sedan, was sought by police and sheriff's deputies through Michigan and neighboring states.

Despite highway patrols and search of underworld resorts, the feeling grew that the slayer either had escaped to Chicago or some other large city, or was living a placid existence here amidst neighbors who did not suspect him of being the hunted .

Mothers grew hysterical with fear of new attacks.

Dorothy was kidnaped Thursday on her way home from school. A discarded chewing gum wrapper near the place where she was known to have entered the assailant's car led to belief that she had been enticed by a stick of gum.

Hours later the girl's body was found in a creek bed five miles from her home. Incisions in the mutilated body made it impossible to tell whether she had been assaulted.

Stalled Motorist Hunted.

The body was near the farm of Archie Bacon, who reported a stranger's old sedan had become stuck in mud near his farm a few hours before the body was found. Bacon helped extricate the car.

Attaches of the sheriff's office were confident the stalled motorist was the slayer, and that Bacon had unwittingly helped him escape.

More than 50 suspects have been arrested, questioned and released. Some were held for further questioning, but there was little evidence that any was connected with the crime.

The slayer apparently had escaped

BRAKEMAN ADMITS SLAYING HIS BRIDE

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—With his death appearing to be only a question of hours, Walter McFall, 27-year-old brakeman, revealed to police today a story of his marriage which had ended earlier in the day when he shot and killed his youthful bride and then turned the revolver on himself.

Before he lapsed into unconsciousness McFall confessed to the shooting, according to Captain Harry Kirth and Lieutenant Detective Michael Hangley. He had been married three months, McFall said. The shooting occurred at West New York, N. J., a mile from the home of McFall and Mrs. Florence McFall, his wife, who is said to have been a resident of Lawrence, Mass., before her marriage.

Wife Scantily Clad.

She was dressed in slippers, underwear and kimona. She was shot three times through the head and once through the left breast. McFall shot himself through the left ear immediately afterward, police said.

Police said McFall told them that he had met his wife on the street in West New York late Friday night in company with two men. He later took her home, he said. It was learned last night that the woman had slipped into a kimona and run from her house at 2 a. m., leaving McFall behind. She took a taxi to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Spence where her husband found her.

Make Up Quarrel.

They are said to have quarreled, but the Spences quieted them and they went outside together, apparently on good terms. A few minutes later the shots were heard and Mr. and Mrs. Spence found them, both apparently dying.

Mercury Rise To Accompany Clear Sabbath

Another clear and warm day with a slight rise in the temperatures for today is the prediction of C. F. von Herrmann, local meteorologist of the United States weather bureau.

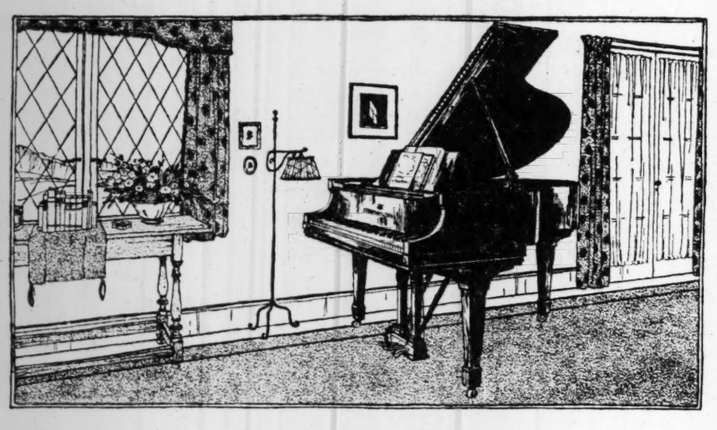

Saturday morning a bright warm sun appeared and the day took on the atmosphere of a typical spring day. Shortly after noon, however, Old Sol went behind the clouds, but the temperatures continued to climb to a high mark of 70 degrees about 3 o'clock. A minimum temperature of 50 degrees was recorded Saturday morning.

Declining temperatures in the northwest may bring a change in conditions Sunday night or Monday morning, it was stated. Forecast for the state is cloudy Sunday and Monday.

Georgia School Heads Urged To Aid Interest In Oratorical Contest

Dr. J. S. Stewart Writes Superintendents and Principals; Reference Volumes Listed.

During the past week letters announcing the 1928 high school oratorical contest were mailed to superintendents or principals of all the member high schools of the Georgia High School association by Dr. J. S. Stewart, of the University of Georgia, who is president of the association.

This is the fifth such contest to be staged in the United States, and is the third in which a number of foreign nations have been entered. In Georgia it is sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution. Following is the letter which Dr. Stewart wrote to high school principals:

"Clark Howell, Editor of The Constitution, has again made it possible for our Georgia high schools to compete in the international oratorical contest on the "Constitution of the United States.' Fifty-seven of the leading papers sponsor this contest backed by the American Bar association. The president of the United States presides at the annual contest in Washington, in which England, France, Germany, Italy, Mexico, Canada and Japan are also entered. The eight winners of the regional contests in the United States will be given a 12 weeks' tour through Europe this summer. A Georgia boy won this trip in 1925. We can win again.

Keep Posted.

"The Constitution wishes to give the widest publicity to this contest. Will you not write Tom Thompson, state news editor, from time to time all of the developments in your school as connected with this contest, the teacher assigned to coach the contestants, the names of those entering the contest, the local winner with a brief sketch, etc.?

"We wish to keep the study of the constitution before the people as an educational matter.

"I earnestly hope every school will enter the contest this year."

A selection of several competent references which will aid contestants in drafting their oration is furnished by Duncan Burnet, librarian at the University of Georgia. Other references will be given later. This week's follow:

The meeting is open to the public and the Woman's club hopes that representatives from civic organizations as well as private individuals, will be present to offer suggestions to benefit the work.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-2554 E. Third St., Milwaukee, Wisc., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money-making offer.—(adv.)

'SCRAPPY' O'SULLIVAN ON LEGION COMMITTEE

M. M. "Scrappy" O'Sullivan, well known Atlantan, has been elected to the executive committee of the American Legion for the ensuing year to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Roy LeCraw. The election took place at the first monthly meeting of the Atlanta post, held at the Chamber of Commerce building.

Mr. O'Sullivan, who has been prominently identified with athletic affairs here for several years, has been an active worker in the legion and his election to the executive committee was in recognition of his splendid service.

A feature of the meeting was the entertainment furnished by the Salvation Army, which rendered several musical numbers. Salvation Army lassies served hot coffee and doughnuts, reminding the veterans of a similar service during the world war.

The next post meeting will be held February 10, at Fort McPherson, when "Legion Night" will be celebrated. A special committee of prominent legionnaires has been appointed to provide the entertainment, as follows: Howard Glenn, W. R. Joyner, Ralph Dickerson and Basil Stockbridge.

What Atlanta thinks of Rich's New Store Hours
9 to 5 Effective Tomorrow

Mrs. J. K. Ottley
President Board of Trustees
Tallulah Falls Industrial School

"If your firm is willing to curtail its day by half an hour for the benefit of its employees, I think your customers should be willing to assist by their cooperation in making their buying hours shorter by that amount. Certainly, for the majority of customers, five o'clock is time to call it a day in the matter of purchasing. For my own part, I shall be glad to cooperate in the plan."

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson
Director for Georgia
General Federation of Women's Clubs

"I congratulate you upon the shortening of the working hours of your employees. It is a humanitarian move in keeping with the past policies of your store."

Mrs. Emmett Quinn
Chairman of Women in Industry
Georgia League of Women Voters

"It is a real pleasure to feel that the leaders of our commercial enterprises are concerned enough about the welfare of the employees, and the comforts of the patrons, to the extent of voluntarily shortening the hours of work of the employees. An equal interest in the worker and in the customer must be held in mercantile establishments. You are concerned about both.

"The liberal and progressive people of Atlanta will agree with you that this will tend to improve the efficiency of the worker and lend much to their development physically, mentally, spiritually, and morally. In this, as in many other forward developments, M. Rich & Bros. Co. has taken the lead. This is a great step forward. You are to be commended most highly."

Mrs. Jesse M. Manry
President West End Civic Club

"I read with a great deal of pleasure your announcement of the forward step in shortening the working hours of your store. That extra half hour will mean a great deal to your sales folks, giving more time for recreation and building health—and in return for this time I feel sure your store will give 100% service to the public."

Mrs. Kate Green Hess
President 5th District
Federation Women's Clubs

"I feel sure that I am speaking the sentiment of the women of the Fifth district in pledging our cooperation as to timing our shopping hours to conform with this change.

"I believe that the half hours that you give thus to your employees will be 'bread cast upon the water,' and will return to you through their loyalty and efficiency."

Mrs. P. H. Jeter
President Georgia Division
Parent-Teacher Association

"I note with great appreciation your plan to close your store at 5 o'clock. I wish to congratulate you on this forward step for two reasons: First, people can only give efficiency so many hours, and second, everyone needs leisure hours for cultural growth.

"By closing half hour earlier, this time can be spent by your 'business family' in wholesome recreations."

Miss Eula M. Lang
Pres. Woman's Division
Atlanta Chamber of Commerce

"It has come to our attention that beginning January 16th you close your store at 5 o'clock and we wish to hereby endorse your action. It will mean so much to your employees to have this additional half-hour for their own needs."

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo
Atlanta Bond Commission

"It is with real pleasure that I notice that your store is preparing to close at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30. Let me congratulate you on this fine movement which you are initiating in Atlanta. I am sure it is a plan which will meet with the approval of all right-thinking citizens."

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale

"I am a believer in work and recreation. It is a combination that tends much towards success. In closing your store each business day at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30 you are combining these two elements, for your employees will be given an opportunity for rest and recreation and will return to their labors refreshed and fitted to give the best attention to your patrons.

"I think it is a wise act."

Mr. A. S. Nance
Vice-Pres. Georgia Federation of Labor

"The writer has heard favorable comment from many sources with respect to policy of M. Rich & Bros Co. toward their employees during the Holiday Season just past, when you arranged to continue closing at your regular time, thus giving the people of your organization an opportunity to make arrangements for their own families to participate in the customary Holiday pleasures.

"The real builders of our business institutions are practically unanimous in the opinion that our large class of producers are at the same time the largest class of consumers, and of necessity must have sufficient time for recreation in which to consume some of the articles produced in order to maintain our prosperity at the present high level.

"Good wages and short hours go hand in hand with better work and greater service to employer and the general public, and will result in the employees of such organization as recognizes this progressive trend of American business life in becoming better citizens of their community and it will naturally follow that they become better customers for the other business organizations in the community.

"Your concern is to be congratulated in the announced policy in respect to your new store hours, and you may look for a generous response from the general public."

Mr. J. Sid. Tiller
Pres. Atlanta Federation of Trades

"Your announcement in the Press of Tuesday has been read with pleasure, and I am confident the working people of Atlanta join with me in offering congratulations on the position of your Company as outlined.

"The new store hours of your concern will possibly be regarded by some as an innovation, but I am sure the vast majority of our citizens will accept this as further evidence of your policy in keeping at the head of those progressive concerns who realize that in all business dealings there is a human element.

"It is now generally accepted, I believe, that shorter hours of higher efficiency results in service of increasing satisfaction to employee, employer, and the general public.

"Feeling confident that this forward step will be given support of Atlanta citizens generally, and especially those of the working class."

Mrs. Chas. J. Foster
Pres. Atlanta P.-T. A. Council

"Permit me to congratulate you on this forward step, which will give your personnel the opportunity for recreation or study and build stronger bodies and make for greater efficiency along all lines.

"Personally, I have been a convert to the idea for several years, having followed the articles of B. C. Forbes, who pleads shorter hours—maximum efficiency. Your services will be improved, and the public should be happy to cooperate in a change which will benefit so large a number."

Mr. Chas. M. Ford
Ex-Alderman Tenth Ward

"Allow me to congratulate your firm for adopting an eight-hour work day for your employees. This is a big forward step and as usual M. Rich & Bros. Co. takes the lead and I am sure the public will commend your attitude toward the working girl and man of Atlanta, and will cooperate with you to the fullest extent in making it a success, and that other business houses will fall in line to make Atlanta an eight-hour per day working city."

Mr. P. S. Arkwright
President Georgia Power Co.

"I have read with interest your announcement of the new store hours which Rich's will observe in the future. The change should help toward solving the problem of handling Atlanta's afternoon rush hour traffic. Carrying the crowds of workers and shoppers to their homes in the late afternoon is the biggest job the street cars must handle, and the change you are making WILL UNQUESTIONABLY HELP TO RELIEVE THE WORST OF THE CONGESTION WHICH IS BETWEEN 5:30 AND 6:00 O'CLOCK.

"The change also should be appreciated by your employees."

B. S. Barker
Exec. V. Pres. Atlanta Chamber of Commerce

"Those who know the value of rest, recreation and fresh air will commend you for cutting off half an hour from the working day of your employees by closing your store at 5 p. m., instead of 5:30. This movement is a bold one because it may cost you money in the course of a year but it will certainly add to your prestige as a store always looking for the uplift of the community."

Hon. D. F. McClatchey
Secretary Georgia State Senate

"It is to be expected that 'a southern institution for sixty years' would keep ahead of the times in all movements looking to the general good.

"Your announcement that the Rich store would close in the future at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30 is a broadminded innovation that will result in good both for your employees and the public."

Mr. E. B. Moore
Clerk House Representatives

"I note with pleasure that your store will be closed in the future at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30. This means much to your employees, giving them a full half hour for rest and recreation each day.

"This step is in line with the splendid policy of your store and I feel that it will be given the full approval of the buying public."

Mr. L. L. Wallis
General Manager Parks

"When an institution as large as yours takes away a half hour of trading from each day of business it means something. Your announcement to close at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30 will benefit your employees in a way that can not be accounted in dollars and cents. Lungs filled with fresh air, nerves rested by recreation and quiet are benefits that can not be computed by any form of bookkeeping. I am glad you have done this."

Mr. O. H. Williamson
Alderman 9th Ward

"When I heard your store would in the future close at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30, it at once occurred to me that this was just another fine movement of a splendid organization. I feel that your employees will be better fitted for their daily tasks as a result of this determination on your part."

Mr. C. L. Ashley
Chairman Water Committee City Council

"I notice with pleasure that your store will be closed in the future at 5 p. m. instead of 5:30 which means much to your employees, giving them a full half hour for rest and recreation each day.

"This step is in line with the splendid policy of your store and I feel it will be given the full approval of the buying public."

Mr. R. Hall Davis
Pres. Hall Davis Motor Co.

"I read with interest in last night's Journal the announcement of your company's decision to close in the afternoon at 5 o'clock instead of 5:30. This move will no doubt blaze the way for others, resulting in benefit to thousands of salesladies and salesmen engaged in other business houses. You are to be congratulated for pioneering this change."

NINE out of ten chances you patronize one of the ten laundries shown on this page. And because you do, this advertisement is of immense interest to you. Your laundry and nine others have put their interests together to give you better service.

Today we announce the formation of the Atlanta Laundries, Inc., composed of the ten leading Atlanta Laundries. But note carefully that the personnel of the ten organizations is, with very few exceptions, the same as when these ten laundries operated individually.

In the past few years the laundry industry has developed more than in all of its previous history. Where formerly the laundry was looked upon as the place to send only your collars and shirts, today the laundry is a big, modern cleaning institution that economically and sanitarily takes care of the entire family wash and all of the family's dry cleaning, including rugs, draperies, curtains and all household furnishings.

A careful study of the growing needs of the Atlanta Laundry industry and an even more careful study of how similar consolidations have worked out in other cities has led Atlanta Laundry owners to merge their interests in this new company. For four years the Laundries of New Orleans have been under a central ized management and in that time those Laundries have been able to effect economies which have invariably been passed on to the public, enabling more and more people to take advantage of laundry service.

Mr. B. C. McClellan, who conceived the New Orleans plan and who has been president of the New Orleans enterprises, will be chairman of the Board of Directors of the Atlanta Laundries, Inc. That the new organization by centralized control will be able to effect great economies goes without saying, and when these economies are accomplished it is the intention of the new company to pass them on to its customers.

Under centralized control the new company should and will be able to give you a better service than ever before. With ample resources at its command it will be able to adopt all of the new improvements that are being made in the laundry field. It will be able to offer a diversified laundry and dry cleaning service that will fit every family's need and every family's pocketbook. The Atlanta Laundries, Inc., is an Atlanta Institution directed by Atlanta men who have spent their business lives in the laundries of this city. Its entire purpose and aim is to give Atlanta the most economical, modern and complete laundry service in America. The men whose pictures appear on this page solicit your cooperation toward this end.

TROOPERS PATROL OYSTER WAR ZONE

Richmond, Va., January 14.—(United News.)—Three companies of Virginia national guards were mobilized today to prevent bloodshed in the Mobjack war over oysters in Gloucester.

Company K, 183rd infantry, Norfolk, under Captain Chester B. Kootz, proceeded today to the trouble area to start patrolling state-leased oyster beds, invaded by unauthorized oyster men who fired on a state patrol boat, the "Katy," recently.

Will Preserve Order.

Company G, Petersburg, and Company I, Richmond, also were mobilized under orders of Governor Harry F. Byrd, "to preserve order and uphold the laws and dignity of the state."

Independent oyster tongers of Mobjack bay, on the York river near Chesapeake bay, have been dredging oysters under protection of armed colleagues, violating exclusive state permits. A state law forbidding tonging at night also has been violated by the tongers, according to affidavits of county officials.

Tongers Are Aroused.

The independent tongers, whose entire livelihood depends on oysters, sought to have the state beds open to everyone.

Conditions in Mabjack bay have been quiet since the Katy, a state fisheries commission boat, was reported fired on at night by 25 armed men with rifles. The flagship of the state oyster fleet, the Commodore Maury, proceeded to Mobjack bay and was patroling the disputed waters.

JUDGE W. D. ELLIS TAKEN BY DEATH

ice in the cause of the south in the war between the states and in the period of rehabilitation that followed.

As a boy, Judge Ellis went to school to a tutor on his mother's plantation until he reached the age of 14, when he enrolled in a classical and military academy. He remained there until he was 16, when the war drew him into the army of the Confederacy.

Brilliant War Record.

On account of his military training, he soon was elected lieutenant of Company B of the 11th South Carolina volunteers and later he saw service in the cavalry. He took part with distinction in many of the major campaigns of the war.

Judge Ellis succeeded to the command of his company when his last ranking officer was killed in the battle of Drury's Bluff. A few hours after that disastrous engagement, in which the company was reduced to a handful of men, his regiment was ordered to march to meet Butler's expedition against Fort Fisher.

In a valiant battle, the sadly decimated southerners held Butler's forces in check for several hours but were finally captured. Captain Ellis was sent a prisoner to Fort Delaware, where he remained until after Lee's surrender at Appomattox in 1865.

He was less than 21 years old when he returned to his home, which was found in ruins. His mother, three little sisters and two brothers were dependent upon him, and he bravely undertook the task of providing for them.

Admitted to Bar.

He taught school, studied law and was admitted to the bar. The horde of carpetbaggers and negroes made South Carolina almost unbearable as a home and so Captain Ellis decided to migrate.

He came to Atlanta and settled, a total stranger, just at the time the long session of the Bulloch legislature was beginning. He reported for five different newspapers during that session.

He was soon elected a member of council from the second ward, then the largest ward in the city. He then was elected to the Georgia legislature. Leaving the legislature he entered the practice of law, which was to herald a long and notable career on the bench.

He was elected solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta and in July, 1907, Governor Hoke Smith appointed him judge of the superior court of the Atlanta circuit. By an act of the legislature July 23, 1907, the post was made electoral.

Judge Ellis was then elected for another term by the people, and he was elected for four succeeding terms, making a continued service of 19 years and five months at the time of his retirement.

Paid Honor at Banquet.

At the banquet given in his honor, the south's most brilliant legal luminaries gathered to pay their respects to a man, lawyer and judge whom they loved and respected. A committee of speakers, composed of Robert C. Alston, Henry C. Peeples, Hoke Smith, Jack J. Spalding, Judge Shepard Bryan, John M. Slaton and Reuben R. Arnold, expressed to Judge Ellis the high regard which the Atlanta bar and the bar of the south held for him.

Judge Ellis leaves the following children: Pricleau Ellis, of New Orleans, La.; Harry Ellis, Frampton Ellis and Mrs. Edward L. Bishop. He also was the father of the late William D. Ellis, Jr., and the late Mrs. William H. Rhett. He leaves one brother, Dr. Daniel Ellis, of Charleston, S. C.; two sisters, Mrs. John Fort, of Mt. Airy, Ga., and Mrs. William McLeod, of James Island, S. C., and several grandchildren, neices and nephews.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later from the establishment of H. M. Patterson & Son, funeral directors in charge.

CHAMBERLIN PLANS NEW HOP TOMORROW

ed and eaten at the Garden City hotel. Any one of the mishaps might have forced them to land at any time, but the two kept the plane aloft until the last drop of gasoline was gone.

Discovers Gasoline Leak.

About 9 o'clock Thursday night, when they had been in the air approximately 11 hours, Chamberlin said, he chanced to flash his light, in signalling the ground, along the left wing of the plane a thin jet of gasoline was spurting from the bottom of the tank, spraying back over the cabin and through a partly opened window.

He immediately shut off the right wing tank and used only the fuel in the leaking tank until it was empty and then cut the right wing tank into the feed line. The left wing tank was not used again and because the gas supply gauge was attached to it, from this time on the two pilots "flew blind," without knowing how much gas they had except by rough estimates until the main tank was emptied at 7:30 this morning. All the fuel which remained was the 40 gallons held in the right wing tank.

Thursday night the heater exhaust pipe broke and from then on the cabin was without heat, although the fliers said that at no time did they suffer from the cold. Their main difficulty was sickness caused by gas fumes which clung to the cabin and saturated the greater portion of their food, making it unfit to eat.

Oil Line Springs Leak.

The next trouble, they said, was when the oil line sprang a leak, which could not be located, and the oil thrown back from the motor, plastered the cabin and windows so that they had to fly from then on with the windows open.

At 7:30 o'clock this morning, when they discovered that their fuel supply was down to 40 gallons, Chamberlin realized that they would just about equal the world record before they were forced to descend. They then started to toss overboard everything that could be spared. A five-gallon can of fuel was the first to go.

The plane was cruising over Mitchel field at the time and the can landed about two feet from the side of one of the hangars. Chamberlin said that he was a little perturbed for fear that someone might have been struck, so that the plane was flown out over the nearby farming district.

They circled over a plowed field, dropping food, thermos bottles, a can with one gallon of water and other things. Williams suggested that Chamberlin heave his shoes overboard and Chamberlin retaliated by telling Williams to make a parachute out of shirts and some old rope in the plane and jump as he, Chamberlin, was the lighter of the two.

Broker Backs Fliers.

A. R. Martin, Wall street broker and backer of the flight, said a third attempt would be made to establish a new record with the same plane, adding that the third one would be successful.

Both aviators were pale as they faced newspapermen at the hotel. They were not as tired as might be expected, however, Chamberlin said, adding that they relieved each other in two and three-hour shifts. The one not at the controls slept most of the time he was off.

Mrs. Chamberlin was among the first to greet her husband upon his return to earth. Mrs. Williams was not at the field, but met her husband flier at the hotel.

18, of Center Hill, who were in the automobile which struck Alexander's car. They are being held without bond, pending outcome of his condition.

Child Is Injured.

Jewell Harris, eight-year-old daughter of T. E. Harris, of 619 Gaskill avenue, was taken to Grady hospital late Saturday afternoon with a possible fracture of the skull, received when she was struck down by a truck said to have been driven by an uncle of W. H. Guthrie, of 730 Gaskill avenue. The accident occurred in front of the little girl's home and was investigated by Call Officer J. D. Wood. No case was made.

Mrs. Alford Truitt, of 1027 Columbia avenue, suffered minor cuts and bruises late in the afternoon when an automobile she was driving south on Spring street at Fifth street was struck by another car and overturned. The driver of the other machine failed to stop, but police were furnished with a description. Mrs. Truitt's car was not badly damaged.

Three young boys, who were crossing Virginia avenue, near Hudson drive, were struck down by a speeding sedan and left lying in the street early Saturday night, according to police reports. They were Robert Barrett, 14, of 1048 St. Charles avenue; George Enloe, of 990 St. Charles avenue, and Jack Hair, of 967 Adair avenue. They boys were taken to Wesley Memorial hospital by passers-by and doctors reported that Barrett suffered a broken leg, Enloe a fractured left arm and Hair received minor cuts and bruises about his body.

Call Officers W. M. Holland and W. D. Wallace were told that the sedan was traveling at a rapid rate of speed and immediately after hitting the boys the driver turned out the lights and increased the speed of the car. Witnesses were unable to get the license number.

raded in protest against American intervention in Nicaragua.

The marchers described themselves with placards and leaflets as members of the Young Workers league and the workers (communist) party. S. William Gerson, whom police described as a leader in the demonstration, was arrested charged with disorderly conduct and attempting to incite a riot.

The paraders were dispersed by mounted police three times before the demonstration ended. In their final effort police used their clubs on those who refused to move on.

COMMUNISTS PARADE IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, January 14.—(United Press.)—Fifty members of the American workers (communist) party paraded around the state department building for 30 minutes today with placards denouncing the United States for what they called an "imperialist war" in Nicaragua.

They issued a statement calling on American workers and farmers to join with their Nicaraguan "brothers" against "dollar dominance" and predicted that Cubans would hold a similar demonstration before President Coolidge soon after his arrival in Havana tomorrow.

"Down with all imperialist wars," said one banner. "Who gagged congress?" read another. "American workers, stop the murder of your brothers," was the legend on a third, while a fourth read: "We protest the rape of Nicaragua."

MARINE FLIERS REACH NICARAGUA SAFELY.

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—A marine corps airplane completed the first non-stop flight from Miami, Fla., to Managua, Nicaragua, a distance of 1,100 miles, at 5:33 p. m. today, the navy department announced.

The huge tri-motored monoplane, manned on this flight by Major L. M. Bourne, Lieutenant J. F. Platcha and Sergeant B. F. Belcher, is to be used in fighting the Nicaraguan rebel leader, Sandino. The plane left Miami at 5:30 a. m. today. Its course was direct over Cuba, the Carribean sea, and the zone of rebel activities in the mountainous regions of Nicaragua.

The message received tonight told merely of a safe arrival and added: "Good radio communication throughout the trip."

REPORT PRESIDENT WILL RESIGN.

Managua, Nicaragua, January 14. (AP)—Insistent rumors that President Diaz will resign shortly because of ill health are prevalent in Nicaragua.

Elected by the Nicaraguan congress after the intervention of American marines, Diaz has been chief executive since last November. He also was president from 1911 to 1917 and inaugurated Nicaraguan's new currency, the National bank, and other financial reforms.

MARINE REINFORCEMENTS NEAR NICARAGUA.

Managua, Nicaragua, January 14.—(AP)—With the arrival at Corinto Monday of several United States ships carrying 600 marines, airplanes, munitions and other supplies and with the coming of Major General John A. LeJeune and Brigadier General Logan Feland, definite plans are likely to be put into effect immediately for the campaign against the former liberal General Sandino, who has been active in Nueva Segovia.

For the moment the rebels are in concealment. Colonel Mason Gulick, commanding the marines, believes that they are hiding in the dense forests, awaiting the passing of the marine and national guard patrols.

U. S. ENVOY LEAVES FOR NICARAGUA.

New Orleans, January 14.—(AP)—Charles C. Eberhardt, American minister of Nicaragua, embarked from New Orleans today aboard the Standard Fruit steamship Granada for Puerto Cabezas to proceed to his post at Managua, after a three-months' vacation in the United States.

The minister was glad to talk about the weather, his vacation or other such subjects, but declined to discuss formally the troubled zone situation in Nicaragua.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!
Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—(adv.)

EXHIBITION of GEORGIA ART

January 16th through the 25th
in the Model Apartment, 6th Floor

The purpose of this Exhibition of Georgia Art is two-fold. First; to focus the attention of as many Georgians as possible upon the great degree and amount of artistic talent that is within its boundaries, and that which has migrated from Georgia to the art centers of the world. True Georgians, they are, who have upheld the glorious reputation of their state in the world of Art quite as brilliantly as other Georgians have in the world of Letters, Sciences—and the Professions. Second; to foster a greater appreciation of things artistic which are the foundation of beauty and good taste in the home and in the dress of all peoples. This store, keenly awake to its responsibilities as a servant of Georgia, is pioneering this Exhibition which shall mark a new epoch in the South—the uniting of Art and Commerce. We gratefully acknowledge the unstinted cooperation of the Atlanta Art Association and of those fine spirited Men and Women whose kind assistance and invaluable advice have made this event possible.

1 SLAIN, 3 INJURED IN PISTOL BATTLE

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—A workman paid with his life the penalty for carrying a pistol, two policemen, who sought to arrest him, were shot, and another worker was dangerously wounded in a shooting affray at the Pullman Car company's plant here today.

Fifteen hundred plant employees were prevented from attacking the officers, in plain clothes, whom they thought robbers, by the intercession of a clerk. Herman Hiliger, 39, collapsed with fatal wounds as he ran for shelter after opening fire on Patrick Devine, an officer. The wounds of Devine and Michael Shannon, his companion, were slight.

Tony Kalwalis, 46, a cabinet worker passing through the car shop yards, received a bullet in the head.

When the policemen emerged from the shops after Hiliger dropped, an angry mob of workers confronted them. The men, many of them shouting, "Lynch them," advanced on the officers. Alex Dluzak, a clerk, dashed among them, calling that the men were officers. The feeling subsided.

BURNING RUM BOAT SUNK BY GUNFIRE

Boston, January 14. — (United News.)—The adventurous career of the Gaspe-Fisherman, perhaps the most notorious rum-running schooner in Atlantic waters, ended dramatically off Nantucket shoals today when it caught fire and was sunk by coast guard gunfire.

Eight members of the crew, trapped on the burning two-master, were taken off by the coast guard destroyer McCall. Officials here were advised that all members of the Gaspe-Fsherman's crew appeared to have been saved.

Coast guards were forced to brave rough seas in the hazardous waters off Nantucket shoals to rescue the eight men who had taken refuge on the high places of the schooner's deck to escape the wind-driven flames.

By the time this had been accomplished the trim little craft, which for years had miraculously dodged rum-chasers until it had almost become the subject of tradition, was enveloped in fire, and it was impossible for coast guards to explore the vessel's interior for possible victims.

In the possibility that one or more men had perished aboard the blazing schooner, the destroyer McCall remained at the scene after the Gaspe-Fisherman had gone to the bottom under bombardment from the McCall's guns.

Coast guard headquarters here was advised that the destroyer with the eight survivors aboard would not reach Boston until tomorrow.

Commander Leroy Reinberg of the third coast guard district described the Gaspe-Fisherman as perhaps the most notorious rum-runner in these waters.

FINGER PRINTS IDENTIFY PRISONER AS BANK ROBBER

Roanoke, Va., January 14.—(AP)—Troy Love, 21, alias Joe Allen, held here since November 19 on a charge of felonious shooting, has been positively identified as the man wanted in Arkansas on a bank robbery charge, R. C. Johnson, police identification expert, announced today.

The identification was effected late yesterday when finger prints of Love were received from Arkansas authorities and checked with those taken here at the time of Love's arrest.

Col. R. H. Peck, Picturesque Figure, To Retire From Army

:: Distinguished Soldier To Enter Insurance Field Here ::

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

With the forthcoming retirement of Colonel Robert H. Peck, former commandant at Fort McPherson, the active career of one of the most picturesque figures in the United States army will come to and end after service rendered the country in virtually all parts of the globe. Colonel Peck has been on duty in Atlanta for the last six years and after his retirement in March will make this city his future home. After he leaves the army officially he will be affiliated with the Prudential Life Insurance company and also the Oberdorfer Insurance agency in the Grant building.

COLONEL ROBERT H. PECK.

During his career Colonel Peck served in the Spanish-American war, in the warfare in the Philippine Islands and Cuba and rounded out his active war service overseas in the world war with the fifth and sixth divisions in which he won the highest medals of the French and United States government for repeated distinguished service and bravery in the field. He probably possesses as many different kinds of honorary medals as any other officer in the American army.

Colonel Peck was born in San Francisco, Calif., in 1875, and was educated in the public schools of that city. He later was a bank clerk and school teacher and won an appointment to the West Point Military academy in a competitive examination. Besides being a gradutae of of West Point he is a graduate of the officers' schools conducted at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., Fort Benning, Ga., and other places.

While he served in the Philippine campaign in Luzon and other islands and in the Spanish-American and Cuban campaigns, Colonel Peck's most distinguished service was in the world war with the American overseas forces. He served as lieutenant colonel of the thirty-ninth infantry in its first action; as lieutenant colonel and colonel, specially promoted, of the forty-seventh infantry during its early actions and finally as colonel of the eleventh infantry.

This service won for Colonel Peck many of his decorations described in the volume, "Decorations of the United States Army." The decoration for the Distinguished Service Cross reads as follows: "Throughout the successive attacks in Liny-devant-Dun, and several other places, he exhibited conspicuous gallantry, stimulating his command to a high state of enthusiasm and creating a superb morale. Placing himself in front of the leading waves he personally led his men to the assaults. Accompanied by nine men he attacked a battery of enemy artillery near Le Maisonette forcing the abandonment and subsequent capture of the battery. Under his skillful leadership his regiment captured numerous prisoners, five pieces of artillery, three anti-aircraft guns, 150 machine guns and vast quantities of ammunition and supplies."

In the award of the Distinhuished Service medal, the citation reads: "He rendered service of signal worth as a commanding officer of the 47th infantry and subsequently of other units, successfully accomplishing all missions assigned to the regiments under his command during the active operations in which they participated. He constantly employed unremitting zeal and tactical ability of a high order and he proved himself invaluable to the American expeditionary forces."

Colonel Peck is a descendant of a long line of distinguished ancestors, tracing his ancestry directly back to John Alden and Priscilla Mullens. Four of his ancestors came over on the "Mayflower," while many of them served with distinguished valor with the Continental army during the American revolution.

Emory Lads Woo Wesleyan Girls, But Wed Agnes Scotts

:: SATURDAY NIGHT DATE GETS THE CANDY ::

BY C. M. McMILLAN.

Now it seems that students at Emory university, a Methodist institution, woo the Methodist girls of Wesleyan college at Macon and wed the Presbyterian girls of Agnes Scott college at Decatur.

Alumni marriage statistics at Emory indicate that in the past the Emory grad, and the undergrad too, for that matter, have wedded more girls of Agnes Scott college than of any other like institution.

But a survey conducted by an enterprising member of the Emory Wheel staff shows that the preponderance of the mail to college girls from Emory boys goes to Wesleyan college in Macon.

Some of the boys, however, refuse to take this as real evidence. The letters they argue, are purely the outpouring of the "line" which every collegian is supposed to sport. After all, they point out, it is the Saturday night date that gets the bon bons—chocolate cherries or what have you, Agnes Scott college, you must reflect, is almost within hailing distance of Emory.

Next to Wesleyan the girls college most popular with Emory students is the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville. G. S. C. W., one of the enamored lads with a flair for parody has discovered, means Georgia's Sweetest Collection of Women.

The third school in this postal popularity contest is Brenau college, at Gainesville. Other entries received ratings in the order in which they are listed: Bessie Tift college of Forsyth; Woman's College of Montgomery, Ala.; Shorter college, Rome, Ga.; Georgia State Teachers College, of Athens; Florida State College for Women, Tallahassee, Fla., and Ward-Belmont, of Nashville, Tenn.

One of the curious traits of collegiate correspondence, particularly on the part of the boys, seems to be a considerable diminution in love, or time to pen love letters during the period just prior to Christmas. This is attributed to stress of studies by the Wheel investigator, who points out, however, that the lads still seem to find time to write home in these moments.

AVERAGE FARM PRICES REMAIN STATIONARY

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The general average of farm prices on December 15 was the same as on November 15, and 10 points higher than a year ago, the department of agriculture reported today in its monthly summary of farm prices and business conditions. Most of the commodities included in the index showed moderate price increases, but were offset by a decline in the prices of cotton and hogs, the report said.

With the exception of wheat, hay, potatoes, hogs, eggs and chickens, it said, most of the commodities are above last year's prices. The report predicted that the level of the farm prices on January 15, would be materially different from that of the past three months.

Although stating that business conditions in general during December appeared to have shown no material change from those of November, the report said production and freight distribution ended the year at levels considerably below last year. Factory employment and total wage payments also ended the year of lower levels, and tended towards a lower purchasing power of industrial consumers at the beginning of this year. The prospects for improvement on this factor of domestic demand depend upon the improvement of the automobile and iron and steel industries, which were largely responsible for the 1927 recession in industrial activity and a seasonal rise in these industries may be looked for, it was stated.

Factors which would ordinarily suggest a seasonal advance in business activity are the lack of burdensome inventories and the ample supply of credit at moderate interest rates, the report continued. "The latter, however, has been a favorable factor throughout 1927, which did not prevent a moderate industrial recession," it said. "Instead they have formed the basis for speculative activity with the result that stock prices have continued to reach new peaks to the end of 1927."

BOY WRITES FINAL LETTER WHILE GAS ENDS HIS LIFE

Yonkers, N. Y., January 14.—(United News.)—While illuminating gas was ending his life, Stephen Bross, 22-year-old student, was writing of his last moments, police said today in revealing that Bross had committed suicide.

The youth was found by his mother and brother after they had battered down a locked door. Near his head they found the following note: "Ell, I put on the gas. I know what life is. I want to know what death is. It won't be long now. It takes a long time to feel gas. It don't smell bad. I'm getting a little dizzy. I'm losing my ambition to write—"

WOMAN FAILS TO SLAY ADVISER FOR 'REBELS'

Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, January 14. (AP)—Velimer Prelitch, legal adviser to the Skoplje prefect, is reported in advices from Skoplje to be in a serious condition as a result of an assassination attempt by a Macedonian woman, who shot and killed herself.

Prelitch was shot in the spine and may live, but probably will be paralyzed. The woman, Hora Buljeff, is said to have confessed before she died that she had orders from the Macedonian revolutionary committee to kill Prelitch. The attack is believed to have been made because Prelitch conducted a police investigation last November which resulted in the arrest of Macedonian students.

Oil Pact Pending.

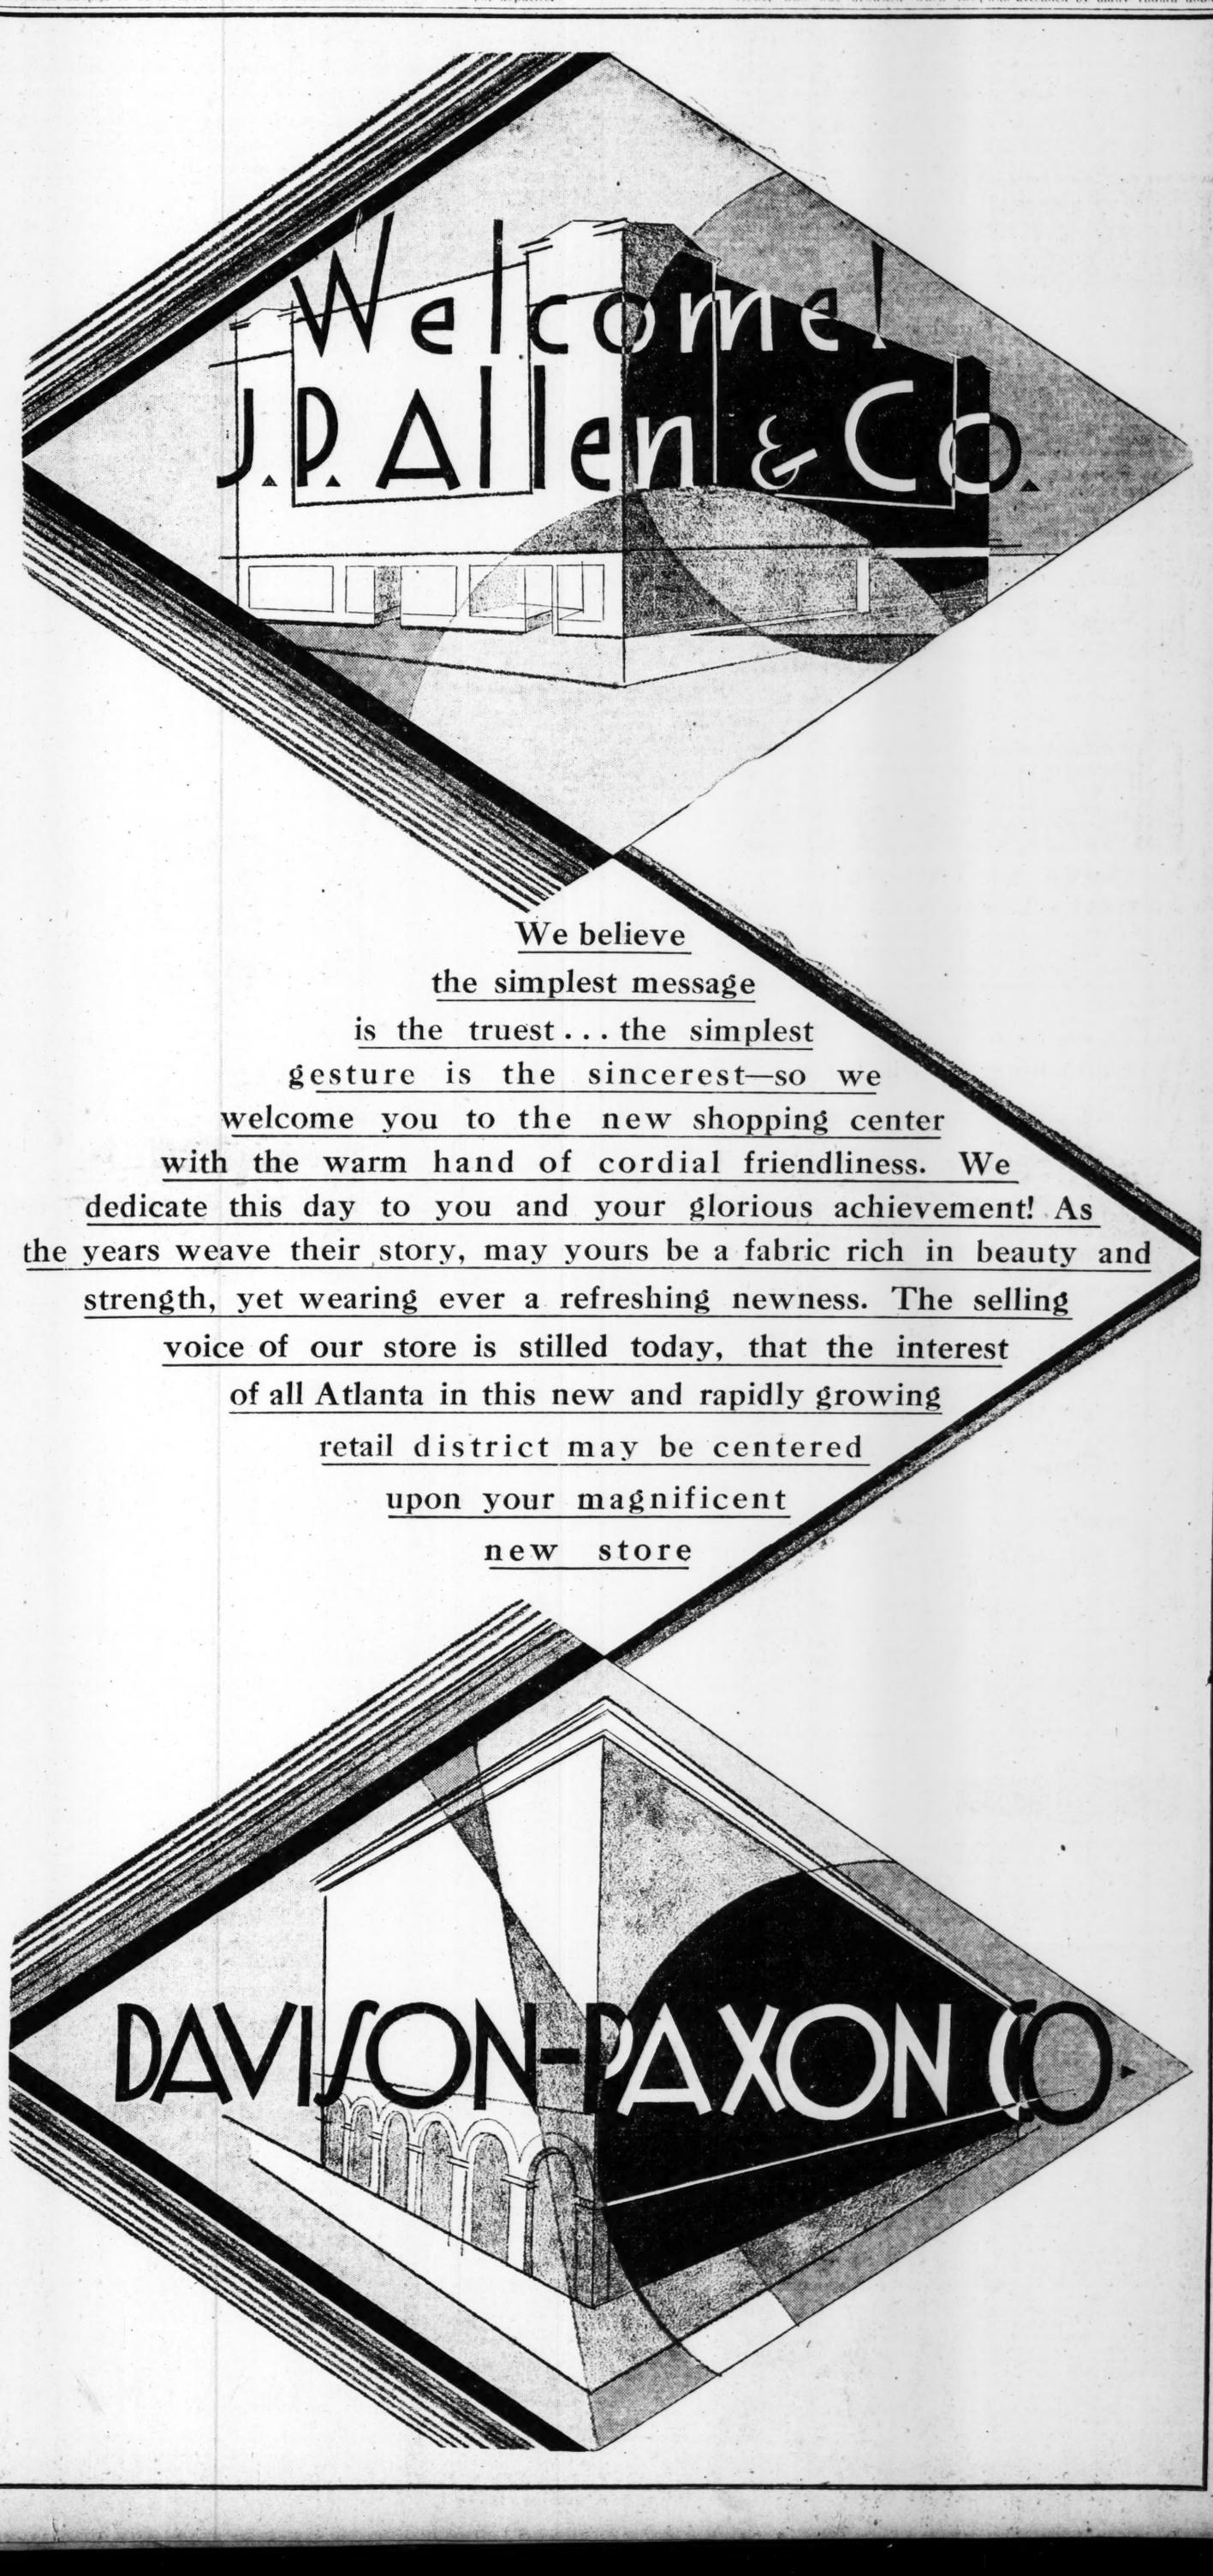

Paris, January 14.—(AP)—A definite agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France will be signed at an early date in regard to the Mosul oil fields, Foreign Minister Briand announced at a joint meeting of the foreign affairs and petroleum committees of the chamber of deputies.

FRANCIS STEAD, BRITISH EDITOR, DIES IN LONDON

London, January 14.—(AP)—Francis Herbert Stead, noted editor and social worker, died at his home at Blackheath today.

Stead was the brother of William T. Stead, editor of the Review of Reviews, who was drowned when the steamship Titanic sank in mid-ocean after a collision with an iceberg in April, 1912. Among William T. Stead's writings was one which caused a stir in the United States in the early 90's, "If Christ Came to Chicago."

The first school in the new world was built in Texcoco, valley of Mexico, in 1523, by Fray de Gante and was attended by many Indian nobles.

LINDY TAKES REST IN LITTLE VILLAGE

Panama, January 14.—(AP)—Free for the moment of the continuous rounds of receptions and functions that have marked his good will visit to Mexico and Central America, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh tonight was on vacation, the first real opportunity for rest that he has had since he left Washington, December 13.

The American air hero, accompanied by several of his fellow aviators in the American army, left Colon at 9:40 o'clock this morning and 2 hours later the post of operations at France field of the American army had word that he had landed safely in the little village of Bouquete, about 200 miles from Panama, where he will spend four or five days before continuing to Caracas, Venezuela, en route to the Pan-American conference at Havana.

Bouquete is a tiny village in the heart of the Province of Chiriqui, within the shadow of Buru volcano, which has been extinct four or five hundred years. The village is about 4,000 feet above sea level and is not far from David, capital of the province.

A story was related today of how Lindbergh, at a municipal reception yesterday, was prevailed upon to drink a glass of champagne in response to a toast. At first he attempted to get by with merely sipping the champagne, but finally complied when he was urged to drink the entire glass.

DEMOCRAT PROPOSES MISSION FOR LINDY.

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—A diplomatic mission made to order for Charles A. Lindbergh was proposed in a resolution today by Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee.

He suggested that such a mission be created to invite the nations of the world to a conference here in 1928 for the codification of international law. The invitation would be sent by an airplane "driven by a practical aeronautical navigator well known to the cities of the world who has made a successful nonstop flight across the Atlantic ocean." The "mission" would receive $25,000 and expenses.

PILOT REFUSES TO LAND AT VIRGIN ISLANDS.

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, January 14.—(AP)—A commercial airplane from Porto Rico here to test the landing field in anticipation of Colonel Lindbergh's prospective visit declined to take a chance on it today.

The plane circled over the field and then dropped the following message: "Field inadequate. Returning to Porto Rico."

Hooded British Bandits Baffle Scotland Yard Detectives

:: Reign of Terror Exists in Several Districts ::

London, January 14.—(AP)—Keeping pace with the times, robbers and other law-breakers of England have gone back to the style of disguise used in the days of the inquisition.

Since Scotland Yard, like the Paris detectives, has selected ears as prominent marks of identification, hold-up men and others active in outwitting the police, have resorted to the old-fashioned hood, which not only covers the face, but the ears. The black mask of coaching days and the Jesse James handkerchief over the nose have been discarded, says the Scotland Yard men, as entirely out of date, and they have no place in the thieves' paraphernalia.

Not a single case of the use of masks by robbers has been reported by Scotland Yard in weeks, but there have been numerous instances in the last few days in which the law violators wore the foolscap pointed hoods.

In the region of St. Mary Cray, in Kent, black-hooded men have been terrorizing girls and women at night in the country lanes. The police believe that the men are game poachers.

At the village of Berrow, Somerset, a 16-year-old girl was seized by two hooded men, gagged and left on the roadway. The police attribute this to a neighborhood row, the men taking this means of revenging their hatred for the girl's father. At Dundalek three men wearing hoods took the widow Mary McGinty from her home at midnight and clipped off her hair, cautioning her not to marry the widower Francis Fealy.

Detectives of Scotland Yard say that as the shape of the ears is readily remembered by people in general, they are not surprised that hoods are used so extensively now.

BROCK AND SCHLEE MAY START TODAY.

Daytona Beach, Fla., January 14.—(AP)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee tonight expressed hopes of starting their proposed attempt to break the world's endurance flight record tomorrow morning, after a delay of more than five weeks because of adverse weather and beach conditions.

BRAZIL-MEXICO FLIGHT PLANNED.

Mexico City, January 14.—(AP)—El Universal Grafico says that a flight from Brazil to Mexico and California in February, under the auspices of the Aero club of Brazil for studying the possibilities of commercial air service, is under consideration by the German aviator, Joe Shoene.

Grafico says that Shoene now is in Rio Janeiro and is discussing the proposal with the aero club, the Brazilian authorities and the Mexican ambassador to Brazil.

ATLANTA LAUNDRIES ANNOUNCE MERGER

new corporation, has been connected with the laundry business in Atlanta for 33 years. He was with the Excelsior laundry for 13 years and for the past 20 years has been vice president and manager of the Piedmont laundry. He is one of the best known laundry executives in this country, having served on the executive committee of the National Laundry Owners association for several years.

"Arthur I. May, second executive vice president, was identified with the French Dry Cleaning company for many years and when the name of this firm was changed to May's Laundry and French Dry Cleaning company he became the vice president of that company and has been a big factor in its progress. Mr. May is an authority on dry cleaning and dry cleaning methods and served for years as president of the Southeastern Cleaners and Dyers association.

"My own connection with the laundry business in Atlanta covers a period of 37 years and is well known. Many older citizens can remember back to the time when I called at their doors for their laundry. A few years later I acquired an interest in the Capital City laundry, which at that time was the smallest laundry in Atlanta and now is 'famous from Kentucky to Key West.'"

Atlanta Advantages.

In commenting on the advantages to be gained by the public through the consolidation Mr. Fauss stated:

"The idea of consolidation, or merging of interests, has been growing rapidly for the past several years in all lines of industry. It has been apparent to laundry owners for some time that the eventual merging of laundry interests in Atlanta would be advisable both from the standpoint of the owners and the public. In studying the best plan for consolidation the laundry owners of Atlanta analyzed thoroughly most of the laundry consolidations now operating in many cities north and south. They were most impressed with the results obtained by the grouping of the New Orleans laundries.

"The New Orleans consolidation was conceived four years ago by B. C. McClellan who has been acting as president of that enterprise since that time and the Atlanta consolidation has been modeled along the lines of the New Orleans organization. Mr. McClellan will be chairman of the board of the Atlanta Laundries, Inc. In the four years that Mr. McClellan has been in control of the New Orleans laundries he has been able to place laundry and dry cleaning service within the reach of more people than ever before.

"The purpose of the new organization is to further develop and expand the laundry and dry cleaning business in Atlanta in a manner that is only possible by the aggregation of large resources and the combined knowledge and experience that is represented by the personnel of the Atlanta Laundries, Inc. We hope through this means to give the public the benefit of improved service at reasonable rates. Substantial economies can be effected, and housewives will be assured that all domestic and household laundry and dry cleaning will be cared for in a most sanitary and up-to-date manner. Our rates will be low enough to justify the housewives in discarding all inconvenient and unsatisfactory methods of home washing by availing themselves of any one of our services.

"It is my desire to introduce into the new organization the efficiency which has made the Capital City laundry one of the leading organizations of its kind in the country, and I solicit from the public the continuance of the good will and confidence which we have enjoyed for so many years. I feel convinced that the result obtained will be to the benefit and advantage of the community whose constant growth is ever demanding enlarged and improved facilities."

ATLANTA COUNCIL TO PASS ON FINANCE

and the remainder to buy equipment for street improvements to go to the construction department.

They pointed out Saturday that unless action is taken immediately on the Gordon proposal, it will be too late to acquire the tract, that the fire department must have supplementary equipment, that annexation of East Lake has made additions to the sanitary truck fleet mandatory, and that the enforced economy program made necessary by the large appropriation for schools has cut street improvements to an absolute minimum. It also was said that lack of funds probably would force the construction department to close the Mitchell street viaduct to traffic in the interest of safety, since the present bridge has been condemned.

Actual receipts of the city government for the year are estimated at approximately $9,953,878.28 exclusive of bonds and other items which may not be diverted.

Schools will receive 44.06 per cent of the city's entire revenue after interest and sinking funds for bonds, and another public obligation amounting to more than $3,000,000 have been cared for, it was announced by Councilman A. J. Orme, chairman of the committee. Mr. Orme also declared that the Stone mountain and Forward Atlanta commission appropriation are important features of the sheet and should be kept in it. He stated all departments of the city government must operate on a retrenchment policy and on a strictly economical basis for the year since it is the intention of the committee to guarantee the school department the entire amount scheduled. Other departments, therefore, will operate on the 55.94 per cent left.

The largest appropriation is for interest, sinking funds for bonds and the public debt amounting to $3,672,959.91; the second largest including bonds already sold for school purposes, is for schools, $3,395,224.78, of which about $100,000 must be used for bond projects.

Department Allocations.

Other department allocations are: Bridges, $1,518,840.57, including bonds; water, $1,237,904.15; mayor, $10,935; council, $21,900; city clerk, $41,980; law, $33,030; comptroller, $29,820; purchasing agent, $12,600; garage, $274,074; treasurer, $1,724; tax collector, $15,680; planning commission, $9,250; tax assessors, $60,130; marshal, $21,500; weights and measures, $2,030; city hall, $856,054.18, including bonds for a new city hall; telephones, $11,000; pensions, $224,700.83; police, $905,400; fire, $786,675; auditorium-armory, $38,848; building inspector, $18,760; recorders' courts, $10,100; insurance, $10,000; health, $116,954.75; dairy and farm; $28,987.50; sanitary, $459,885.40; sewers, $337,135.06; Grady hospital, $501,510.07; contagious disease hospital, $40,144; Battle Hill sanitarium, $132,292.25; chief of construction, $78,420; streets, $685,833.53; street improvement collector, $177,265.83; prison, $60,020; electricity, $260,875; charities and relief, $51,250; charities and institutions, $63,700; Georgia Tech, $50,000; library, $117,387; contingent, $59,087; parks, $316,285; cemeteries, $22,414.97; trust funds, $188,750.

Park improvements include $20,000 for a bath house at Mozley park; $10,000 for Candler park; $20,000 for the smaller parks of the city; $7,000 for Grant park and $7,000 for Piedmont park; $15,000 for operation of playgrounds; $16,000 for swimming pools, and $20,000 for golf links.

Candler field will get $20,000 to pay for lighting equipment; $10,000 for fertilizing and sodding the field and $10,000 for maintenance if the sheet is passed.

Institutions Aided.

The following institutions will receive the following appropriations if council and the mayor approve the sheet:

SLAYER OF GIRL STILL AT LARGE

as cleverly as did William Edward Hickman after the murder of Marian Parker in Los Angeles. Hickman slipped through a hunt covering all of southern California, made his way north to Seattle, Wash., and then retraced his path to Portland, from where he traveled east. He was captured at Pendleton, Ore.

Governor Green tonight entered the investigation of the slaying. He conferred with Sheriff Frank A. Green and Casar I. Scavarda, chief of police. He told the officers the reputation of Michigan was at stake. Green added $1,000 to the $3,000 rewards already offered by the state and county.

Parents See Body.

Examination of the girl's mutilated body indicated that the murderer apparently was suffering from a definite type of sexual dementia.

Dorothy's mother, 24 years old, accompanied her husband, Leslie Schneider, factory worker, to view the body of their daughter today. A short funeral services will be held Monday at an undertaking parlor.

Police today arrested a man living near Mount Morris when he was found changing the tires of his somewhat ancient sedan. The tire tracks of the machine used by the murderer left clear tracks of a combination of diamond studded and other types of tires. He was released, however, when identification failed.

A Wisconsin man brought from East Tawas, Mich., yesterday as a suspect, was released today.

The mysterious driver of a sedan whose furtive movements aroused attention in Saginaw yesterday, had not yet been found. He was said to have corresponded approximately in appearance with the murderer and the number of his license indicate an automobile registered in Flint. The police of Toledo also were holding a suspect, Frank Green, Genesee sheriff, was informed.

Detroit homicide officers assisting local forces questioned a Lapeer, Mich., man previously found guilty of statutory crimes. They were to bring him here for possible identification by Lacon.

BUFFALO POLICE HOLD DOCTOR AS SUSPECT.

Buffalo, N. Y., January 14.—(AP)—Although Dr. Clinton C. Furniss, of Waverly, N. Y., still was at detective headquarters here tonight, the police said they were virtually convinced that he does not answer the description of a suspect wanted in connection with the murder of Dorothy Schneider, of Flint, Mich. Police expected to release him within a few hours.

Dr. Furniss was taken to police headquarters by a member of the detective force who thought he resembled the suspect. The physician said he had been in several towns and cities in the vicinity of Detroit, looking for a place to establish a practice and recently had returned to Buffalo by way of Toledo.

The details of his movements during the past few weeks, as furnished by the physician, were confirmed by police investigation. A fraternal order of which the physician is a member furnished additional facts to establish his reputable standing.

POLICE PUSH HUNT SECRETLY.

Flint, Mich., January 14.—(AP)—Due to the frame of mind of citizens, stirred to a high pitch by the kidnaping and slaying of five-year-old Dorothy Schneider near Mt. Morris, police tonight decided against giving out further information regarding the progress of the search for the slayer.

One man was severely beaten here today by fellow workers of Leslie Schneider, father of the slain child, when in discussing the case, he is said to have made a remark which angered his attackers.

Stone, Webster Will Redouble Georgia Work

Americus, Ga., January 14.—Stone & Webster interests are preparing to redouble their development program in southwest Georgia during 1928, according to A. T. Roberts, public relations director for the company, who addressed the Americus Kiwanis club here this week. Speaking in an optimistic vein, Roberts declared that an increased and unprecedented demand exists for ready-to-go farms in this section. During the past year de declared that more than 50 families had been located upon such farms in Tift county and that at least 100 other families had been turned away there because of the lack of "ready-to-go" farms for them to occupy. Roberts told Americus Kiwanians that if Sumter county really wants to attract new residents here that the highways must be beautified and "ready-to-go" farms provided as part of a county-wide development scheme. He said that the Stone & Webster interests regard southwest Georgia today as being at least one year and a half ahead of what those interests expected when they first came into this section about a year ago.

BOY DISCOVERED ASLEEP ON YACHT HELD IN THEFTS

Savannah, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—Edward McMillian, 14 years old, who says his home is in Ashland, Ohio, was arrested this morning, asleep on the private yacht of M. O. Dunning, collector of the port of Savannah. The yacht had been looted of food and valuables. The boy admitted having gone aboard the yacht with another lad who he said had disappeared.

A gold watch was among the things stolen from the boat. The police are looking for the watch and the other boy.

BALDWIN COUNTY NEGRO TO FACE MURDER TRIAL

Milledgeville, Ga., January 14.—The grand jury of Baldwin superior court is having a busy week here, a number of indictments having already been returned. The court convened Monday morning for its regular two weeks term, Judge James B. Park, of Greensboro, presiding.

E. E. Bass, one of Milledgeville's best known business men, and recently a candidate for mayor, is foreman of the grand jury.

W. L. Ritchie is secretary and W. R. Stiles is bailiff of the grand jury.

The first week was devoted to the civil docket, which was rather light. The court will reconvene Monday, January 16, at which time the heavy criminal docket will be taken up. Only one murder case, that of a negro charged with killing his wife, is to be tried. Indictments for violation of liquor laws and other criminal matters are heavy.

Eats Big Steak and Fried Onions-No Gas

"Every time I would eat something I felt just terrible. Gas from the stomach pressed on my heart. I couldn't get any rest at night. Nothing I used gave me even a little relief. But Adlerika was advised and I tried it. The very first dose removed the gas and relieved the pain over night. The good it has done me is almost unbelievable. Now I eat fried pork, beefsteak and fried onions—in fact, anything. I am not nervous any more and I can work fine. Adlerika has made me peppy and happy."—Mrs. James Julian.

As gently and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing quick relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of just a FEW weeks with Adlerika often brings great permanent improvement in cases of so-called stomach trouble.

What Doctors Say

Dr. H. Louis Shoub, New York, states: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, tends to check the growth of intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's experience, says: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, Adlerika has no equal."

J. E. Puckett writes: "After using Adlerika I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated from my system."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, graduate of Heidelberg University, Germany, first perfected Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal cleanser known to science with glycerine, buckthorn, cascara and other gas-expelling and detergent elements.

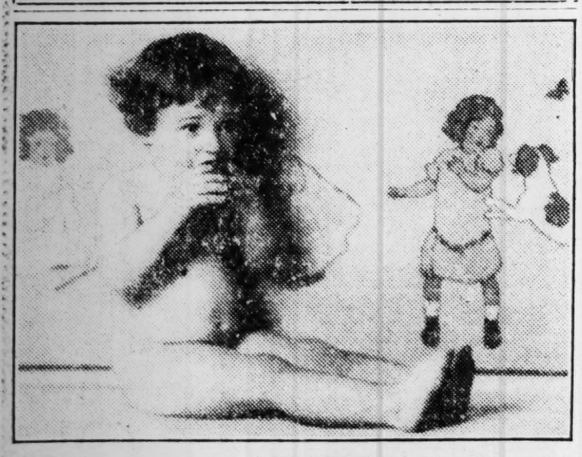

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation. Unlike most medicines it acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may bring out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation, or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's, bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies," worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

...IOUS SCHOOL BAN DENIED BY CLERGYMAN

Chapel Hill, N. C., January 14.—Dr. A. ... Hobbs, vice president of the southern conference, today issued a statement intended, he said, to clarify erroneous reports that the conference, at its last annual session in Lexington, Ky., passed a ruling that only graduates of accredited schools would be permitted to enter conference institutions.

Such a motion was made by President Sanford, Dr. Hobbs declared, but it was amended to read that a student must be a graduate of an accredited preparatory or high school or present 15 Carnegie units from such an institution or from some recognized examining board. Press dispatches from Lexington told about the introduction of the motion, but did not follow the final action, Dr. Hobbs said.

Judge Luke Ends 2 Weeks' Revival Services Tonight

Judge Roscoe Luke, of the Georgia court of appeals, will end a two weeks' revival at the Baptist Tabernacle tonight. The services have been most successful, according to the Rev. Dr. Will Houghton, pastor, and Charles Outlaw, leading member of the board of deacons.

Judge Luke has delivered scathing indictments against the trend of modern civilization towards new fangled ideas in religion, and has made eloquent appeals for a return to "the old time religion of our fathers."

The church has been filled many times during the services by the thousands who have crowded the auditorium to hear his sermons.

Judge Luke will speak this morning to the Agoga class of the Tabernacle, and Dr. Houghton will occupy the pulpit at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Scores have hit the sawdust trail as a result of the sermons which Judge Luke has preached during the course of the services, and many who formerly were not affiliated with any church have joined. Interest in the services has been city-wide on account of the prominence of the speaker and the power of his appeals.

Charles Butler, widely-known evangelical soloist and choir director, and his daughter, Miss Lillian Butler, noted pianist, have had charge of the music.

JUDGE SUGGESTS RAISING TURKEYS TO CUT RUM CROP

More prosperous conditions among residents of mountain sections of Georgia caused a marked improvement in enforcement of the prohibition act during 1927, according to Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley.

Judge Sibley said that whisky generally is made by farmers in remote sections because they are pressed, and that if the mountaineers in the remote sections of north Georgia would emulate their brothers in Tennessee by raising turkeys for the market, they would earn a living without breaking the law. Turkeys are able to find a living on mountain land unsuitable for crops, he said.

School Bell Beckons Georgia Newspaper People to Macon

:: PRESS INSTITUTE WILL BE HELD FEBRUARY 15-18 ::

BY HAL M. STANLEY.
Corresponding Secretary, Georgia Press Association.

Editorial sanctums in Georgia will be minus their masters February 15-18, as newspaper folk from every quarter of the state answer the almost forgotten summons of the school bell, and occupy their desks at the Georgia Press Institute at Macon.

The institute is unique in operation, in that editors will actually become students and follow a carefully planned course of study during the brief term, and its teachers and speakers, notably David Lawrence, one of the foremost politically observers in the country, are among the leading journalists of the time.

Mr. Lawrence, who will address the institute Friday evening, February 17, is editor of the United States Daily, a Washington paper that records all government activities without editorial comment, and is president of the Consolidated Press association. His political analysis are conceded to be authoritative and accurate, and command nation-wide attention. He will be introduced by John Paschall, managing editor of The Atlanta Journal.

Schoolroom Atmosphere Sustained.

To sustain the schoolroom atmosphere throughout the sessions, the committee promises that roll calls will be made each morning, and records will be kept on attendance, punctuality, deportment, scholarship and other scholastic virtues. Exemplary students will be rewarded with prizes at the end of the session.

The idea is to get away from the routine of most such institutes, and by making the classes interesting as well as instructive to make the period one of genuine value to the editors who will desert their presses in order to bring publishing methods up to date.

Just as doctors and lawyers must keep abreast of developments in their particular fields, editors must refresh their knowledge of the journalistic practice, in the opinion of those who have fostered the institute, and this purpose was uppermost when the plans were perfected.

Addresses and round table discussions will occupy the afternoon sessions, while the morning will be devoted to classroom work along the lines followed in modern schools of journalism. Open forum discussions will be another feature.

100 To Register.

More than 100 editors have signified their intentions of registering for the course. Quarters will be furnished free, at Mercer university for the men and at Wesleyan college for the women, while meals will be offered at students rates in the college cafes. Editors desiring information should address Hal M. Stanley, corresponding secretary of the Georgia Press association.

The institute will be opened by a dinner Wednesday evening at which welcomes will be extended by T. H. Halliburton, president of the Macon chamber of commerce; W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon Telegraph; R. L. McKenney, editor of the Macon News; Dr. W. F. Quillian, president of Wesleyan college, and Dr. A. P. Montague, of Mercer university. Response will be by Miss Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna News, and president of the Georgia Press association.

Besides Mr. Lawrence, Fuzzy Woodruff, of the Atlanta Georgian, and other prominent newspaper writers will speak before the institute.

Class Work Direction.

Direction of the class work will be under Miss Virginia Garner, head of the department of journalism of Wesleyan college, and Professor Edgar E. Folk, head of the Mercer journalism school. Assisting them will be the professors of journalism from other Georgia colleges, including Professor W. F. Melton, of Oglethorpe; Dr. S. V. Sanford and John E. Drewry, of the University of Georgia; Professor George H. Sparks, of Georgia Tech, and Professor Ray Nixon, of Emory university.

Among the special speakers on various topics of timely interest will be Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, who will discuss agriculture in Georgia; Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company; Dr. M. L. Duggan, state school superintendent, and others. Miss Garner will deliver an address on the history of journalism.

Editorial writing, reporting, feature writing, make-up, head writing, and auditing will be among the topics handled in the classroom sessions. Mark Etheridge, Ben B. Johnson and Willie Snow Etheridge, of the Macon Telegraph, will teach classes in several of the subjects enumerated.

Round Table Discussions.

Round table discussions will be led by Clem Rainey, of the Dawson News and Mrs. Nora Lawrence Smith, of the Wiregrass Farmer, Ashburn. Mr. Rainey will cover the editorial page, and Mrs. Smith will lead discussions of the country newspaper.

A debate between two prominent men of the state on every aspect of state financing will be a feature of Thursday evening's program.

Many social functions have been planned by local hosts and hostesses. The institute will close Saturday evening with a dinner-dance given by the Macon Telegraph.

The general committee in charge of the institute is as follows: John Paschall, The Atlanta Journal, chairman; Miss Emily Woodward, ex-officio member; Miss Virginia Garner, Edgar E. Folk, Hubert Dyer and Mark Etheridge.

CITY HALL LOCATION SOUGHT FOR HOTEL

A proposal to erect a 20-story hotel on the site of Atlanta's present city hall at an annual rental representing a handsome annual income to the city under a long-term agreement, has been presented to Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, it was learned Saturday. The source of the information was not divulged, but it was stated that the proposal was made by hotel authorities who are capable of carrying through any project they undertake.

The city already has received an offer of $50,000 per year for 10 years on a 50-year lease on the property with a sliding scale upward for each succeeding 10 years of the lease's duration.

"This company has asked for a 50-year to 99-year lease on the site, with the announced intention of building a mammoth hotel," the mayor said. "I am giving out this information simply to inform the public that some interest in the building site is being taken by the moneyed interests of the country."

Offices of the city hall will be moved to a new $1,000,000 structure at the corner of Washington and Mitchell streets within the next two years. Plans for the new structure are under way and will be ready within the next three months.

Atlanta-Lowry Bank To Install Airways Beacon

Atlanta's first city airways beacon, an electric ray of eight million "beam power," extending like a flaming sword far into the air and visible from 40 to 50 miles away, will be installed soon by the Atlanta and Lowry National bank upon the roof of the Trust Company of Georgia building, the Pryor street office of the bank.

The beacon lamp will be installed at the top of a steel tower 100 feet high and will have its own special electrical equipment. It will consume 900 watts of electric power, according to officials of the Ge[or]gia Power company, which has closed with the Atlanta and Lowry National bank the contracts for its erection and operation.

The brilliant beam of light will not extend directly upward, but at an angle and motor-driven apparatus will cause it to revolve at the rate of two revolutions a minute. The moving finger of light will swing slowly around the city, extending far over the outskirts. The beacon is of the type approved by the United States air mail service for lighting its transcontinental and southern routes, and is being built by the General Electric company.

"The Atlanta and Lowry National bank has watched with especial interest the rapid development in air mail and aerial transportation," said Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the bank's board of directors. "We believe that we can render a service to Atlanta and to commercial aviation by providing in the center of the city a beacon which will guide the intrepid flyers carrying mail or passengers or merchandise. The location of this great finger of light combined with the lights of Candler field, will enable the aviator to orient himself at once and leave him in no doubt as to his exact position in the air."

Appreciation by the friends of aviation of the service to be rendered by the bank was voiced by Henderson Hallman, president of the Atlanta Aeronautical association, who has been energetic in encouraging commercial aviation for Atlanta.

ANNUAL THRIFT WEEK SET BY BUILDING, LOAN

Building and loan associations of Atlanta and other sections of Georgia will cooperate in the "national thrift week" which has been designed by the United States League of Local Building and Loan associations for January 17 to 23, according to announcement by Horace Russell, executive of the state organization.

DIVERS SEARCH S-4 FOR MORE VICTIMS

Provincetown, Mass., January 14.—(AP)—Deep-sea divers, working under almost perfect weather conditions, made rapid progress today in their work of preparing the sunken submarine S-4 for unwatering operations.

The battery compartment was opened by divers for the first time. The men did not succeed in entering the room and none of the eight bodies still in the hull was found. Diver Thomas Eadie, who reached the battery room after going through the engine and control compartments, succeeded in half closing a flapper valve in the ventilating tube between the engine and batter yrooms and later another diver made it fast. It was necessary to close the valve before the unwatering work can be done.

Eadie was unable to see anything in the battery room. About 10 feet forward of the door is the largest hole torn in the submarine by the Paulding when it struck the undersea boat four weeks ago today. Altogether six divers went down to the submarine during the afternoon.

FIVE MORE WITNESSES HEARD BY BOARD.

Boston, January 14.—(United News.)—The naval board of inquiry into the S-4 disaster heard five more witnesses today, including Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumxy, commander of the control force, who has directed rescue and salvage work at the scene of the accident.

Brumby declared he wished to assume full responsibility for the rescue and salvage attempts. His testimony was confined largely to a description of the steps taken in the unsuccessful attempt to save the six men trapped in the submarine's torpedo compartment.

Bos'n Emanuel Gracie, in charge of the Wood End coast guard station, told of viewing the collision between the Paulding apd S-4 from the watchtower of his station.

About a third of the conning tower was visible when the submarine came up under the destroyer's bow, he said. The bow of the destroyer struck the S-4 just forward of the submarine's gun and the undersea craft sank immediately, the witness testified.

It was Gracie and the crew of his station who located the sunken submersible about 1,600 yards off Wood End on the night of the accident.

Others who testified briefly were Frank E. Simmonds, surfman at Wood End station; Chief Radio Electrician M. E. Rothenberg, of the diving ship Falcon, and Lieutenant Howard Wilcox, commander of the second coast guard district, at Provincetown.

WEST VIRGINIA BANK CLOSES TEMPORARILY

Mullens, W. Va., January 14.—(AP) The First National Bank of Mullens failed to open for business today. A notice posted on the door said: "This bank is temporarily closed by order of the board of directors on account of depleted reserves. An earnest effort is being made to refinance."

WHEN BACK HURTS FLUSH OUT KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—(adv.)

Questions To Put More Stress on Character and Experience Than Mental Ability.

LOWMAN TO PROBE STATUS IN GOTHAM

Charged That Much Liquor Is Being Smuggled Through Port for Benefit of Wealthy.

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—The United States civil service commission probably will act soon to prevent a shortage of prohibition agents under the new civil service law.

Officials said today that the commission would give a new examination to some of the 15,000 to 20,000 applicants for 2,000 jobs if the examinations now being completed do not produce enforcement officers of sufficient mentality to satisfy Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran. Doran said he expected a second examination to be given which would lay more emphasis on character and experience and less on mental agility.

The examinations, not yet completed, have produced 4,000 passing grades, but 1,500 of the present 2,000 agents have "flunked." That brought to Doran the problem of directing an almost entirely new force at the great enforcement task.

Doran Is Dissatisfied.

Doran expressed dissatisfaction. Only one of 40 of the successful candidates, he said, was of the type needed for raids, purchase of evidence in speakeasies and the other duties of a prohibition agent.

Commissioner Deming of the civil service body upholds the tests given as "a series of simple, practical questions applicable to the work they have to do," and not involving "book-learning." Deming gave out a copy of the questions asked to prove his assertion that the test was not difficult.

Officials said that it was the practice of the commission to hold new examinations if the first fails to produce satisfactory candidates. The commission was understood to be considering a plan to make the expected second test easier for practical agents of the type requested by Doran.

LOWMAN TO PROBE GOTHAM CONDITIONS.

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Assistant Secretary Lowman left tonight for New York to make a personal investigation of custom conditions.

His trip is the result of charges by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, that liquor is being smuggled through the port for the benefit of wealthy New Yorkers. While admitting that some liquor may have leaked in because of the small force of customs agents, the assistant treasury secretary was inclined to discount the statement that wholesale smuggling was in progress.

LEAGUE LEADER FEARS WET DOMINANCE.

Baltimore, January 14.—(AP)—George W. Crabbe, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon league, today warned dry forces of Maryland that there was danger in the event a wet man be elected president that he might "pack" the United States supreme court in such manner as to nullify national enforcement of the Volstead act.

Crabbe also asserted that no friend of the dry movement would ever entrust to Governor Ritchie the evolvement of a policy of enforcement for the state if congress ever consents to modification along lines of state rights.

ADDITIONAL ARRESTS EXPECTED AT MOBILE.

Mobile, Ala., January 14.—(AP)—Defendants will be picked up for some time to come by federal officers in connection with the liquor "clean up" which reached a climax yesterday in a series of raids of the city.

A few arrests were reported today, but it was said that a number are still being sought on warrants. Some individuals named in informations evidently got information that the raids were being conducted and they are in hiding.

JUDGE UPHOLDS CAFETERIA MEALS IN HIGH SCHOOL

Gulfport, Miss., January 14.—(AP) Regulation in Biloxi high school requiring pupils to partake of the noon luncheon at the school cafeteria or in their homes was upheld here late today when Chancellor V. A. Griffith dismissed a petition filed by Mrs. Hart Chinn, of Biloxi, asking a mandatory injunction to restrain school officials from enforcing the rule.

Mrs. Chinn, in the petition, also sought reinstatement of her daughter, Vera Bond, a senior, who was suspended from school for alleged violation of the rule.

WINTRY BLASTS END HEAT WAVE IN MIDDLE WEST

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—Roaring out of the Canadian northwest, a cold wave tonight sent one of the longest warm spells in January's history scurrying before its path in the middle and northwest.

In contrast to the autumn-like temperatures that prevailed today in these regions, near zero temperatures and snow are forecast by the federal weather bureau for Monday. At Grand Forks, N. D., the long warm spell was shattered tonight by 12 below zero weather.

The line of rapidly descending temperatures tonight extended southward into Kansas and eastward to Lake Michigan.

Smith and Hoover Leading in Races For Nominations

Plenty of Trouble Ahead for Each, However, Before Convention Victory Can Be Won.

NO ONE SELECTED TO OPPOSE SMITH

Governor's Opponents May Hold Him in Check While They Trade Out Compromise Candidate.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—Both parties, each with a dominant candidate far out in the lead, are now headed down the stretch in their internal pre-convention battles.

The republicans will bring theirs to a finish at Kansas City June 12; the democrats at Houston, Texas, June 21. Hoover is out in front in the republican field and Smith in the democratic, with some possibility of both running into trouble.

Activity of the democrats here has diverted attention from the republican situation, but so far as has appeared on the surface there has been no change.

Lowden's Friends Active.

Lowden's friends are active in Michigan and in the Dakotas especially. Senator Curtis, of Kansas, has permitted friends in New York to start activities for him. Hoover's friends also are preparing to start volunteer action in New York, which state and Pennsylvania represent his weakest spots, psychologically.

The impression has gone out that New York "big business interests" and the Mellon interest in Pennsylvania are against Hoover. Nobody has publicly spoken who is in a position to act for either. But despite the persistent rumors, there is a feeling that eventually Mellon will be found with Hoover.

Wall street is reported to be against Hoover, but Nathan L. Miller, general counsel for the United States Steel corporation, is working for him. That is getting fairly close to Wall street. There is a strong suspicion here that the reports of Wall street's opposition to Hoover are encouraged by Charles D. Hilles, New York national commiteeman, who is in the uncomfortable position of having tried to ride over Hoover and Lowden sentiment in New York state.

Dawes Wins Supporters.

Dawes continues to be the hope of many anti-Hoover men but so long as Lowden is a candidate, Dawes is pocketed. His chance still lies in a possible deadlock.

Senator Willis is having trouble in Ohio due to the desire of Senator Fess and Walter F. Brown, assistant secretary of commerce, to get second choice pledges for Hoover. Willis is opposed to it, feeling that it would make him a transparent stalking horse.

Senator Watson is expected to declare in Indiana, which would create difficulties for Lowden's friends, who expected to get the delegation for him. Lowden is averse to going into states where there are favorite sons.

Democrats talked it all over here this week and failed to bring out a real candidate to oppose Smith. The opposition will be centered largely in favorite sons and uninstructed delegates.

Their only chance now is in being able to hold Smith in check while they trade it out at the convention and run up a compromise candidate.

Opposition Without Leader.

The main difficulty is that no candidate wishes to lead the opposition to Smith, realizing that when the deadlock came, he would have to step out for a compromise, as Smith and McAdoo did last time.

Plenty of opposition to Smith exists but it is bewildered, whereas the Smith forces know just where they are going. The south is somewhat placated by the selection of Houston, Texas, as the convention city.

A southerner is almost certain to be named as vice presidential candidate. So, having no outstanding candidate to

J. P. ALLEN AND CO. OPEN IMPRESSIVE NEW HOME MONDAY

Beautiful Building, on Historic Site, Represents "Last Word" in Modern Store Structures.

A golden key will be turned in the lock of an impressive new building, at the northeast corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, and the first visitors will be welcomed into the "last word" in modern shops—the new specialty store of J. P. Allen & Co.

For many years "Allen's" has stood for high quality, for good taste and for the most advanced styles in those myriad things that women and children wear. The old store on Whitehall street has been a synonym for "class." Its business has increased steadily; it long since outgrew its old quarters. And since the announcement more than a year ago that "Allen's" would be housed in a new and modern home on Peachtree street its thousands of friendly patrons have looked forward to the day when they might choose gowns and hats and lingerie in their new surroundings.

The fortunate few whose errands opened for them the doors of the new Allen's have emerged from the building to declare that Atlanta has an additional institution of which she can be justly proud; a store which home folks can exhibit to out-of-town visitors as the equal of any shop on Fifth avenue or Bond street or the Rue de la Paix. Here is a store which must have cost many, many thousands of dollars beyond the price of land and walls, a store whose fittings have meant spending with prodigal hand—and yet a store equipped with such exquisite taste that one exclaims at its beauty rather than its expense. It does not shout of money, but it whispers of culture.

Visitor at Ease.

In every detail of appointment it invites one to rest and to be at ease. Its atmosphere is distinctive. In spite of its ample space, there is an intimate touch, for there are shops within shops, and the floor space is broken by tall and handsome display cases into alcoves of lesser dimensions. And everywhere there is an unspoken invitation to take one's time, in the form of beautifully designed chairs and lounges. There are thick carpets of neutral tone which deaden the sound of hurrying feet, cozy nooks where one may discuss at leisure a puzzling problem of choosing between two gowns. And for those who would while away an hour while waiting for a friend, there is an inviting space on the mezzanine floor where she may sit in comfort and watch the shoppers on the wide main floor below.

There will be little set ceremony in the formal opening of Allen's Monday. The golden key will be turned by Mrs. J. Carroll Payne, whose girlhood home stood on the corner in those halcyon days when Peachtree was distinctly the first residence street of the south, when business had not encroached beyond the old church—the church which gave place more than 20 years ago to the Candler building. There will be music by a concert orchestra all day and through the evening, and the souvenir for guests will be a handsome directory of the store, published for the occasion. The store will be open until 5 o'clock in the afternoon and will be reopened at 8 o'clock in the evening, to receive visitors until 10 o'clock. Members of the Junior League, that most representative organization of young matrons and misses of social prominence, will act as hostesses throughout the day.

Radio Broadcast Tonight.

As an advance announcement of the opening and one which will reach throughout the wide territory served by Atlanta shops, Mr. Allen and his associates have arranged for a special radio program to be broadcast at 9:15 this evening over WSB.

"Open for business" will be the policy of Allen's on its opening day. Visitors may choose and purchase what they like, for every bit of merchandise will be in place, it is announced. The old store closed its doors Thursday at the end of the business day. It had

STATE LEADERS OF DEMOCRACY MEET JAN. 21

Call for Gathering of Georgia Executive Committee Is Issued by Chairman G. E. Maddox.

STATE TO SUPPORT GEORGE, HE CLAIMS

Maddox Delighted To Notice "High Regard and Esteem of All Party Leaders for Senator."

Calling the state democratic executive committee to meet in Atlanta at 11 o'clock on Saturday, January 21, Chairman G. E. Maddox, of that body, issued a statement Saturday in which he declared that the people of Georgia should and will back United States Senator Walter F. George for the democratic nomination for the presidency.

Chiarman Maddox returned to Atlanta Saturday from Washington, where he attended the meeting of the national democratic executive committee and the Jackson day dinner and he stated that the candidacy of Senator George for the democratic nomination has met with wide favor among some of the leaders of the democratic party.

Selection of Houston, Texas, a southern city, as a place of meeting for the democratic convention in June, "forecasts the possibility" that a southern man may ultimately be the nominee of the party, according to Chairman Maddox.

If Georgia backs Senator George unanimously for the democratic nomination for the presidency there will be a year of political harmony in the state, in the opinion of Chairman Maddox.

State Delegation Plans.

The meeting of the committee called for Saturday is for the purpose of preparing plans for the selection of a state delegation to the national convention and to give any other candidate who may desire to run for the nomination in Georgia, an opportunity to enter the race.

Chairman Maddox's statement is as follows:

"I went to Washington a week ago with the idea that the democratic nomination for president was practically settled.

"After attending the meeting of the national democratic executive committee and the Jackson day dinner and hearing expressions of their views from people of every section of the country, I am convinced that it is far from being settled and that no one can accurately forecast the decision of the democratic convention, which

HOTLY CONTESTED PRIMARY IS SEEN IN FULTON COUNTY

Treasury and Commission Candidates Indicate Warm Political Battles Before March 7.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Fulton county's political pot, simmering for the past several weeks, Saturday began to boil vigorously as several candidates in the county primary of March 7, actively took the field in the interest of their respective races.

One of the hardest fought and most closely contested primaries in the last decade looms, according to political nestors, who Saturday pointed to the early entrance of candidates as a barometer of the interest which it is expected will be shown before more than two score candidates close their campaigns on the eve of the voting.

$2,850 Paid In.

Saturday was a profitable day for the county democratic treasurer, who declared that candidates already have paid in $2,850 to date, with less than a fourth of the expected entries in the ring.

Every position in the Fulton county courthouse must be filled with the exception of judges of superior and juvenile courts and the solicitor general. These will be filled in the state primary to be held this fall. With the lid off the pot because of the election last Thursday of Dr. William Gilbert to fill the position of the late Charles G. Turner, a grand rush of aspirants for county jobs was predicted.

Formal anouncements already have been made of half a score of candidates, and prospects Saturday were that many others will follow this week.

County Commission.

Probably the most sought after post in the county government will be three vacancies which will occur on Fulton county commission. Terms of Walter B. Stewart and Captain George M. Hope expire, and Edwin F. Johnson will relinquish his position on the commission to enter the race for Fulton county tax receiver.

Mr. Stewart has anounced his candidacy for reelection and Captain Hope also will enter, his friends say.

Edward H. Inman, prominent Atlantan, has paid his entrance fee in the race for commissioner, and it is expected that Arthur Brooke, president

COOLIDGE BOARDS WARSHIP FOR HAVANA THIS MORNING ON MISSION OF GOOD WILL

Attorney Reveals Plot

WENT TO DEATH BELIEVING SHE WOULD RETURN

To Revive Ruth Snyder

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—Ruth Snyder walked to the electric chair with the belief that, an hour later, she would secretly be brought back to life, Joseph Lonardo, one of her attorneys, said tonight.

Telling one of the most fantastic stories in the history of crime, Lonardo described a scheme by which he said he had hoped to take the limp, lifeless form of the murderess from Sing Sing prison, hurry it to a surgeon who was waiting secretly a mile outside the prison walls, and bring it back to life by a heart injection of adrenalin chlorine.

Lonardo's scheme, if he actually conceived it, was generally scoffed at by medical authorities, who believed revisitation would have been impossible.

Lonardo explained that the plan to bring Mrs. Snyder back to life was the reason her attorneys, at the last moment, served upon Warden Lewis E. Lawes a court order demanding that the body of Mrs. Snyder be turned over to her relatives intact, without any surgical incisions that would affect her vital organs.

The scheme was balked, he said, when Warden Lawes referred the order to Attorney General Ottinger's office for a legal opinion. The attorney general denied the validity of the order, and the autopsy was carried out.

Lonardo said Mrs. Snyder was dubious of the plan's possibilities. "That chair kills you quick," he quoted her as saying.

Later, however, Mrs. Snyder gained hope that she might be delivered from death, the attorney said.

"She walked to the chair in the belief that there was a chance to be revived after a few minutes of oblivion," he said.

HICKMAN STYLED 'SANE MONSTER'

Famous Alienist Finds No Trace of Insanity in Killer—Threatens To Commit Suicide.

Los Angeles, January 14.—(United News.) — William Edward Hickman told pyschiatrists who examined him in his cell today that he would kill himself if the state did not execute him for the murder of Marion Parker.

"I would rather get it over with in a scientific way by having the state hang me," he said. "But if I am not sentenced to hang, I'll kill myself." Precautions to prevent Hickman from killing himself before his trial were increased because of his statement.

The suicide threat was revealed after Dr. Cecil Reynolds, internationally-known alienist, had declared Hickman a "soulless monster," but absolutely sane.

"One of Sanest in World."

"He is one of the sanest men in the world today," Dr. Reynolds said.

Hickman's statement was made with the same swaggering air of bravado that has marked his attitude much of the time he has been in jail here.

He expressed a desire that his "genius" be carefully studied before he died, so that the result of a scientific examination of him could be useful to prevent crime.

"There are many dangerous and criminal tendencies in my makeup," Hickman said. "I have been a stick-up man, a forger and finally a kidnaper and murderer.

Realizes His Condition.

"I know I am not altogether right. I want them to examine me carefully to find out what led me into a life of crime."

He also expressed the opinion that if he is hanged for the murder of the 12-year-old daughter of Perry M. Parker, Los Angeles banker, he would be a "martyr to a great cause."

Jailers, who, with psychiatrists, listened to his words, expressed the belief he was trying to convince his listeners he was insane.

Already those who watch over him in the jail have reported that Hickman acted like a normal person when he did not know he was observed. But when he was certain his actions were being noted, he feigned the conduct of an insane person.

Prides Himself of Rhetoric.

In talking to his questioners today about his "genius," as a criminal, Hickman used rhetoric that might well have been taken from one of his speeches as a high school debater in Kansas City. Hickman seemed to pride himself on his command of English and used flowery adjectives liberally.

The statement of Dr. Reynolds, whose work as an alienist for the British government gained international distinction, was called an important victory by assistants in the

COUNCIL TO ENTER NEW DEPOT FIGHT

McCutcheon To Present Resolution Asking Public Service Commission To Demand Replacement

City council will enter actively into the move for a new Union station Monday, when it will consider a resolution to be offered by Councilman Howard C. McCuthcheon, of the second ward, asking that the Georgia public service commission force railroads operating through the terminal to replace the present structure with a new and modern one.

Mr. McCutcheon made his announcement Saturday, declaring that he will have the support of several delegations in the move to place council on record regarding the matter before the opening of the hearing Tuesday, when railroad chiefs will show cause why they should not construct a new terminal.

At that time, members of the Georgia public service commission will sit as judges at the hearing, which was set by order of James A. Perry, chairman.

The roads will ask for from 60 to 90 days in which to perfect plans which they declare are now in an embryonic state, but which, they say, will satisfy every citizen of Atlanta.

Position of Railroads.

Executives have announced that the railways have no intention of permitting the present condition to exist any longer than is absolutely necessary. They point out that it is impracticable to attempt to replace the old station with viaduct construction in its present state, but promise that action will be taken as soon as possible.

Mr. McCutcheon will not ask that anything unreasonable be begun, but will insist that the city go on record officially so that its influence will be present at the hearing Tuesday.

A special committee, headed by Mell R. Wilkinson, will represent the city. It was appointed by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and, in addition to Mr. Wilkinson, is composed of Bolling H. Jones, J. Sid Tiller, Milton Dargan, Jr., and Robert Maddox. City Attorney James L. Mayson also will attend at the instance of the mayor.

The hearing Tuesday will be for the purpose of asking the railroads to acquaint the commission with the plans of the roads and after that a reasonable time will be allowed to perfect them, it was said.

"The intent of the rule is that you shall as far as practicable acquaint the commission concerning improved depot facilities at the Atlanta Union station, and if a new station is decided upon, approximately, when actual work will begin," James A. Perry, chairman of the commission, stated in a letter to J. B. Hill, president of the railroad.

Cop Is Named.

Montezuma, Ga., January 14.—At the last meeting of the mayor and council John H. Hill, of Spaulding, was named policeman to succeed Hoke Windham, who resigned to accept a position as night policeman in Reynolds. It was decided at this meeting that children must not skate on the streets because of the danger of so many passing automobiles.

U. S. DELEGATION STANDS SQUARELY FOR COMMON GOOD

Will Claim No Special Privileges and Does Not Desire To Impose Selfish Aims.

KEY WEST REACHED ON SCHEDULE TIME

President and Party Are Given Big Welcome During Automobile Tour Through Miami.

Key West, Fla., January 14.—(AP) President Coolidge's special train arrived in Key West at 10:10 p. m., 20 minutes ahead of schedule, having made up 30 minutes after leaving Miami.

The president was asleep. He retired soon after 9 o'clock. A company of marines was placed on guard around the side-tracked special train.

Tomorrow Coolidge will board the Texas, or, if the weather is rough, the cruiser Memphis, for the crossing to Havana.

President Coolidge arrived in Miami on scredule time this afternoon aboard his special train en route to Havana, to be greeted by the largest turnout that has seen him on any of his recent trips.

Train Delayed by Crowd.

The presidential party, somewhat retarded by the large crowd, left 10 minutes late after an automobile tour of the city and Miami Beach.

The throng lined practically every yard of the ten-mile parade route, which led through the business district, across Biscayne Bay to Miami Beach, over one causeway and back over another, to return to the railroad station through the business district. Scattered as the crowd was it was impossible to make even an approximation of its numbers. Guesses ranged from 100,000 upward.

The procession was halted in the middle of the county causeway on the return trip by an importunate tug, with a derrick barge in tow, which held up the drawbridge.

Ship Whistles Shriek.

Steamships in the harbor kept up a constant din of whistles as the parade filed past the docks. The presidential salute was given with bombs dropped from airplanes circling overhead.

Mrs. Coolidge leaned slightly on her husband's arm as they stood on the observation platform, waving goodbye to Miami while the train pulled out on its way to Key West. The first lady's smile was ever-present during the hour and ten-minutes stay here. President Coolidge was as usual grave.

The weather man trotted out his best wares for the presidential visit. There was barely enough breeze from the northeast to take the sting out of the bright sunshine that otherwise might have been irksome to the visitors, accustomed to a different sort of January weather.

Seek Spirit of Good Will.

The American delegation to the Havana Pan-American congress will seek to firmly establish a spirit of good will in which to solve common problems of the new world, free from all suspicion of aggressiveness and dictation.

It was made clear on the special train tonight that the American delegation will stand squarely on the policy which the Washington government has professed for many years, claiming no special privileges and undesirous of imposing any selfish aims.

After a conference with President Coolidge on the special train, Charles Evans Hughes, of the American delegation, expressed his good will toward the Mexican people and declared that recent developments in Mexico have pointed the way to a satisfactory solution of the question at issue between that country and the United States.

DELEGATES TO MAINTAIN STRICT NEUTRALITY.

Bogota, Columbia, January 14.—(AP) The newspaper El Tiempo today says that the Colombian chancellory has instructed Colombian delegates to the Pan-American conference to maintain an absolute neutrality in any discussion which may arise in the connection with the Monroe doctrine, the Nicaraguan situation or other topics considered touchy.

1928 GRAND OPERA SEATS IN DEMAND

Early Requests for Tickets Presage Greatest Season in History, Association Officials Believe.

Atlanta's 1928 season of grand opera, offered by the Metropolitan Opera company, of New York, promises to be the most popular of all the 17 seasons of grand opera held in this city, according to the many requests for tickets received by the Atlanta Music Festival association since the announcement was made a week ago that the season of grand opera here this year was practically assured.

Inquiries from many prominent people of Atlanta as well as opera lovers in various sections of the south have been received, it was announced Saturday.

General financial conditions are better this year throughout the south than they were a year ago and there is a great wave of interest in good music sweeping the entire country, state officers of the local association.

The first announcement that Atlanta would enjoy a season of opera was made recently, following a meeting of directors of the association, at which Harry M. Atkinson was unanimously reelected president of the association and Charles Howard Candler and Robert S. Parker were unanimously reelected vice president, treasurer and secretary, respectively.

So far no contract has been signed for opera in Atlanta this year, but applications for seats are coming in from many parts of the south. This is the first time during the 17 years of opera in Atlanta that requests for seats have come in so early in the year.

Following the announcement last Sunday that directors of the Music Festival Association of Atlanta had voted to negotiate with the Metropolitan company for opera this year, Mr. Candler received requests for boxes for the season from several Atlanta patrons of the opera, and also requests for seats from Mrs. Max Kuttner, Rome, Ga.; Mrs. James B. Park, Greensboro, Ga.; Mrs. C. Bainbridge Fitzpatrick, Clearwater, Fla.; Claude L. Murphree, Gainesville, Fla.; Frank H. Thompson, Lakeland, Fla., and John W. Phillips, New Orleans, La.

Mr. Phillips is a prominent wholesale druggist of New Orleans, and has been an opera patron in Atlanta ever since the Metropolitan company has been coming here.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW OPENS JANUARY 23

Most Informative and Entertaining Exhibit in South's History Assured.

Ablaze with lights, transformed by decorations, jammed to the last inch by displays and with every detail perfected for a memorable week, Atlanta's great southeastern automobile show will open its doors Monday, January 23, for what seems certain to be a red-letter event of 1928 in Dixie.

Outstanding leaders of the local automotive world, many of them just back from attending the sensationally successful New York show, are unanimous in assurng the public the most interesting, novel, informative and entertaining exhibition of its type that the city or the section has ever known.

Taft hall, the spacious lobby, the ladies' reception room, the main arena, the stage and the broad corridor under the balcony will all be adorned and illuminated in lavish fashion to supply a vivid background for the glittering new specimens of the motor car industry, many types of which have never been displayed before although prominently in the public mind for weeks.

Nineteen Makes Entered.

At least 19 famous names in the motor world, many of them in entirely new guise, will be arrayed in an almost endless variety of models and colorings. Revolutionary changes in body designs, radical new departures in engine building, innumerable new refinements, improvements and additions, modernistic paint jobs and a general revision of prices will be found on all sides.

The list of cars to be exhibited now includes Jordan, Star, Reo, Nash, Chevrolet, Dodge, Marmon, Oldsmobile, Buick, Whippet, Hupmobile, Oakland, Pontiac, Willys-Knight, Stearns-Knight, Stutz, Paige, Hudson and Essex, with by far the most comprehensive outlay of accessories, furnishings, special devices, parts and other modern incidentals ever collected south of the Mason-Dixon line.

The exposition in all its departments represents a valuation of upwards of $1,000,000 and the Atlanta Automobile association, which is sponsing the event, is justly proud of the gratifying proportions attained by the

$200 Prize Offered for Best

ONLY AMATEUR WRITERS TO COMPETE

All-Atlanta Movie Synopsis

BY ELMO HAMBY,
Scenario Contest Editor.

To all Atlantans and especially to several hundred students of English, the short story and the drama in local colleges, The Constitution and the Howard theater are offering $200 and not a little bit of local fame for the prize-winning scenario or story synopsis for an all-Atlanta movie to be produced here.

Following first announcement of the contest Saturday many calls were received from persons seeking additional information and every indication is that the contest will be attended by widespread interest.

No experience is required. If you have a story idea conforming with the rules published Saturday and which will be republished from time to time, all you need do is to set a synopsis of the story down in not more than 1,000 words and send it to the scenario contest editor of The Constitution.

All professional writers, employees of The Constitution, the Howard theater and other theaters are barred from the contest. Some Atlantan who has heretofore been strictly an amateur writer will find himself richer by $200 after the contest closes January 28 at 6 p. m.

Local judges will select the three best manuscripts submitted and telegraph them to a committee of four prominent screen stars in Hollywood who will make the final choice of the prize winner. The story will then be made into an all-Atlanta film with Atlanta talent used exclusively in the cast.

The manuscript may be either a scenario or a synopsis, with a clear, concise synopsis of 1,000 words or less preferred. A film story synopsis is an outline of the story action, while a scenario is the film developed scene by scene. Two or more of the scenes must be laid in The Constitution building and the idea will be to represent Atlanta in 1928. Some of the scenes must be laid on the Howard stage.

Write your name and address in the upper left hand corner of every sheet and send it to the Scenario Contest Editor of The Constitution.

Local Youth Offered Stage

:: FILL OUT COUPON IN TODAY'S ISSUE ::

Opportunity by Constitution

BY ELMO HAMBY,
Stage Opportunity Editor.

Stage opportunity!

Those two words in The Constitution have marked the beginning of many successful careers on stage and screen for talented Atlanta youth in the opportunities that have been offered in the past to those seeking fame in the two fields.

Plans are now under way by The Constitution for the production of what promises to be the biggest local talent stage show ever attempted here, and young men and women are needed.

A coupon, elsewhere in today's issue, is the key to the opportunity. No experience is necessary. Very often those who have never had experience at all are found to be filled with latent talent and ability which has never had an opportunity to be manifest.

It is for this reason that The Constitution has adopted a policy of extending opportunities, from time to time, to local youth, to "try-out" before famous directors, and to note their reaction to audiences by actual experience on the stage in real, bona fide productions.

Many have been started on careers in this manner, and all have found the experience profitable. In the production now being planned by The Constitution, every performer will be paid a salary for the one-week engagement at a local theater, and in addition will have the opportunity of training under the direction of a noted producer, who has devoted a great part of his life to discovering talent and making its possessor famous.

The opportunity is open to both young men and young women, and

MEXICAN GENERAL CHALLENGES TALE TOLD BY BARBER

Mexico City, January 14.—(AP)—The story of Lima F. Barber, American engineer, that he had escaped from a rebel band by killing four guards with a rum bottle, was challenged today by General Eulogio Ortiz, military commandant of the state of Mexico, who declared Barber's account as "worthy of a Hollywood scenario."

Ortiz asserts that after Barber's sensational arrival in Mexico City he started active pursuit of the band which the American said had kidnaped him three weeks earlier. The general claims to have overtaken the band and made several prisoners whose testimony did not support Barber's story,

J. P. ALLEN & CO. TO OPEN NEW HOME

disposed of virtually all its fall and winter stock, leaving little merchandise to be removed to the new home of Allen's. Beyond those staple articles which always are in season, everything will be as new as the building itself.

"Our corps of buyers in the east and abroad have been given free rein," said Mr. Allen. "They were told to buy without stint, to provide for this opening the very finest that the manufacturers could supply. It will be an early showing of spring styles, and in honor of the occasion our friends the manufacturers have promised that the first shipments of the newest lines shall come to us. I am sure that no display of spring things to wear that Atlanta has ever known could compare with ours. We are especially proud of our imported models and the replicas of the new Paris dresses and hats, which have been fashioned for us."

Store Baffles Description.

A detailed description of the new specialty store—for Allen's prefers not to be called a "department store"—is a task rather for an artist than a writer, for words hardly can do justice to its beauty and convenience. Even photographs, unless they could picture the soft tones of the interior, hardly could convey an adequate idea of this new shop. Surely the women will revel in it and make up little parties for a visit to "the new Allen's," for Allen's is first of all a shop for women.

The store building itself is of stone, with a wide frontage on Peachtree street and running far back on Cain street. It is three stories in height, with a deep basement, and on the roof is a structure devoted to needs of the store and its employees. The display windows fill both frontages and in addition to the main Peachtree door there is an entrance on Cain street, especially convenient for motoring patrons. Within a few steps are three vast parking grounds, capable of holding 1,000 cars at one time.

Perhaps the visitor Monday will pause first of all for a glimpse of the Peachtree show windows, covering the frontage and with a large "island" display case in the vestibule, filled with the most attractive of gowns and wraps. The background of these windows is built of ornamental stone; the floors are of marble, with insets of contrasting tint. This is relieved by panels of silk damask, silk velours and block prints, and on the floors are rich oriental rugs.

Main Floor Detail.

Entering the store on the main floor, there is a vista of low counters of plate glass and display cases which do not obstruct the view. Everything is of walnut, beautifully designed, beautifully executed. Here are shops within shops, each department distinct, but each leading naturally to the next. Against the walls, but not obstructing the excellent lighting from front and side windows, are displayed cases of walnut. At the right as one enters are the umbrellas, then hand bags—the most extensive display in the south, its manager says. In the center are found the displays of jewelry and gifts and novelties, most of the latter imported. There is a big department for handkerchiefs and another for sports wear. At the left of the entrance one finds gloves, and along the left side is a bewildering display of hosiery. There are perfumes and cosmetics and all those things that adorn the woman's dressing table, and toward the rear are found neckwear and shawls. The department of adjustments and information is at the back of this floor.

But after the first glimpse, one will inevitably be attracted by the throng in the wing which extends north from the main floor, near the rear. Here is a department whose location made it possible to provide a distinctly different touch. It is the "Spanish salon" for the display and fitting of shoes.

Here is perhaps the principal "beauty spot" of the new Allen's, if one department may be so singled out in a shop where beauty is encountered at every turn. There is not a shoe or a box of shoes visible, except perhaps a ball room slipper or two in a case worthy of jewels. The treatment is old Spanish. The salon is cut off from the main store by grilles of wrought iron and the electric light fittings are of the same material. There is a long bench of heavy oak, with a leather cushion, a chair or two of thick steer's hide such as may be found in the old Spanish missions of California, and double rows of curved and very comfortable seats of antique walnut and crimson velvet. Tapestries of silk, depicting Spanish scenes, are on the walls, which are of stucco in Spanish texture. The salon was designed as a unit by a famous firm which removed from Detroit to Miami and which designed the interiors of many of Coral Gables' most noted homes. The shoes are nowhere to be seen. They are kept in shelves in hidden corridors, readily accessible to the salesmen.

Mezzanine Balcony.

Of special interest and attractiveness is the mezzanine balcony which extends around two-thirds of the store at the rear. Upon the right as one enters the store is a line of private telephones upon tiny stands, alternating with spinet desks at which one may write a note at ease. At the rear the balcony widens to an ample space for a cozy rest room, with comfortable chairs and lounges, of carved walnut, with quaint lamps and mirrors, and close by is a littlte room with chaise lounge and mirrors where milady may rest if she feels faint, or add a touch of rouge or lipstick at a French dressing table. The mezzanine balcony is reached by the two great elevators or by the winding stair, which is one of the architectural masterpieces of the store.

On the balcony, too, at the left, is the beauty shop, surely the most elaborate and complete that modern ideas could command. Here is a "bobbing shop" with three chairs and a tiny automobile, mounted upon a pedestal, in which little Willie may play while his locks are being shorn. There are ten booths for hair dressing and six tables for manicuring, and every modern device, including electric hair dryers, is to be found.

"Ready-to-Wear" Department.

But the woman in search of evening gown or a suit for the street or perhaps a handsome bit of fur most probably will stroll on to the elevators and seek the second floor—the headquarters of the "ready-to-wear" which has helped to make Allen's famous. And when she emerges from the elevator she will undoubtedly pause for a look at the floor as a whole.

Here is an unbroken space of 18,000 square feet—the whole width and breadth of the building—filled with tall cases of walnut and shining glass, beautifully curved, of heights which will display Parisian gowns at full-length. Here are tall mirrors and a score of high-backed hall chairs, each worthy of a place in the finest of homes. There are big davenports and cozy nooks, with upholstery in needlepoint. If one seeks the maker's mark, it will be found that the chairs were imported from Paris.

At the front of this floor are the "French rooms," set apart for trying on the costly imported models. One is furnished in green brocade, with pink silk window drapes; another has the effect in reverse, green drapes and furniture in rose brocade. There are exquisite tables and mirrors, and the electric side lights are of silver and crystal.

Smoking Stands Everywhere.

In these rooms, as almost everywhere in the new Allen's, one will note an innovation, for a store so distinctively a haunt of women. There are smoking stands everywhere, in the dressing rooms and the rest rooms, in the nooks where a patron may sit for a few moments. They are as numerous as in a man's club.

"Women demand it these days," said one of the officials. "Not every woman smokes, of course. But they have become so accustomed to seeing other women smoke that it no longer occasions comment."

Another convenience in this great ready-to-wear department is found at the rear, toward the left. Here is the alteration room, immediately adjoining the display floor, so that the fitter may be called instantly by pressing a button wherever the customer may be. There is no waiting. Thirty-five women will be found at work in this room, which is well lighted and ventilated for their comfort.

On the Third Floor.

On the third floor are to be found the extensive stocks of negligees and robes, silk underwear and all those things which once were called "unmentionable." Here, too, is the department for boys' clothing and hats, and across the front in rooms of its own is the "baby shop," dedicated to his majesty the baby. Here are all those lovely things of pink and blue which fond mothers choose for the little folk, and here may be found furniture and fittings for the nursery. A long aisle on this floor is devoted to corselettes and brassieres, and here also is the children's and juniors' dress and coat department. Everywhere are tall glass cases, in polished walnut. All along the Cain street side of the building are fitting rooms.

Nearly half of the third floor is given over to the millinery display, the popular-priced hats nearest the elevators, the exclusive models in the French salon at the front. Here the windows facing Peachtree street are of plate glass, paneled in beveled squares, a most effective finish. There are dressing tables and many mirrors, and portieres of heavy silk damask hide the customer from the shoppers outside the salon.

On this floor, too, are the main offices, close to the elevators and easy of access. Here is Mr. Allen's private office; in American walnut, and the offices of the credit department, with a complete private branch telephone exchange close by.

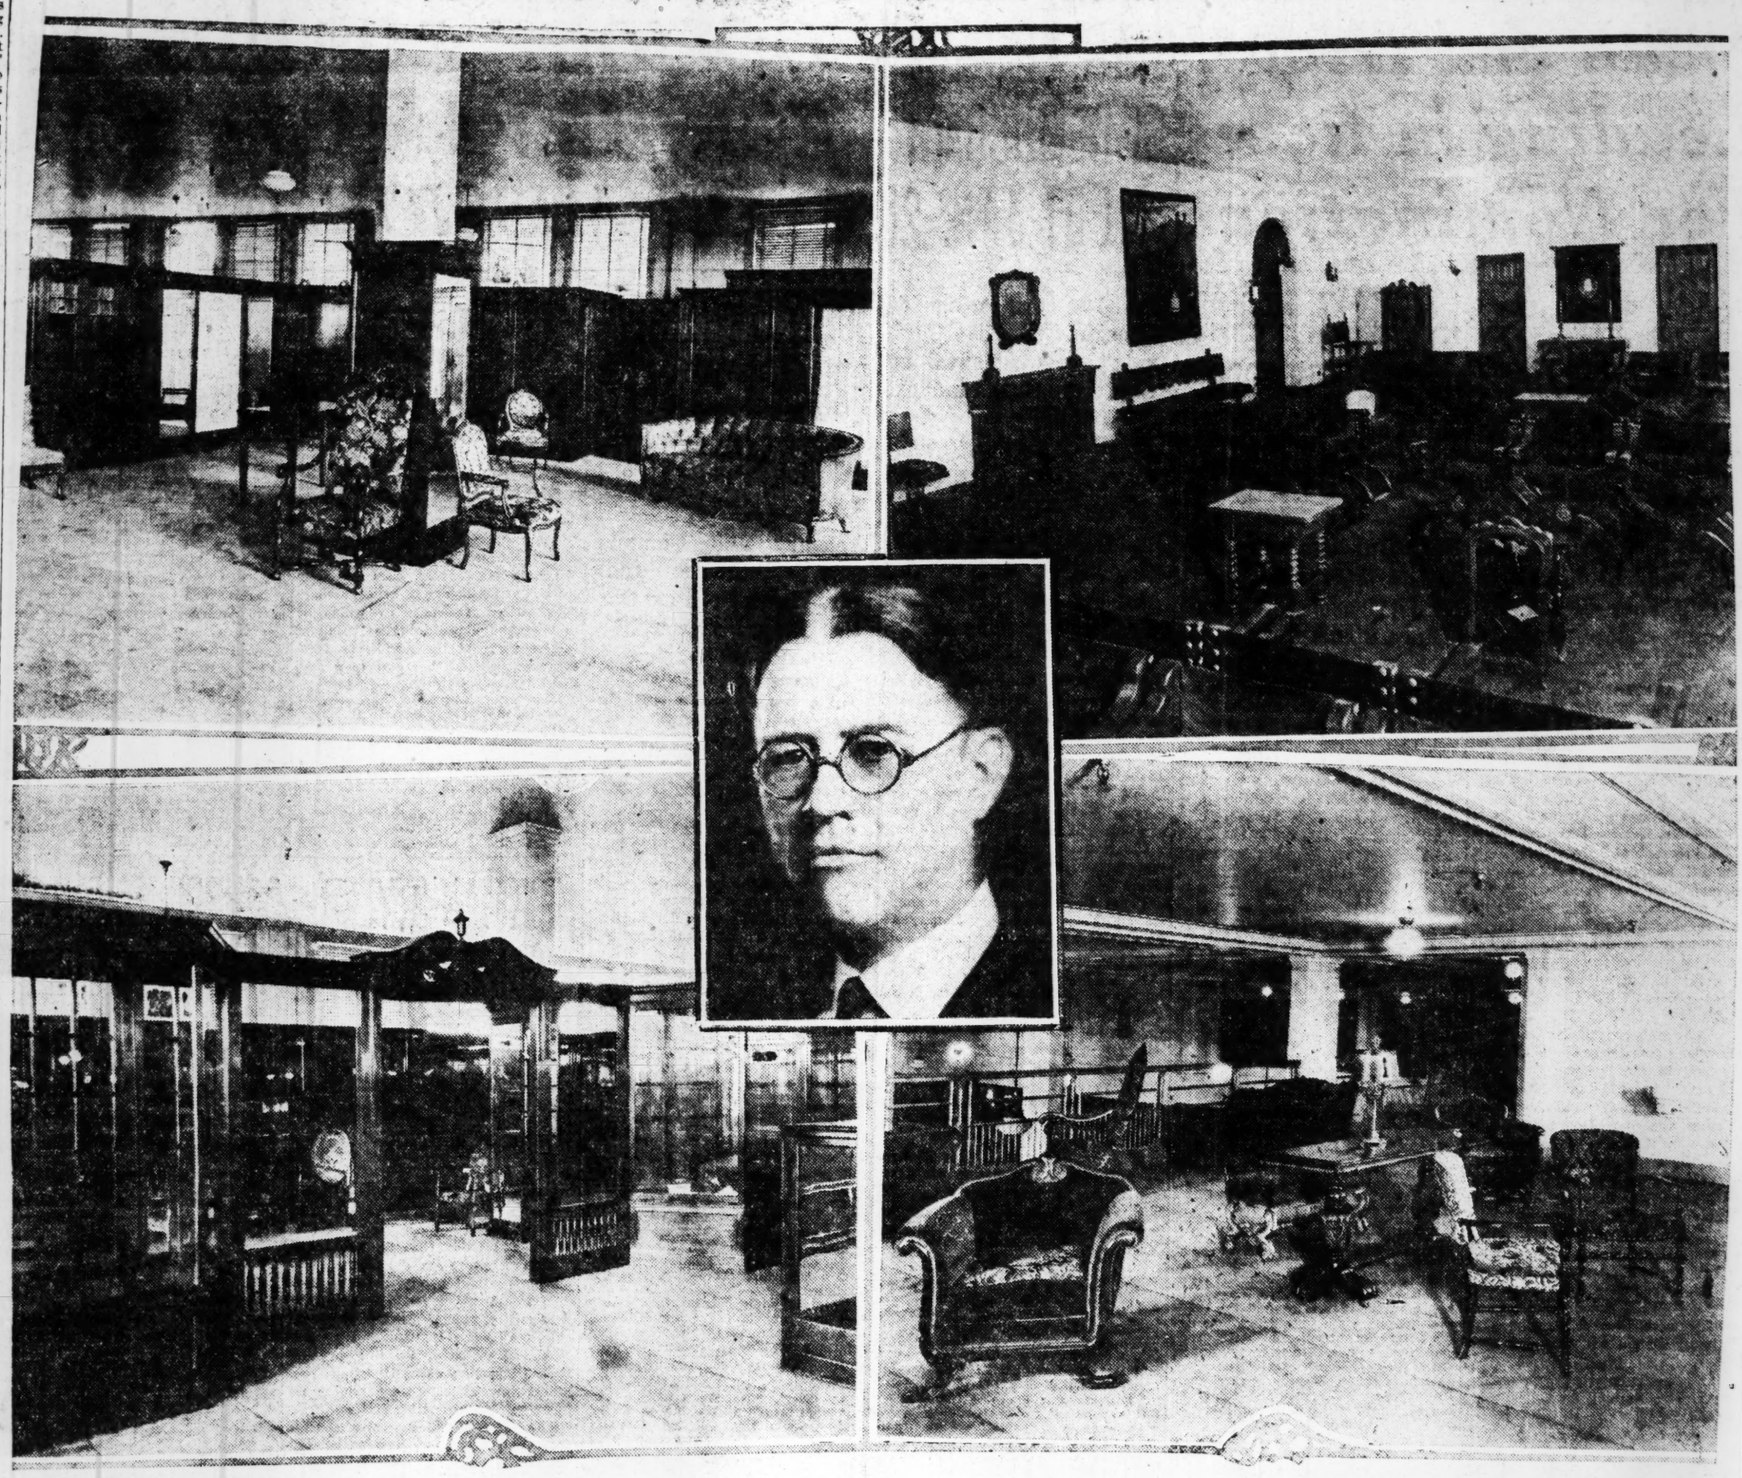

Employees' Tea Room.

On the roof of the store, in a structure which also houses the elevator machinery and electrical equipment, is a large tea room for the exclusive use of the store employees. It has a complete kitchen adjoining, and here the saleswomen and others of the big staff are provided meals at absolute cost. There is a hospital room close by, in case of illness among the employees, and a comfortable room where they may rest when not immediately on duty.

Customers of Allen's will not find it necessary to visit the basement, which is given over entirely to receiving and marking merchandise, to employees' cloak rooms, a shipping department, and the largest and most modern cold storage room for furs ever installed in the south, it is said. Southerners are learning to protect valuable furs by cold storage through the summers, and the vaults at the old Allen store have been filled to capacity for several years. The new department will provide a great deal more room.

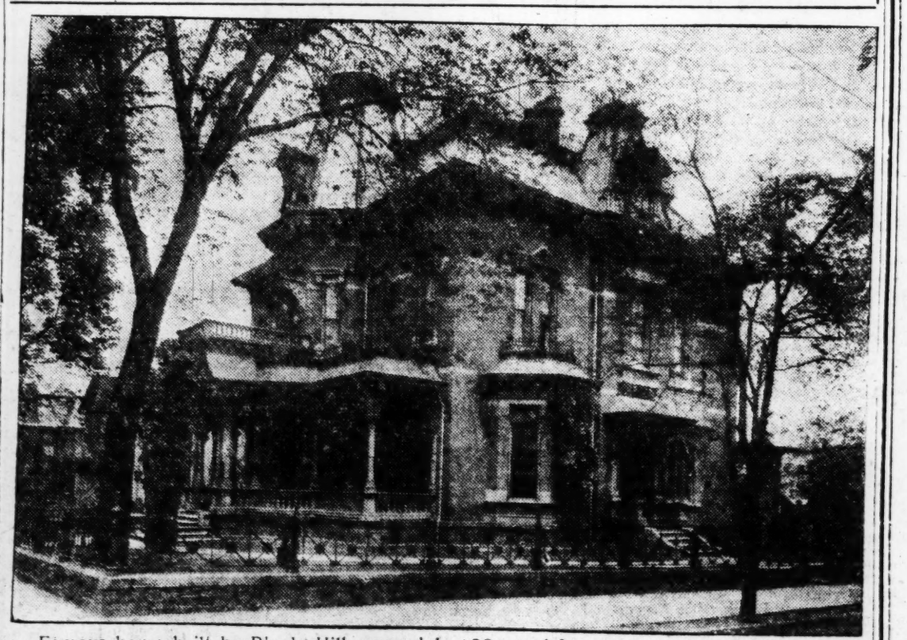

Surely, no private home ever was planned more carefully for its specific purpose than this new store of J. P. Allen and company. There is no waste space, but there is no evidence of crowding. The ventilation has been so designed that no corners can be deprived of fresh air. The lighting, both natural and artificial, has been planned by experts. Every possible convenience, for customer and salesfolk alike, is there. Everything possible has been "built in." There is no indication that something has been added as an afterthought.

Milady will find it a delightful pastime to select her gowns in this beautiful setting of the second floor. An exquisite nook of J. P. Allen's new building is the Spanish shoe salon, pictured on the right. It will be a show place for Atlanta shoppers. Below, to the left, is seen the costly fixtures that have been arranged in the section allotted to millinery. It is on the third floor and its rows of display cases, attractively connected by arched passages, will make this section an enticing adventure for shoppers. WAYCROSS MAN WILL GIVE $500 FOR GHOST MEN

Waycross, Ga., January 14.—A reward of $500 was offered today by W. B. Stewart, Waycross business man, for the arrest, with evidence to convict, of the party or parties responsible for the blackmail letter sent him last Sunday over the signature of "The Three Ghost Men."

The letter demanded the delivery of $500 by Stewart, in person, and alone, at the front door of the Kettle Creek church, two miles west of Waycross, threatening his life, his family and his business if he failed to comply with the demands.

Authorities have followed several clues, and it was announced today that while no arrests have been made valuable information has been obtained which may lead to an early arrest.

REV. E. L. BARBER RESIGNS POST IN CARROLLTON

Carrollton, Ga., January 14.—Rev. Ernest L. Barber has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Presbyterian church of Carrollton, and has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church at Dublin, Ga. His resignation was tendered to the session last Sunday, though it is probable that it will not go into effect until April 1.

Both Rev. and Mrs. Barber are highly esteemed by a large circle of friends in Carrollton, where he has served nearly six years.

Barber has taken an active part in all matters looking to the upbuilding of the town and county.

His influence for good has been especially felt among the young men and boys of the city, to whom he has devoted a great deal of his time.

JOEL M. THOMPSON KILLED AS AUTO SLIPS INTO DITCH

Rome, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—A motorist, reported to have been identified as Joel M. Thompson, was killed last night when his automobile left the Dixie highway near Rome. The body was discovered by passersby, who investigated the wrecked car. The machine lay in a ravine. Thompson apparently had been dead for several hours.

IN APPRECIATION

J. P. Allen and Company wishes to express appreciation of the loyalty and fine cooperative spirit of those responsible for the new building---the architects, contractors, builders, artisans, and the manufacturers of the fixtures and interior fittings. They have worked long, hard, and conscientiously.

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

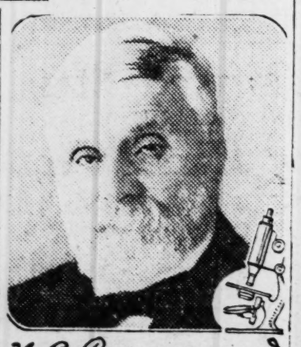

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

PLANE DRAGS FLIER AS THRONG GASPS

Clearwater, Fla., January 14.—(AP) Ducked in the ocean twice while he dangled from the landing gear of an airplane, then dragged 400 feet along the beach when the ship made a forced landing, Frank Hefling, stunt flier, tonight was little the worse for his experience other than a sprained ankle. Several thousand spectators gasped with horror while Hefling dangled and then was dragged on the beach.

Hefling went aloft with Leslie Raymond, pilot of the plane, in connection with the dedication of a new amusement park and in some manner became entangled in the rope and was left dangling, unable to get back on a wing or into the cockpit. Raymond in an effort to release Hefling without injuring him, swung down over Clearwater bay twice, ducking him in the water, but still he was unable to release himself.

Raymond then brought the plane to a landing on the beach, dragging the dangling stunt flier 400 feet, before the plane stopped. Hefling, on being released wanted to make a parachute jump, but was dissuaded.

TWO INJURED IN PLANE CRASH.

Columbia, Miss., January 14.—(AP) Lieutenant Julius Slade, flying the United States navy plane A-6787, of the Pensacola naval base, and W. P. Bratt, sailor, were slightly injured in a crash of their plane near here late today.

Both are in a hospital here. The plane engine went dead and the ship fell into a nose dive before an emergency landing could be effected, the aviators said.

PRESIDENT CALLES SPONSORS MEXICAN EXHIBIT IN U. S.

Mexico City, January 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Frances Flynn Paine, here from New York as a representative of the Rockefeller foundation, announced today that President Calles, Ambassador Morrow and Mrs. Morrow have accepted an invitation to be honorary patrons of a series of exhibitions of Mexican fine and applied arts to be shown in various cities of the United States under the auspices of the board.

The exhibit which Mrs. Paine has assembled here will open at the Art center in New York January 17 for a month and then will tour the United States for a year.

BARBARA FRITCHIE HOME WAS VISITED BY 21,000 IN 1927

Frederick, Md., January 14.—(AP)—Debates over historical accuracy of Whittier's poetical story of Barbara Fritchie did not bother the minds of automobile tourists passing through Frederick last year.

Although the Barbara Fritchie home, restored by local citizens, was not open to the public until last Memorial day more than 21,000 people visited it in 1927, it was announced today by Miss Eleanor D. Abbott, great grandniece of the Whittier heroine, in charge of the home.

Jingles on Milk as Health Food Mean Prizes to Pupils

:: Constitution Offers Contest To Its Young Readers ::

BY ALBERT HARDY, JR.
Jingle Editor.

Milk is healthy!

But, just how much good does it do one who drinks it daily. What is its value as a food?

The Constitution will conduct a "Jingle" contest for the next eight days, beginning today and continuing through Monday, January 23, and every boy and girl in the section is eligible to send in a jingle and compete for the grand prizes.

The contest is being conducted in connection with the "Milk-for-Health" campaign initiated in Fulton, Cobb and DeKalb counties on January 3, and follows up the work of the milk-for-health campaign of May 9-14, 1927.

Any boy and girl reader of The Constitution is eligible for the contest. The jingles of rhymes should not exceed five lines and should tell a story of "Milk-for-Health."

The following are the rules for the contest:

1. Jingles must be written plainly and on one side of paper only.

2. Full name and address of contestant must be on the back of each jingle submitted.

3. Each contestant can submit only one rhyme.

"Milk-for-Health" or "The Value of Milk as a Food" should be the theme of the jingles and judges have been selected to grade the jingles on their literary value, clearness with which they bring out the story, neatness, originality and snappiness. The judges are impartial and are non-residents of Atlanta.

Now as to the prizes. For the best jingle, a crisp ten dollar bill will be given to the boy or girl who submits the neatest, and snappiest. Five dollars is the award for the second best and $2.50 will be given for the third ranking jingle.

Send in your rhyme as early as possible to the Jingle Editor, Atlanta Constitution, as the contest will be closed at 6 o'clock Monday afternoon, January 23.

With the "Milk-for-Health" campaign now under way and adding impetus daily, the schools in the three counties are taking a vital interest and seven in the section have started milk feeding demonstrations.

In these demonstrations each school takes sixteen children who are ten per cent or more underweight and gives each child one and one-half pints of the food per day at school for a period of sixteen weeks. The demonstrations are being made to show the value of milk as a food in health and to build up health in the bodies of malnourished children. The results will be announced later.

Among the schools participating in these demonstrations are the Luckie street, Inman Park and Marion Smith schools of Atlanta; Scottdale and Fifth Avenue schools in DeKalb county; Waterman Street school in Marietta, and the Blackwell Consolidated school in Cobb county. All schools had milk roll call on January 3 and pupils have been drinking their allowance daily since that time. Remarkable results of milk drinking are already being reported, one child having gained three pounds the first week.

Miss Myra Graves, health director of the Atlanta public schools has charge of the demonstrations in Fulton county. The work in the Marion Smith school at Egan Park is under the direction of Harry L. Brown, Fulton county agricultural agent, and Miss Lucy Wood, Fulton county home demonstration agent. Mrs. Moore is the teacher in charge.

Miss Dean Bridges, DeKalb county home demonstration agent, and E. P. McGee, DeKalb county agricultural agent, have the supervision of the DeKalb county milk feeding demonstrations.

Two Exhibitions Feature of Week At High Museum

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Opening of two special exhibitions of more than usual interest and the arrival of Roland J. McKinney, new director, were features of first importance at the High Museum of Art last week.

Mr. McKinney, who comes here from Davenport, Iowa, where he has been director of the municipal art gallery for the past five years, is well known in art circles. He is a graduate of the art institute of Chicago and, in addition to his experience as director and curator, is an artist of considerable ability in his own right. He succeeds Mrs. Charles M. Jerome as director in charge of the local gallery. Mrs. Jerome, who tendered her resignation some weeks ago, returns to her work as a private teacher of art as soon as Mr. McKinney has been thoroughly installed in his new post.

An exhibition of miniatures by Mrs. B. E. Fernow and a collection of oils by Louis E. Jones attracted hundreds of art lovers to the museum for the opening of both showings on Wednesday last.

An Important Acquisition.

Mrs. Fernow, whose husband has recently accepted the chair of experimental engineering at Clemson college, is an important acquisition to southern art circles. She is a distinguished painter of miniatures, many of her sitters being among the famous people of the day. She has studied at the leading institutes of art in the east and under some of the greatest of modern painters.

The collection of miniatures being shown at the High Museum for the next two weeks is by far the greatest thing of its kind ever seen in Atlanta.

Mr. Jones, whose water colors occupy the room at the right rear of the ground floor of the museum, brings to Atlanta a distinct individuality in the landscape field. He is a resident of the art colony at Woodstock, N. Y., but is spending several months in Atlanta, and expects to remain here until April next, devoting his time to transferring to canvas typical landscapes in north Georgia.

Fascinating Collection.

The collection of Mr. Jones' works now on view at the museum is one of intriguing fascination. That they are from the brush of an almost fanatical lover of nature in all her moods is evident even upon cursory examination. Closer scrutiny awakens marvel at the ability of one man to catch so thoroughly the vivid truths of nature in such widely variant manifestations. And even to catch the spirit of modern man in the few city scenes which he has placed upon his canvases.

One of the most interesting pictures in the collection is an Atlanta scene, entitled "Twilight." It shows the beautiful Christian Science church, at Peachtree and Fifteenth streets, as its pillared facade gradually darkens before the oncoming night, with the sunshine touching only the higher points with its dying rays. Before the church automobiles rush, eager for the highway, palpably concerned only with the call of the asphalt and unconcerned about the beauty and the significance of the church they pass.

There are several striking snow scenes and other mountain sketches remarkable for the coloring which Mr. Jones has placed upon his canvas.

Mr. Jones is a graduate of the art department of Bucknell university and of the Academy of Fine Arts at Philadelphia. He is one of the group of painters who gather annually in the Woodstock colony, studying under John F. Carlson and Birge Harrison. He is a member of the American Federation of Arts and also of the Fellowship of the Philadelphia academy and has exhibited in many cities through the country.

STATE AUTO CLUB BRANCH FORMED IN GAINESVILLE

Gainesville, Ga., January 14.—(Special.)—The Hall county branch of the Georgia State Automobile association was organized in Gainesville during the past week with more than 40 of the leading automobile owners of the county enrolled. The local branch has the honor of being the first in the state to receive its A. A. A. charter from the recently organized state association.

Sentiment for the establishment of a club here has been strong for several months. Immediately upon the receipt of news that the state organization had been perfected and was empowered to give membership in the A. A. A., leaders of the movement got in touch with William Candler, state president, and other officials in Atlanta, with the result that the branch was formed.

H. M. Burns, president of the Motor Finance corporation, of Gainesville, has been named county chairman. He has appointed the following chairmen of committees to assist in setting up a constructive program of activities here: W. A. Roper, membership; H. M. Estes, highways; Boyd Sloan, legislative; C. V. Nalley, touring; A. S. Hardy, publicity; D. S. Denton, safety; Mrs. J. D. Miller, beautification of highways and marking.

Friday, 13th, Slaps Parachute Jumpers Who Disregard Jinx

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Two army men, one a major, who made parachute jumps from an airplane over Bolling field in a deliberate attempt to lay the superstition about Friday, the 13th, finally landed in a hospital.

Major Carey I. Crockett, infantry student at the army war college, and Private Emil Rastoeny, of Bolling field, jumped from a Douglas transport plane 2,000 feet in the air and were precipitated to the ground with such force that both had to receive treatment for injured under-pinnings at the field hospital. Crockett hurt his ankle silghtly, but Rastoeny suffered a bad sprain, his leg swelling to nearly twice its normal size.

Sergeant N. E. Swanson and Corporal B. A. Walsh, who also were scheduled to make jumps, were prohibited from leaving the plane because of a high wind.

Prince Henry Joins Brother in Narrow Hunt Field Escape

London, January 14.—(AP)—Prince Henry, third son of King George, narrowly escaped serious injuries in the hunting field today when a woman hunter's horse kicked at him, narrowly missing his face.

The prince was with his brothers, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, being members of a party hunting with the Cottesmore hounds.

During the hunt one horse crashed into a wire fence and turned two complete somersaults, its rider escaping without injury.

Americus, Ga., January 14.—(Special.)—A modern chlorinating plant is being installed at the municipal pumping station and within a few weeks will be in operation there. Although the water supply here is derived chiefly from artesian wells this supply is supplemented by several bold springs and because of this it was determined some time ago to install a modern chlorinating system. Funds for the installation of the plant have been provided through a bond issue voted here several months ago and the plant will be installed as part of a general improvement plan at the municipal water station.

J. M. HIGH COMPANY SHOWS NOTED CANVAS

"If Thou Hadst Known, Oh Jerusalem," world-famous oil painting picturing Jesus looking down upon the ancient city of the holy land, which is being exhibited in the furniture department annex of J. M. High company, is to be on display for Atlantans for two more weeks, officials of the company announced Saturday. The artist is Paul Mersereau, French painter, who enjoys an international reputation as a colorist and excels in landscape and nature scenes.

The painting is said to be valued at $80,000 and is one of the outstanding canvas productions. It has attracted wide attention during its display here, being visited by many members of schools, colleges, clubs and other local organizations, to whom 5,000 invitations have been sent. Arrangements for the display have been made so that the picture is viewed under the best lighting effects.

Thirty smaller pieces of the artist's handicraft also are to be seen in the department. The painter was born in Rheims, France, in 1870. He was gifted with natural talent, and, aside from a few months of study, he was self-taught. Most of his time was spent in the open, painting from nature.

MINISTER'S SON ADMITS ROBBING BANK IN ILLINOIS

Nokomis, Ill., January 14.—(AP)—Enno T. Henkel, 28-year-old assistant cashier of the Farmers National bank, who last Tuesday told a story of being slugged by two robbers who set fire to the bank building, tonight confessed that the robbery story was a fake and that he had set fire to the institution to cover embezzlements of $8,000 in the last several years.

The youth, a son of Rev. Otto Henkel, pastof of the Trinity Lutheran church here, said he had lost the money in imprudent investments. He had previously told the story of assailants setting fire to the bank's books and leaving him locked in the vault.

Candidates in Fulton County Races

Six Candidates Announce For Fulton County Posts

Formal announcements were made Saturday by a number of candidates for county offices, asking support in the democratic primary of March 7.

Walter B. Stewart, chairman of the Fulton county commission, announced his candidacy for reelection, promising the same degree of fidelity in the future that "it has been my privilege to give in the past." Mr. Stewart said that he stands wholeheartedly for a bigger and better Atlanta and Fulton county. He was appointed by the commission in June of 1926 to fill the unexpired term of I. N. Ragsdale, who resigned to become a candidate for mayor of Atlanta.

Women in Races.

Mrs. J. R. Wakefield announced her candidacy for Fulton county treasurer to succeed Miss Margaret Culberson. Mrs. Wakefield said that she has resided in Atlanta for a number of years, and has done her part in actively supporting and promoting various improvements of the city. "If elected to this high and exalted position, I pledge myself to see that the affairs of this office are conducted in a businesslike and legal manner and to see that the interests of every citizen of Fulton county are promoted to the fullest extent," she said.

Mrs. Mable Abbott MacNeill, daughter of W. H. Abbott, tax receiver, announced her entry into the race for the office of county treasurer to succeed Miss Culberson, who has stated that she will not seek reelection. Mrs. MacNeill is a native of Fulton county, and graduated from Girls' High school of Atlanta. For several years she was employed in the directory department of the telephone company, and since 1922 has been acting as clerk in her father's office.

Carlton W. Binns, solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, announced his candidacy for reelection. Mr. Binns said that he has been a resident of Atlanta for the past 18 years, having graduated from Boys' High school and later from Mercer university, law school at Columbia university, and has been practicing law in Atlanta since then. He was appointed solicitor by Governor Hardman when Roy Dorsey resigned last summer. He is a member of the American Legion.

Joe Hill Smith, attorney, announced his candidacy for solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, to oppose Mr. Binns. Mr. Smith said that he obtained his education by working his way through the Eighth District Agricultural and Mechanical school and the University of Georgia prior to the world war, and that after the war he attended Lamar School of Law at Emory university. Since his graduation he has practiced law in all of the state trial courts of Fulton county, and the federal district court and the court of appeals and supreme court of Georgia.

Johnson for Tax Receiver.

Edwin F. Johnson, for the past five years a member of the county commission, announced his candidacy for the post of tax receiver, to succeed W. H. Abbott, who will not be a candidate for reelection. Mr. Johnson at one time was engaged in newspaper work, resigning to become the first manager of public relations for the power company. Later he became president of Johnson-Dallis company, advertising and printing, and then president of the Gholstin Spring and Mattress company, in which work he is now engaged. He promises, if elected, to establish a modern field book, in cooperation with the tax investigator, to eliminate realty tax dodging, where he received degrees both in the literary department and the law school. Following his course at Mercer, he took postgraduate work in the

MESSER WILL HEAD CAMPAIGN WORKERS FOR J. C. HARRISON

B. H. Messer was named chairman of the campaign committee for J. C. Harrison, who is running for Fulton county treasurer, at a mass meeting of friends of Mr. Harrison Saturday. John H. Owen was elected secretary.

An executive committee composed of B. B. Baber, H. W. Davis, O. T. Camp, Robert F. Pennington, Mr. Messer, Mr. Owen, T. L. Simpson, F. E. Kibler, J. A. Massey, A. B. Smith, C. C. Harrison, I. R. Weller, A. S. Murphy, E. Johnson, J. H. Floyd, R. B. Burgen, T. L. Clyde also was named.

"We are solidly behind Mr. Harrison and feel that he deserves the wholehearted support of voters of Fulton county," Mr. Messer said. "He has lived in Atlanta practically all his life, and has devoted his untiring interests and service to this community for a great many years. Never before has he asked his friends to do anything for him, and we feel that his clean record, his business experience and his knowledge of conditions and affairs eminently qualify him for the position he seeks."

Mr. Harrison is a former president of the City Salesmen's association, local post "B" Travelers Protective association.

of the Southeastern Fair association for the past three years and leader in political and civic circles for many years, and Dr. A. H. Cochran, former member of city council from the second ward, also will enter. Both indicated they would be candidates when they declined to throw their hats into the ring for the special election held last Thursday to choose a successor for the late Charles G. Turner on the commission. Other entrants also are likely, if rumored possibilities are to be given any standing before they actually become contenders.

Treasurer's Race.

The next most popular job probably will be that of Fulton county treasurer, which at the present time is sought by three women and one man with the probability that at least one other woman will enter before entry lists close at noon February 6. All candidates must qualify by that time, under a ruling of a special sub-committee headed by Albert Howell.

J. C. Harrison, former president of the Atlanta City Salesmen's association, local post "B," Travelers' Protective association and for 25 years a leading salesman in the Atlanta territory, has entered for the race.

Miss Margaret Culberson, incumbent, will not offer for reelection, it is said.

Mrs. Mable Abbott MacNeill, daughter of William H. Abbott, tax receiver, who will not offer again, has taken the field against Mr. Harrison, and Mrs. J. R. Wakefield, prominent Atlanta woman, and Mrs. Beula Manston, sister of Coroner Paul Donehoo, are other contenders. Rumors are that Mrs. Edgar Alexander, national democratic woman from Georgia, also will seek the post.

Edwin F. Johnson Saturday officially announced his candidacy to succeed Mr. Abbott, and he will be opposed by Walter Harwell, marshal of the city of Atlanta for the past eight years. Both have a large following.

Seek Solicitor's Job.

Carlton W. Binns, solicitor of the city criminal court, Saturday made formal entry for reelection, and he will be opposed by Joe Hill Smith, local attorney. Among others mentioned as possible candidates for the position are Ralph McClellan and Ellis B. Barrett.

Tom C. Miller, incumbent, Saturday qualified for reelection to the post as clerk of Fulton county superior court.

Sheriff James I. Lowry will be in the race to succeed himself. He will be opposed by A. M. Corrie, and it is reported that Paul Trammell also will become a contestant.

Jere A. Wells, superintendent of Fulton county schools, will run to succeed himself. His entrance fee was paid Saturday by a delegation from the Fulton County Teachers' association, who "put" him in the field.

The committee was composed of W. F. Dykes, president of the association; Mrs. T. H. McGee, acting vice president; Mrs. Laura H. Cox, treasurer, and Miss Lydia Guice, secretary. The fund was raised by popular subscription following a meeting of the association.

At the same time the association passed resolutions indorsing Mr. Wells for another term.

Entrance fees have been set as follows by the subcommittee:

Candidates for ordinary, clerk of the superior court, sheriff, tax collector, tax receiver, solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta, judge of the criminal court of Atlanta and judge of the city court $400; candidates for county treasurer $200; county school commissioner $150; commissioner of roads and revenues $150; coroner $100; county surveyor $75.

office of District Attorney Asa Keyes.

Every effort of the Keyes staff has been directed toward gathering evidence to tear down Hickman's plea of not guilty on grounds of insanity.

Found No Trace of Insanity.

Dr. Reynolds said he found no trace of hereditary insanity or any other form of insanity in Hickman. He blamed environment for Hickman's transformation from a brilliant high school boy into a young man responsible for one of the most brutal crimes the west has known.

His report ended with the positive conclusion that "Hickman is sane—just as sane as anyone."

All evidence gathered by other psychiatrists who have aided in examining Hickman prove the youth's sanity, Dr. Benjamin Black, jail physician, said.

Alienists retained by the defense also have been busy gathering data with which they will go into court when Hickman's trial is called, on January 25, to support the defense contention that he is insane.

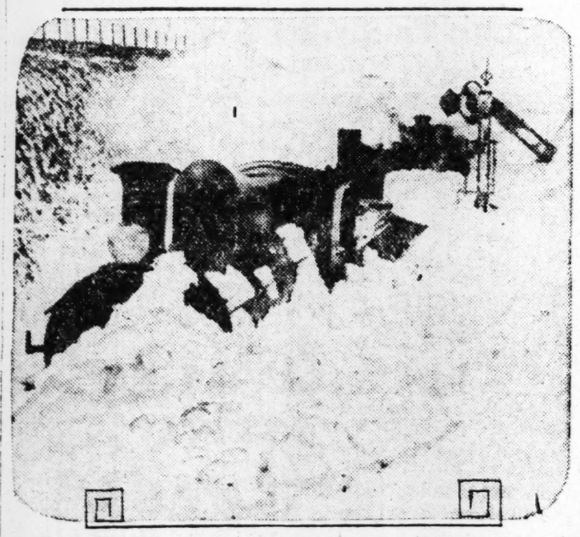

Jerome Walsh, chief defense attorney, has been in Kansas City and Arkansas for a week obtaining statements from persons who knew Hickman as a child.

Through the statements Walsh hoped to prove that Hickman was not normal.

Kansas City, Mo., January 14.—(United News.)—Bessie, 4-year-old German police dog, who was to have been put to death November 15 for biting a small boy, was alive today on a stay of execution while the legal battle for her life continued.

A judge in municipal court first ordered Bessie's death and fined her owner, Wilbur Bickford, $5 for keeping a vicious dog. Bickford appealed. A circuit court upheld the lower court verdict. Then an application for a writ of prohibition was filed in the court of appeals. A temporary stay was granted today and the circuit court judge was enjoined from taking action in the case.

Woman Sheriff Enforces "Golden Grain" as Jail Diet

:: 33 PRISONERS LEARN "OF WOMEN FROM HER" ::

Sycamore, Ill., January 14.—(AP)—A woman may be only a woman so far as Kipling is concerned, but she's sheriff in DeKalb county, whereupon hangs a tale.

When Mrs. Helen Dolder stepped into office Thursday night the 83 prisoners could not retain a collective laugh up a collective sleeve. A woman sheriff, in their opinion, was preposterous even to contemplate.

The opportunity to show Sheriff Dolder just how far she could go with them came Thursday night. "Golden Grain" was on the bill of fare. That is the jail lingo for what the rest of the country knows as plain corn meal mush.

The educated appetites of the prisoners balked at "golden grain." Thirty-three prisoners with positive likes and dislikes concerning jail fare, rebelled at such food. They turned up their noses and turned down their plates.

Which was all right with Sheriff Dolder. Whether they ate or not was none of her concern. The rebels against "golden grain," however, carried their protest farther, making tom-toms of their tin plates and drum sticks of their knives, forks and spoons. To the tintinnabulation of these noise-makers the 33-who-would-not-eat-mush began to wail: "When do we eat?"

Sheriff Dolder told them to shut up. The shouting grew louder. The mush-haters hollered for meat. Again the order for silence; again the yelling.

Her patience exhausted, Mrs. Dulder ordered the prisoners back to their cells. This struck them as a good joke.

"Who'll put us in?" they shouted.

This was Mrs. Dodler's cue. She ordered out the deputies. Nozzles were attached to fire hose. In a very few minutes the prisoners were flattened against the jail wall, drenched.

The tin music stopped, and the derision turned to pleading. But the hose played on until they all promised to return to their cells as ordered.

Last night the 83 prisoners sat down to their second supper under the shrievalty of Mrs. Helen Dolder. "Golden grain" was on the menu. Everybody ate.

Illinois' only woman sheriff had demonstrated who was running the DeKalb county jail.

GASOLINE USED TO FOIL ATTEMPT OF HOLD-UP MAN

M. D. Brooks an employee of a local ice cream company, late Saturday afternoon foiled an attempted holdup when he threw a bucket of gasoline on a white man who commanded him to hold his hands up. The holdup occurred on the Mayson and Turner road just beyond Center Hill.

Brooks told police that a man attempted to engage him in conversation and then commanded him to raise his hands. Brooks, who was carrying a bucket of gasoline, dashed its contents in the face of his assailant, who at once fled.

B. M. Hall, of 152 Moreland avenue, reported to police that a nimble fingered artist relieved him of $3 while en route to his home on a crowded street car late Saturday afternoon. He boarded the street car at South Pryor and Alabama streets and did not miss his money until just before he got off near his home.

HIKE IN TAX RATES FEARED BY MELLON

Addressing the Women's National Republican club, the secretary said that while it might be good business to lower taxes, "It most assuredly would not help matters to be obliged to raise them."

"It must be remembered," he said, "that our present revenues are due to the high level of prosperity which has obtained for several years and any reduction in taxes will be made on the assumption that this prosperity will continue without any abatement.

"While at present the general trend is reassuring, nevertheless, if there should be a falling off in business, with a consequent and immediate reduction in the yield of the corporation and individual income taxes, it may be necessary for congress to levy additional taxes in order to provide for the revenue needs of the government.

"Once the excise taxes have been eliminated they will not be restored. The first move will be to increase the rates on individual and corporation income taxes, and the very persons now urging an excessive reduction in taxes will be the first to pay the penalty in any increased taxes which may be necessary for the production of needed revenue.

"From the point of view of the taxpayers, this is undesirable, of course. But it has a greater significance than this. If productive business should again find itself burdened with disproportionately high taxes, not only business itself but the whole country would lose the benefits now beginning to be felt as the result of getting back to a more balanced system of taxation.

"The principal evil to be avoided in any system of taxation is that of excessive rates. Excessive rates upon any class of property of taxpayers are harmful, because they distort or obstruct the normal flow of trade and investments. It is not so important just where the tax is levied, but it is extremely important that no income, corporate or private, and no property, tangible or intangible, should be disproportionately burdened."

The secretary charged that business men who were suggesting a large reduction were asking the government to follow a policy that they themselves would not adopt in the conduct of their own businesses by involving the integrity of the budget.

Mr. Mellon praised President Coolidge and the administration for a "policy of sound and constructive economy at Washington."

POLICE DISMISS CHARGES AGAINST TENNESSEE OFFICER

New Orleans, January 14.—(AP)—Charges ranging from disturbing the peace to tearing an officer's uniform lodged against Walter C. Anderson, sheriff of Knox county, Tenn., were dismissed late today after the sheriff had explained to police the cause of an argument he had last night with taxicab drivers.

The argument started, police were told, over a 75 cents fare when Sheriff Anderson sought to leave a taxicab before he and John Maynatt, deputy sheriff accompanying him, arrived at their hotel. Anderson said he had instructed the deputy to pay the bill. Taxicab drivers forced the officers to proceed to police headquarters and a fight with officers followed. The Tennesseeans were en route to Houston, Texas.

Mr. Callaway stated that he would accept a place on Sheriff Lowry's ticket and had not decided whether or not he would quit his council post. If he does it will not be within the next few months, at least, he said.

A benefit song service will be given in the Gordon Street Baptist church, Monday night at 7:30 by Charles Butler, song leader and his daughter, Miss Lillian Butler, pianist, who are assisting in a revival service at the Baptist tabernacle, which will close tonight.

There will be no admission charged but a free-will offering will be taken up and the proceeds will go into the church building fund.

OGLETHORPE DRIVE SEEKS FULL QUOTA

Until the remaining $50,000 of Atlanta's quota of $250,000 is subscribed to match an equal gift from J. J. Lupton, of Chattanooga, Oglethorpe university will not accept Mr. Lupton's offer of last week to begin payment on his gift regardless of whether the Atlanta quota is raised, according to announcement Saturday of Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe.

The campaign is still under way with approximately $1,000 received in subscriptions each day, according to Dr. Jacobs, and workers will remain active until the fund has been oversubscribed in order that Oglethorpe may accept the Lupton gift under the original conditions.

"We do not feel justified in accepting Mr. Lupton's offer to begin payment on his gift despite the fact that Atlanta has not raised the amount prescribed under the original conditions of Mr. Lupton's offer," Dr. Jacobs said, "and we will continue the campaign until the remaining sum shall have been oversubscribed."

West and Sutton Clash on School Deficit Blame

Blame for delay in payment of salaries of Atlanta public school teachers was placed Saturday on Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, by G. Graham West, city comptroller.

More than 1,200 teachers have not yet been paid for the last half of December, 1927, and Mr. West charged that Mr. Sutton rejected a proposal to sell uncollected fi fas so that no shortage in funds of the school department would exist at the end of the year.

The system now owes its teachers $101,000 in salaries, but has only $52,000 on hand with which to meet the bill, and George Powell, president of the board of education and other members of the board, have been attempting to devise some scheme to prevent slashing the pay roll approximately $49,000 to make the payment.

Charge of West.

"A proposal was made by Mr. Sutton while W. H. Hoffman, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board of education in 1927, and R. R. Ritchie assistant superintendent of schools, were in my office," Mr. West said. "I stated that I could find a buyer and that by so doing the schools could get the $208,000 which had been deduced from the amount tentatively given the department, as a result of failure to sell the fi fas. When Mr. Sutton learned that whatever amount was raised by the sale and given to the school department in 1927 would be deducted from what they would receive in 1928, he rejected the sale proposal, with the evident intent of having that extra amount on hand for the new year.

"I have been blamed more than once for this shortage and do not care to be considered responsible for it any longer."

Mr. West made the statement in the presence of Mr. Hoffman, and the latter concurred in the facts as related.

Sutton's Denial.

"The situation has been misrepresented," said Mr. Sutton when informed of the charge. "What we were discussing at the time was raising the $22,000 to pay the teachers. At that time the deficit for salaries, which now is $49,000, was estimated at only $22,000. I suggested that we sell enough of the fi fas to give the schools the $22,000 necessary. Mr. Hoffman objected, saying that he wanted to keep within the quota fixed for the schools, especially in view of the fact that we would lose this amount which otherwise would be available for 1928. I said that I would prefer to get the money in some other way, if that were possible, but that my first concern was that the teachers be paid. I most emphatically deny any blame for failure to pay the teachers."

City officials pointed out that the school department, of course, was entitled to its share of the fi fas one time, but that they could not be sold and the money turned over to the schools in 1928 and then let the department collect for them a second time in 1928.

Water Rates Reduced.

Water rates in Atlanta, which were raised 50 per cent last year to retire a deficit of $831,000 in the school department, will be reduced beginning this morning, and cannot be increased again to make up any deficit in any other department of the city government.

A total of $801,418.37 was raised by the increase and the $29,581.33 remainder was absorbed in the finance sheet, which will be submitted Monday to city council. So that the schools enter the new year without any deficit except the $49,000 which came over from 1927.

Mr. Powell announced Saturday night that he would call a special meeting of the board of education after council and the mayor pass on the school allocation and the administration department has an opportunity to revise the first budget, which is about $186,000 more than the amount of money available in the finance sheet for schools.

The school department asked for $3,134,000, and will receive about $2,948,000.

MUSIC CLUB PAYS TRIBUTE ON DEATH OF MRS. BARTON

Resolutions of sorrow over the death on January 8 of Mrs. Walter F. Barton, treasurer of the junior department of the Atlanta Music club, have been adopted by the executive board of the music club, it was announced Saturday. Tribute is paid to Mrs. Barton as "one of our most beloved and devoted co-workers and fellow members, who served on this board for more than six years."

Mrs. Barton's time was given unsparingly in efforts to help the "boys" who saw service in the world war, and her charity went far and wide to the needy and suffering, but never did she seek fame or publicity for her actions, the resolutions set forth. In holding her office as treasurer, she "was not only the keeper of the funds but the helper, councillor, friend and companion of the director, as well as to the children collectively and individually, lending her support to every forward movement and making it possible for the club to carry on with a clear record."

The resolutions were prepared by Mrs. G. Bingham Bache, Mrs. Jane Mattingly and Mrs. De Los L. Hill, and were adopted unanimously by the executive board, of which Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore is president.

PHARMACISTS WILL LAUNCH MEMBER DRIVE.

An aggressive campaign for new members of the Georgia Pharmaceutical campaign will be launched Monday from headquarters of the association in Atlanta under the direction of A. R. Munn, president, and Fred T. Bridges, secretary, it was announced Saturday.

This organization is one of the oldest in Georgia and has experienced a remarkable growth in the last year. In 1926 it consisted of 100 members and the total enrollment is now more than 1,000. The objective is to add 1,500 new members during the year.

The association is also conducing a campaign to sell the association to the pharmacists of Georgia as well as to the people of the state. A cooperative program has been adopted for the year.

During the session of the legislature last summer the association fostered the passage of the pharmaceutical act, the first act ever passed designed to regulate conditions under which pharmacies are operated and designed to protect the general public from frauds in medicines.

The campaign will be directed by Mr. Bridges from the offices of the association in the Atlanta Trust Company building. All registered pharmacists in the state are eligible for membership in the organization.

STATE DEMOCRATIC GROUP MEETS JAN. 21

will meet at Houston, Texas, next June.

"The selection of this southern city as the place for holding the convention is the first real recognition the democracy of the south has received from the national party in many years, and forecasts the possibility that a southern man may ultimately be the nominee of the party with a platform acceptable to the people of the south.

Presentation of George.

"Realizing this situation, the friends of Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, with his consent and approval, have presented his name to the nation as a candidate for the nomination, and I feel sure that Georgia will be proud of the opportunity to send to the convention a delegation enthusiastically in favor of Senator George.

"I was delighted to note the high regard and esteem of all the party leaders for Senator George. They recognize his ability and capabilities just as the people of Georgia recognize them, and further recognize that his nomination would arouse no antagonism in any section of the nation. His high character, integrity, experience in public life and his universally recognized ability make him the ideal man for the nomination. His friends are assured already that Georgia should and will get back of Senator George, thus forecasting a year of political harmony in Georgia, which is so earnestly to be desired by all who are interested in the welfare and progress of the state.

"From present information it seems that no name, other than that of Senator George, will be entered in Georgia for the presidential nomination, but that he will be the unanimous choice of the people of this state. I think, however, that ample opportunity should be given for the entrance of any other candidate who may so desire and I shall so recommend to the state democratic executive committee, which I am calling to meet in Atlanta at 11 a. m. on Saturday, January 21, 1928."

SOLDIERS SENTENCED TO MEXICAN PRISON

San Diego, Calif., January 14.—(AP) Three soldiers on leave from the seventy-sixth United States field artillery, and an electrician, of Salinas, Calif., have been sentenced to five years imprisonment on Tres Marias island, Mexico's penal colony, for a highway robbery committed last Friday near Santo Tomas, Lower California, according to word received here from Ensenada.

Evelyn Costello, 19-year-old employee of a Watsonville, Calif., theater, companion of the four men, was absolved of complicity in the crime and deported to the United States after testifying.

The four men are: Russell E. Tanner, 28, of Lakewood, Calif.; L. N. Thompson, 25, a Canadian; Ebenezer R. Kirby, 22, of New York city, and Elton E. Morehouse, 25, of Salinas Calif.

The party started as a week-end pleasure trip into Mexico but when the men ran out of funds they held up two Mexicans, wrecking an automobile belonging to one of the victims. After their arrest by soldiers of the Tecate garrison as they attempted to reenter the United States, they were charged with highway robbery, a capital crime in Mexico.

BATTLESHIP READY FOR PRESIDENT.

Key West, Fla., January 14.—(AP)—The battleship Texas, which brought Admiral H. A. Wiley, ranking officer of the United States navy and his chief of staff, Rear Admiral H. D. Butler, was in readiness tonight to receive President Coolidge and his party for the last lap of the president's journey to Havana, and the Pan-American congress.

The Texas will weigh anchor at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, escorted by a flotilla including the cruiser Memphis and seven destroyers. If the weather is unfavorable the cruiser Memphis will be used by the president for the trip to Cuba, otherwise the presidential party will be carried by the Memphis eight miles out to where the Texas is anchored, where a transfer will be made.

CROWDS THRONG STREETS OF HAVANA.

Havana, January 14. — (United News.)—The Cuban capital was crowded tonight with the delegates of the Americas and each arriving group to the sixth Pan-American congress which opens Monday discussed the inevitable question of the place Nicaragua will take in the discussions of delegates.

Be-flagged, its hotels crowded, Havana awaited the arrival of President Coolidge and his staff tomorrow.

While unwilling to discuss American intervention in Nicaragua directly, Julio Garcia, chairman of the Mexican delegation, granted the United Press tonight an exclusive interview which indicated the stand his delegation might be expected to take.

The Mexican delegation will present the same ideas presented at the international conference of jurists at Rio de Janeiro," Garcia said. "One of the resolutions passed on the present conference by the Rio de Janeiro meeting read:

COMMITTEE TO ACT ON SMITH'S REQUEST.

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—The suggestion of Governor Smith, of New York, for an early draft of a tentative democratic platform will be considered by the committee on arrangements for the June convention at its next meeting, to be held at Houston in April.

Governor Smith in his letter read at the Jackson day dinner said he believed the democrats had "erred in the past by waiting for the national convention to undertake the entire task of preparing a platform," and advocated a tentative declaration of party principles "at the earliest possible moment."

HOUSTON TO ERECT HUGE TABERNACLE.

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—The democratic national convention at Houston in June will have all the surroundings of a real old-fashioned revival meeting.

Jesse Jones, Houston multi-millionaire and chairman of the arrangements committee, announced today that a canvas-and-wood auditorium of the tabernacle type would be constructed at a cost of $100,000 to house 25,000 persons.

The sides will be rolled up for vagrant gulf breezes and the chairs of delegates will rest on tanbark or specially constructed wooden floors.

Here in the atmosphere of evangelism and crusading the democrats will build their party platform and nominate their presidential and vice presidential candidates for the November election.

MINNESOTA GOVERNOR SEES SMITH VICTORY.

St. Paul, Minn., January 14.—(AP)—Nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, as democratic presidential candidate was predicted by Governor Theodore Christianson, of Minnesota, before the Minnesota republican state central committee here today.

Governor Smith's candidacy will result in the hardest fought national campaign of recent years, Christianson declared, in cautioning members of the committee to "beware of the dangers of over-confidence." A republican victory, he stated, will come only with "good hard work."

THOMPSON TO MANAGE WILLIS' CAMPAIGN.

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Carmi Thompson has agreed to become manager of the presidential campaign of Senator Willis, republican, Ohio.

Expressing confidence that Willis' candidacy "will appeal to the republicans of the nation, Mr. Thompson made this announcement today, asserting at the same time that Ohio would send a solid Willis delegation to Kansas City and that an active campaign would be waged to obtain votes in other states.

"I propose to spend some time," he said, "not only in joining with others to secure harmonious and enthusiastic indorsement of Senator Willis by the republicans of Ohio, but also in seeking such support in other states."

NEW HAMPSHIRE G. O. P. BACKS HOOVER.

Concord, N. H., January 14.—(AP)—A joint telegram to Secretary Herbert Hoover pledging support for the republican nomination for president was sent today by the first group of candidates for delegates to the national convention to file papers in New Hampshire.

Five candidates filed their papers today for delegate to the democratic national convention. Three of them were pledged to the nomination of Governor Smith, of New York, for president; the other two were unpledged. The New Hampshire presidential primary will be held March 13.

SENATE SPEEDS UP AFTER TARIFF ROW

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Having spent all week talking about the tariff, the senate decided today to take advantage of the inactivity of the house and get down to serious work.

Accordingly, it passed 39 bills and adopted one resolution in less than two hours; heard a speech of good will toward France; confirmed a batch of nominations and then recessed until Monday when it will vote on the McMaster resolution declaring for a reduction of "excessive" tariff duties.

This activity may have been influenced by the fact that the house was in recess until Monday. However, that body was kept in the news of the day through the action of its naval committee in running counter to the administration's desires that no time limit be set for the completion of the new naval building program.

Few Senators Present.

As is usually the case when the senate is in a working mood, its sessions furnishing nothing of the spectacular.

There were about a score of senators on the floor, each carefully following bills as they were called up. Senator King, democrat, Utah, appeared in his role as guardian of treasury funds, forcing over consideration of a number of bills on the calendar and requiring proponents of others to give detailed explanations.

None of the 40 measures which were passed along to the house for action was of a highly important character, but by getting them out of the way the senate cleaned up its calendar pretty well and so cleared the way for consideration of several important questions next week.

Along about Monday it will have the case of Frank L. Smith, senator-elect from Illinois, dumped again on its doorstep. Since Smith declined to submit himself to the jurisdiction of the special campaign funds committee that body will recommend that his seat be declared vacant and the senate will adopt the necessary resolution to that end.

"Lull Before Storm."

As a lull before the storm of next week, senate committees were not over-busy during the day, but soon they will draw the spot light to such subjects as an inquiry into the financing of public utilities, the operations of the now celebrated Continental Trading company, Ltd., of Canada, and the construction of a great dam in Boulder canyon.

The Boulder dam problem again was before a house committee today as was the question of flood control, with chief attention given to protection in the Pittsburgh district, where the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers merge to form the Ohio.

Besides opposing the administration's plan to set a time limit for the finishing up of the new naval program, the house naval committee voted almost unanimously against giving President Coolidge blanket authority to halt the carrying out of the program at his will. It proposed that if he wanted a halt called, he would have to obtain a specific grant from congress.

CONDUCTOR DENIES 'LOST WIFE' IS DEAD

Chattanooga, Tenn., January 14.—(AP)—Harry C. Neilson, Southern railroad conductor held here on charges of murder and perjury in connection with the disapeparance of his aged wife last March, when quizzed today by Chief of Detectives Hackett and Detective Joe Paradiso, of the homicide squad, reiterated his first contention that he knew nothing of the woman's whereabouts.

However, the accused admitted that he had visited the home of Mrs. John Hall, where, the police charge, he roomed with his paramour, Frances Williams, alias Lucile Cook, also under arrest in connection with the case. The woman told detectives that shortly after Neilson's divorce bill was dismissed with the admonition from Circuit Judge Oscar Yarnell, "find the woman," Neilson asked her to take a trip with him in order that he might dispose of several boxes of garbage which he said the garbage service would not remove.

Dumped Along Highway.

These cardboard boxes, the woman stated, were dumped from an automobile along the highway between this city and Birmingham, and it is the theory of the police that the boxes contained the dismembered parts of the body of Mrs. Neilson.

Detective Paradiso, who brought Neilson back from Meridian, Miss., where he was arrested, said today that Neilson had stated that "things seemed to be very dark," and appeared to be very nervous over his predicament.

Hold Hearing Tuesday.

On application of Judge Nathan Bachman, of counsel employed by relatives of Mrs. Neilson, the preliminary hearing of the accused was postponed until next Tuesday.

While Neilson testified in his suit for divorce that his wife took all her clothing when she eloped with "P. M. McQueen" police say that Mrs. Williams was wearing part of the missing woman's apparel and her ring when arrested.

N. BOULEVARD LEAGUE IN FIRST 1928 MEETING

Installation of Mrs. R. E. Lee Reynolds as president, appointment of committees, outlining of a program for the year's work and adoption of a resolution urging all civic bodies to aid in abolishing "jay walking" through the restoration of street car stops at street corners instead of in the middle of blocks, featured the initial meeting of 1928 of the North Boulevard Park Civic league at the Virginia Avenue Baptist church. A musical program was rendered by Mrs. Ogle Muirhead, Mrs. Ruth Abernathy and Miss Annallou Curry.

W. T. GRANT CO. WILL TAKE OVER ATLANTA STORE

Nine women's wear stores, one in Atlanta, now operated by the Oscar Abel company under the name of Grant Ready-to-Wear company, will, on February 1, be taken over and controlled by the W. T. Grant Company Department stores, according to announcement Saturday.

The nine stores, located in Atlanta, St. Paul, Minn.; Erie, Pa.; Haverhill, Mass.; El Paso, Texas; New Britain, Conn.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Rochester, N. Y., and Portsmouth, Ohio, will on February 1 become a subsidiary company to the W. T. Grant company, created for the purpose of using surplus space not required by the company's regular 25c to $1.00 merchandise, the announcement continues.

"Emphasizing style at popular prices will be the policy of these stores. This step will in no way influence the present price policies of the Grant company, which will continue as heretofore to specialize on 25c to $1.00 merchandise," the announcement concludes.

83 NEW STUDENTS ENTER UNIVERSITY

Athens, Ga., January 14.—(Special.)—Eighty-three new regular students registered at the University of Georgia for the spring term since the opening of college after the Christmas holidays, bringing the total number of students registered for the 1927-28 term to 1,661 against 1,585 for the total of 1926-27.

Officials of the university state that several more students will register in the next few days and that the total for the year will probably reach 1,700 for the year.

AGNES SCOTT ROLL REACHES CAPACITY

The day when the college faced the annual problem of filling its classrooms and dormitories with students, and worked toward this end by widespread solicitation each spring, has come to a close.

This, at least, is the case at Agnes Scott college, the capacity of which has long been taxed. Applications for admission to Agnes Scott already are deluging the registrar's office, although the 1929 session is nearly a year distant, S. G. Stukes, registrar, stated yesterday.

"This is not unusual," Stukes explained. "We go through the same thing every year around this time, and it keeps us very busy checking up on the applicants who at present are in high or preparatory schools."

For several years, the registrar said, the college has not been able to accommodate the large numbers seeking admission. Throughout the year, he said, his office is flooded with requests for information regarding requirements for entrance and applications for enrollment.

These requests entail continued work, Stukes pointed out.

"There are four main considerations for the acceptance of a student," he explained. "First, the excellence of her preparation, as shown by a certificate or an examination; second, her character and ability, which is ascertained by means of testimonials and a psychological test; third, a satisfactory health report, and, fourth, the date of her application for admission."

Since full data cannot be obtained until the closing of the various preparatory or high schools, it was set forth, it is not possible, as a rule, to give definite acceptance of an applicant before June 15. Selections usually are made between June 15 and July 1.

Montgomery, Ala., January 14.—(AP)—Opposition to the Swing-Johnson bill relative to the Boulder dam proposition was voiced by the south Alabama editors at their midwinter meeting here today.

Chicago Weather Breaks All Records For January Heat

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—The highest temperature to which the mercury ever climbed in Chicago on January 14 was reached here at 2 o'clock today when it stood at 60. DICKINSON TO ASK NEW INVESTIGATION OF BROKERS' LAW

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—A resolution calling for an investigation of the loaning of money by federal reserve member banks to stock brokers has been prepared for introduction next week by Representative Dickinson, republican, Iowa.

In announcing his plan for an inquiry today the Iowan declared that his measure also would authorize the federal reserve board to regulate the loaning of funds to stock operators for speculation by the member banks. Members banks in western states, in order to have a liquid portion of their deposits, Mr. Dickinson said, often place large amounts in New York for the loans to the brokers.

Davison-Paxon Company Ready To Open Exhibit Of Georgia Art Monday

Daily Lectures by Experts on Art Will Feature Elaborate Display; Artists' Work Will Be Shown.

Nearly 500 exhibits of Georgia artists who have gained high recognition for their works will be on public display for ten days beginning Monday, on the sixth floor of Davison-Paxon company, which is sponsoring the elaborate exhibition with indorsement and cooperation of the Atlanta Art association.

An outstanding feature of the movement, intended to encourage artistic development in Atlanta and throughout this state, will be the daily lectures on art by experts. Lectures will start at 2:15 o'clock in the afternoons, while the exhibit will be open from 9 o'clock in the mornings until 5 o'clock in the afternoons.

Seven $50 Prizes.

Works of 61 artists from Atlanta and 53 from other sections of the state were being arranged at Davison-Paxon company Saturday, transforming the sixth floor into a veritable art museum. Three hundred and fifty dollars in cash prizes of $50 each will be distributed to artists whose exhibits are selected as best in their classifications. Funds for the prizes were contributed by Herbert W. Straus, of Macy & Co., of New York, with which Davison-Paxon company is affiliated.

The opening lecture on Monday, which will deal with "The Marriage of Art and Commerce," will be delivered by Robert C. Alston, introduced by J. Carroll Payne. The subsequent lectures are to be as follows: January 17, "Architecture of Today," by Harold Bush-Brown, introduced by Dr. M. L. Brittain; January 18, "Effect of Art in Our Every-Day Life," by R. A. Kline, introduced by Mrs. Frank Inman; January 19, "Development of the Small Home," by W. J. Sayward, introduced by Mrs. R. K. Rambo; January 20, "Interior Decoration," by Mrs. N. C. Plummer, introduced by R. L. Foreman; January 21, "Pottery, Its History," with demonstrations, by Professor A. V. Henry, introduced by Mrs. C. M. Jerome; January 23, "Handicrafts," by Mrs. A. C. Davis, introduced by Mrs. J. K. Ottley; January 24, "Color and Design, Science of, and Uses," by Miss Jean McKennon, introduced by Miss Jessie Muse, and January 25, "Paintings, Various Mediums, Value in Home," by Ralph Britt, introduced by J. J. Haverty.

Art Members Aid.

For the exhibition each artist has been allowed three entries in each medium included in the seven classifications. The first classification consists of paintings in oil, water color and pastels; second, drawings in black and white and etchings; third, original designs for rugs, tapestries, textiles, block prints, book plates and architecture; fourth, pottery; fifth, hand weaving from original designs and feather fans; sixth, wood carvings and inlay work; seventh, sculpture, not to exceed 30 inches in height.

Preparations for the enormous undertaking were made by Davison-Paxon company officials in cooperation with a special committee of the Atlanta Art association, which will also serve as judge of awards and includes J. C. Payne, president; J. J. Haverty, Mrs. Frank Inman, Dr. M. L. Brittain, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Wilbur Kurtz, Mrs. C. M. Jerome, Mrs. A. P. Brantley and Miss Jessie Muse.

In discussing the exhibition in the last issue of "The City Builder," Mr. Payne stated, "The object of this exhibition is threefold: First, to show the development of the artistic spirit which has grown in Georgia during the past 25 or more years, and which is much greater than is generally known. Secondly, it is intended to strengthen and foster this artistic tendency and encourage in every way the youth of this state, who possess the God-given faculty of constructive and artistic talents, to persevere in their work which neither the state nor any municipality has seen fit to aid. Thirdly, these gentlemen by their exhibition desire to bring about cooperation between those whose talents lie in the creation of artistic and beautiful things and those who are sincerely interested in selling only such things as are in good taste."

Mrs. Crew in Charge.

This exhibit will reach people who never take the opportunity to visit museums, Mrs. Miriam Donalson Crew, director of public relations, Davison-Paxon company, and in charge of the exhibition stated. "If only those taking lunch in our store see it in passing through the gallery, this will be more than 600 person each day," she said. As hostesses for the exhibit there will be 28 Atlanta society women.

A few of the Atlanta artists whose works will be on display are Ralph M. Britt, Harold Bush-Brown, Lewis C. Gregg, Mrs. A. Farnsworth Drew, Don Carlos Du Bois, Miss Kate Edwards, Miss Mary Elizabeth Hutchinson, Wilbur G. Kurtz, Athos Menaboni, J. Bernard Shiffer, Mrs. James Osgood Wynn, and students of Georgia Tech. Some of the artists from other sections of Georgia included in the exhibition are Mrs. H. E. Ogden Campbell, New York city; Miss Valieria Chisolm, Savannah; Miss Alice J. Collins, Savannah; Miss Esther M. Crawford, Los Angeles; Miss Lila M. Cabiniss, Savannah; Miss Mary Cole Chaffee, New York; Phillip H. Giddens, New York; Miss Caroline Graf, New York; Miss Nell Choate Jones, New York; Christopher Murphy, Jr., Savannah; Miss Rosetta Rivers, Macon; Jack A. Spreng, Savannah; Edward S. Shorter, Savannah; Miss Lucie M. Stanton, Boston; Miss Nell Van Hook, New York, and Miss Virginia Woollie, Laguna Beach, Cal.

In line with the interest taken in art by officials of Davison-Paxon company and of Macy's, in New York, is the announcement that the first lot of 200 annotated photographs of famous Italian masterpieces, promised by Jesse Isadore Straus, president of Macy's, to the High Museum of Art here, has been received by J. J. Haverty.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

Georgia Quint Takes First Game From Tech Cagers, 33-30

Chicago Gets Twelve Title Tournaments

Leading Golfers Will Gather in Windy City for Season's Honors.

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—Four championship golf tournaments were added to the list to be held in Chicago next summer along with the national open and the Walker cup competition, making a dozen title events for this city.

The western amateur championship today was assigned to Bob O'Link club for August 20-25, while the western open was set for July 25-28 at North Shore club. The women's western was awarded at the same time to Indian Hill club, but selection of the date was deferred. Also, the western junior was credited to Chicago, with time and links to be announced later.

The western amateur title is now held by Bon Stein, of Seattle, who defeated Eddie Held, of St. Louis, in the finals at the Seattle Golf club last year, the second time the event had been played on the Pacific coast. The women's western crown also rests on the western seaboard, Mrs. Harry Pressler, of Los Angeles, having won it at Lake Geneva last year by defeating Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, in the last round.

The western open title now has its home in Rochester, N. Y., Walter Hagen having won it for the second consecutive time at Olympic fields, scoring a splendid 281 for 72 holes over two difficult links.

Four Out of Chicago.

Outside Chicago, there will be only four national meets: The national amateur at Brae Burn, Boston, September 10-15; women's national, Hot Springs, Va., September 24-29; national public links, Philadelphia, July 31-August 4, and the professional golfers' championship, as yet unplaced.

Chicago, posing as "national golf capital" with so many tourneys and more than 200 golf clubs, will start the season with the regional qualifying rounds for the national open on June 11 and 10 days later will watch Tommy Armour, of Washington, defend his national open title over the No. 3 course at Olympic fields, the largest golf club in the world with four 18-hole links and a clubhouse containing 14 acres of floor space. Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, having foresworn defense of the British open crown, which he won last year for the second consecutive time with a record score of 285, plans to recover the American open title if possible.

Then will come the western open with virtually the same field as the national open, struggling over the links of the North Shore club, which has been groomed into championship condition with every promise of making Sir Walter fight his best to obtain the title for the third year in a row.

Less than month later, the western amateur will hold forth at Bob O'Link, on the North Shore also, and one of the few golf clubs to bar women. For several years, since the fair sex was excluded, Bob O'Link has spent all its money on making a golf course that will resist most of the attacks on par.

After a 10-day respite, the international team matches between Britain and the United States will be played at Chicago Golf club on the far west side, August 30-September 1.

The women's western will likely be wedged in between two of these events. Indian Hills was venue for the event in 1918, when Elaine Rosenthal took the title, defeating Frances Hadfield, of Milwaukee, in the finals.

Chicago will also hold a half dozen regional events to which some of the players from all over the country will be eligible.

Tennis Tourney Scenes Selected

New York, January 14.—(AP)—The annual tennis clashes between east and west will be played on the courts of the West Side tennis club at Forest Hills, the officials of the Eastern Lawn Tennis association decided today at the annual meeting here.

The men's and women's eastern sectional turf court championships were awarded to the Westchester-Biltmore club at Rye, N. Y. The New York Athletic club received the eastern men's clay court championship while the women's clay court tournament went to the Montclair A. C.

The association voted in favor of rescinding the rule against the use of spikes in turf court play and instructed its delegates to vote for the revocation of the rule at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association next month.

Hornsby Trade Gives Impetus to Ballyhoo

It Caused Consternation Among Baseball Fans and That Is the First Essential of Ballyhoo.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(Copyright, 1928, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, January 14.—The interdepartmental trade by the New York Giants, whereby Mr. Rogers Hornsby is transferred from the New York department to the Boston department, has caused some consternation and thus may be considered a highly successful transaction, because consternation is one of the essential elements used in the production of ballyhoo.

It will be recalled that there was great consternation in St. Louis just about a year ago over the trade of the same Mr. Hornsby to the Giants. The consternation was so lively that some of the more important St. Louis business men interested in other lines of trade so far forgot their business ethics as to recommend a public boycott of Mr. Sam Breadon's business. This was carrying consternation to a harmful extreme, and Mr. Breadon was forced to remind his fellow business men that while he did not wish to discourage popular interest in the affairs of the St. Louis Cardinals, his business was a business after all, differing only in certain superficial aspects from the hide and leather business, the sash, door and general building materials business and the drugs and chemicals business.

He appealed to them as business men to moderate their consternation to a reasonable degree and upon reconsideration they decided that business was business, even in the baseball industry, and that there was justice in Mr. Breadon's request. And so it transpired that during the past summer the consternation having been allowed to cool in accordance with the formula, was converted into ballyhoo of a very high grade, and Mr. Breadon's firm, far from languishing in the malaise of a boycott, experienced the most prosperous season in its history.

Means Little to Gotham.

In the present instance there is no likelihood that the consternation of the New York customers and business men will reach harmful proportions. In the first place, in a city where Thomas A. Edison, Ed Winn, Babe Ruth, E. H. Sothern, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, John Erskine, David Belasco and 50,000 others, who command space on page one by their mere appearance in other cities are mere people in a crowd, Mr. Hornsby's transfer from the Giants' main plant to the Boston branch is not a public calamity, but merely exciting news.

In the second place, Mr. Hornsby is not a man of endearing personal qualities, and if the crowd in the subway has any formulated feeling at all regarding him, it is not a feeling of affection, because Mr. Hornsby recently took his bookmaker to law in the St. Louis courts and had

Debating Warren Seeks Battle With Gene

Raleigh, N. C., January 14.—(AP)—Add Warren, former national intercollegiate heavyweight champion and tackle on the University of North Carolina football squad, hopes to argue his way to a fistic match with Gene Tunney through a preliminary battle of words.

Warren, who knocked out Frankie Lewis, of Washington, D. C., in his third professional bout last night, has challenged Tunney to a test of forensic ability. If Warren beats Tunney on the debating floor he has hopes that the champion might consent to continue the argument in the ring.

The young collegian is willing to debate on any subject and proposes that Tunney meet him in New York city on a public rostrum. He is willing to let the champion choose the question.

Ringside Card For Tuesday Is Announced

Wood Pace and Jimmy McDowell, Lightweights, Mix in Prelim.

Four matches fairly bristling with fiery action is the promise of the Ringside club management, which makes public today its entire card for Tuesday night, featuring Ted Goodrich, Atlanta welterweight, against Bogie Sash, of Birmingham, in a match that bids to be the best main event staged here.

Goodrich, in three battles here, has knocked over three opponents in quick time—Spike Webb, Bill Morris and Dixie Sullivan—and with those achievements he has won a flock of admirers who are booming him for a big shot with an eastern adversary.

Walk Miller, in fact, has become interested in the youngster, whose real name is Lawrence Corley, and has invited him to go to New York and join his stable. After he has acquired a little more experience in bouts around here and polishes up his punch, he intends to accept, that is, provided Bogie Sash or some other ambitious battler does not check his winning dash.

Hard Hitting.

A lot of hard-hitting is predicted in this main bout Tuesday night, for Sash is no sorry walloper on his own hook. One of his latest triumphs was a two-round knockout over the champion of Cuba.

As a background for this slug-fest, the sextet of preliminary boys appear likely to afford a liberal mixture of boxing and slugging. Wood Pace, from Charlotte, and Jimmy McDowell, Augusta product, are the two enrolled for the light-heavyweight joust of six rounds which is billed to preced the main event. Eddie Willcott and Johnny Malone, middleweights, and Jack Fezanda and Battling Athens, featherweights, will mix in the other two scraps.

Jimmy Mayson, the matchmaker, is endeavoging to dismiss the idea in the mind of some fans that the Ringside shows are restricted to members only. Any fan, many or woman, can witness these bouts simply by paying the regular price of admission, and the club management welcomes everyone.

Take Longest Trip.

What is believed to be the longest trip ever undertaken by a college basketball team kept the University of Illinois netters busy during the Christmas holidays. They visited Seattle, Wash., for a three-game series with the University of Washington five.

Women's Golf Increases At Amazing Rate

Glenna Collet Says Her Sex Has Made Rapid Advancement in Recent Years.

Pinehurst, N. C., January 14.—(AP) Women's golfing skill has increased astoundingly during the past few years, says Glenna Collett, former national women's champion, and she sees three good reasons for it.

First, women get a chance to observe the play of men professionals more than in the past because of tournaments and exhibition matches in all sections of the country.

Second, competition has grown to the point that a player can not "lag" and win. Competition has also increased the general interest.

Third, women's tournaments have grown so numerous that so-called tournament experience can be had easily, thus giving the player an opportunity to put practice conclusions into competitive matches.

Glenna Plays Daily.

Miss Collett, spending the winter here, plays a round daily and is otherwise going through close training in an effort to regain some of her laurels during the spring and summer season.

"You know, it takes practice to be in winning form and I need more of it," she says. "With the constantly increasing competition one has to be at top form to win. But, despite the fact we have a number of fine players among the youngsters, there are yet most of the women who were winning a few years ago still keeping close to the top.

"And, too, others are beginning to win that really could not be called 'youngsters,' but whose game is just beginning to shape.

"Then, by seeing the professionals, women have been able to watch and compare the swing, the stroke and style of these good players. Especially is Bobby Jones watched wherever he plays.

"Then, in our tournaments we have a chance to put these observations into actual practice. Women are also studying the game scientifically."

In speaking of the more experienced players, Miss Collett said:

"Among those who are not as active in tournaments as they were a few years ago are Miss Edith Cummings, Mrs. Quentin Feitner and Mrs. Ronald Barlow. On the other hand, we cannot overlook that most of the titles are held by the players of long experience, and though Miss Marion Turpie, Miss Maureen Orcutt and Miss Virginia Van Wie are coming along well, a great deal of the competitive spirit is being carried along by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser and Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn."

Twin Cities a Natural.

Minneapolis, January 14.—(AP)—In the parlance of the ring, Minneapolis and St. Paul, the twin cities, are a "natural" set of opponents, and promoters cash in heavily on the rivalry that exists between them. Down the line from baseball to hockey, and especially in boxing when rival sons of the two cities are matched, they find a lucrative field in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

RICHARD VS. SCOTTY

Will the terrible Mr. Rough Richard Daviscourt be able to do anything like this to "Scotty" MacDougal when they meet? These two rough and ready exponents of the bone breaking profession will lock horns at the city auditorium Wednesday night in what promises to be one of the greatest matches ever staged in an Atlanta ring. Daviscourt is shown above applying a crotch hold and armlock. This is the first meeting of these boys.

BOBBY JONES EXPLAINS WHY HE REFUSED GIFT OF HOME

In a letter to contributors to the fund to give Bobby Jones a $50,000 home Bob explained his refusal of the gift which was announced last Saturday night in New York.

Bob's letter follows:

"As a contributor to the fund which was raised to purchase a home for me, I feel that you are entitled to some explanation of the action which I took last week in New York when I announced that I should not retain the gift.

"At the time the gift was made to me it appealed to me as the most generous and sincere tribute which a man's friends could pay him, and it was accepted by me in the spirit in which I knew it was tendered. You and I know that there was nothing connected with the subscription of the fund, or the use to which it was to be put, which was not entirely proper. A portion of the general public is aware of that fact also, but it seems that another and respectable portion entertains some doubts. In other words, criticisms from various sources have come to my notice, and it appeared to me in the light of them that not only was amateur golf in danger of serious injury wholly unjustified by the facts, but both my Atlanta friends and I were apt to be placed in an awkward position, which was at the same time a position in which we did not deserve to be placed.

"It was to avoid any chance of misunderstanding that I decided that the best thing to do was to return the home. As I remarked when I accepted the gift, by far the most important part of it was the testimonial and tribute which my friends sought to make me. I am now in possession of that testimonial. I shall take steps to preserve it by completing the book with the names of the subscribers, which was intended for the completed home. I shall treasure that book always, and nothing can take from me what it holds.

"In returning the home I am losing only the least part of the gift, although some might say the substantial part, and I feel that whatever loss there is to me will be more than made up by the gain to amateur golf.

"My chief regret in the matter is that it seemed desirable to make the announcement from New York. I felt that I owed it to my friends in Atlanta to show them the courtesy of informing them of my decision before it was announced to the public, but when the U. S. G. A. approved your action in making the gift, and mine in receiving it, as proper, it seemed to me that the moment had arrived for a final announcement. In making that I had an infinite satisfaction born of the knowledge that you were my friends and would both understand and approve.

"I am writing this letter simply to make it known to my friends in Atlanta, who have so generously honored me, that my gratitude and appreciation have not one whit lessened because I cannot receive the benefit of their gracious gift. I shall always remember the kindness.

"With kindest personal regrets, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

"ROBERT T. JONES, JR."

CORBETT'S VISIT HERE RECALLS SULLIVAN FIGHT

JAMES KAYOED BOSTON STRONG BOY IN 21ST.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

High lights on one of the most famous pugilistic battles ever fought in the ring are brought to light with the forthcoming visit to Atlanta of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, who won the title in the memorable 21-round fight with the redoubtable John L. Sullivan at New Orleans La., September 7, 1892. Corbett comes to Atlanta Monday as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater where he appears with his partner, Bobby Barry, famous comedian, in a sketch entitled "Taking the Air."

All details of the record-breaking fight, for that day, were covered thoroughly by The Constitution. Colonel E. C. Bruffy, famous reporter and sporting authority, went to New Orleans and "covered" the fight for this paper. In addition The Constitution carried the full news dispatches and also stories covering the local reception fight fans gave the battle. The stories ran four columns on the front page and several columns on the inside. Eight drawings accompanied the stories. For some reason, not now recalled. The Constitution of September 8 was a six-column paper, the only six-column paper in the files of that time, all the other issues being seven columns in width.

The Constitution's lead covering the fight is as follows: "Corbett is champion of the world. The great battle resulted in a defeat for the man who has for years been acknowledged the best man in the world. The big Californian right nobly earned his title. Briefly told it was youth against old age and youth won. Sullivan had seen his best days."

After relating vividly the story of the battle and after depicting picturesque scenes at the ringside Colonel Bruffy rose to supreme heights in describing the ovation the new champion received on his way from the Olympic Athletic club to the St. Charles hotel.

The twenty-first round, the last of the fight as shown by The Constitution files, is as follows:

"Corbett was the first to respond to time. Sullivan's left was very weak and he seemed anxious to wait. His opponent was with him however and saw the championship bee in his bonnet. He landed a left to the champion's nose. Sullivan was trying for a right though he made no attempt to send it home. Sullivan was

Battle of Ruffians Seats on Sale Monday

Daviscourt Arrives Here Tomorrow for Bout With MacDougal Which Is Expected To Be Plenty Rough.

Two important events in connection with the wrestling show at the city auditorium Wednesday night are scheduled to take place Monday. One is the scheduled arrival of Rough Richard Daviscourt, who meets "Scotty" MacDougal in the two-hour feature of the mat card, and the other is the special sale of front row tickets to that setto.

Matchmaker John Contos is willing to reward those fans, who dare sit on the front row and hence Chess' place Monday at noon will undertake a special sale of front row seats, which will retail much cheaper than tickets in the ringside section.

As there are only 96 front row tickets available, Contos expects a rush for those choice ducats and has instructed Chess' place to adhere strictly to the rule of "first come—first served."

Richard Comes From California.

Daviscourt is coming here all of the way from his Los Angeles home for the sole purpose of proving that MacDougal is little more than a weak imitator when it comes to being rough in a wrestling match. A couple of seasons ago Daviscourt convinced the Atlanta fans that he is the meanest man in the mat game, but now there are those who believe that MacDougal is perfectly capable of disputing his claim.

In all of his matches at the auditorium this season MacDougal has shown rare ability at torturing his opponents and, in addition to that, he has shown flashes of real wrestling ability. Hence the cash customers seem certain of rousing action, regardless of what tactics the two grapplers may pursue Wednesday night.

Daviscourt is being guaranteed $750 for his appearance here Wednesday night, while MacDougal has nothing better than the privilege of a percentage for his work. However, his share is likely to mount into real money, for Matchamker John Contos expects the show to draw the biggest crowd of the season.

Jones in Prelim.

In order that the fans may be certain of getting plenty of wrestling entertainment Contos has arranged for a one-hour preliminary between Paul Jones and Ivan Mickaloff, the Russian, who came so near beating MacDougal in the latter's last appearance at the city auditorium.

In addition to Chess' place the advance sale of tickets is being handled through the Piedmont Hatters and the Piedmont Hotel cigar stand. The special front row tickets are available only at Chess' place.

Fans Demand Explanation Of Rajah Deal

Second Sensational Trade by Giants Is Expected by Experts.

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—The most sensational and unexpected trade ever engineered in the history of baseball, in which Rogers Hornsby of the Giants was sent to the Boston Braves for Frank Hogan and Jimmy Welch, may be the forerunner of another startling trade by the New York club.

There is a gap to fill at second base and only Andy Cohen, the young Jewish star who was with Buffalo last season, is on hand to fill it. Cohen did well in the International league last year, but it is doubtful if the Giants will take a gambling chance on him to fill Hornsby's shoes.

Demand Explanation.

Too, the Giants must do something to win back public favor. The reaction to the Hornsby trade was tremendously against the Giants, and if McGraw's club should happen to get a bad start, the fans might forsake the Polo Grounds for Yankee stadium.

The fans have taken the Hornsby incident to heart and thousands are writing to the New York newspapers demanding that the Giant officials explain their reasons for trading the outstanding player on the club.

Rumors of a three-cornered deal in which the Giants, Robins and Phillies would figure, with the Giants getting Fresco Thompson, the Phillies' star second baseman, refused to be quieted in spite of lack of official confirmation.

Strange things are happening around the Giants' baseball office these days. John McGraw disappeared suddenly just before the Hornsby trade was announced, and is now in Florida. Jim Tierney, secretary, was out of the city today and Charles A. Stoneham, president of the club, has preferred to make himself unreachable by newspaper men since the day of the trade.

Trade Expected.

Since the addition of Welch gives the Giants five left-handed hitters in the outfield, a trade involving one of these outer gardeners for a right-handed hitter might be negotiated.

Little importance is attached to the rumor that the Cubs are earnestly after Hornsby and are willing to give Kiki Cuyler and others to the Braves for him.

Now that Judge Fuchs has nucleus for a winning team he is not apt to trade Hornsby or any of the rest of his regulars.

The only trade the Braves are expected to make before the opening of the 1928 season is for a first-string catcher. A trade involving the Brooklyn receivers, Hargreaves, Henline or Deberry, may develop between the two clubs.

Champs Get Draw.

Paris, January 14.—(AP)—Johnny Cuthbert, featherweight champion of England, and Andre Routis, featherweight champion of France, fought 12 rounds to a draw today.

The scientific Englishman held off the rushes of the Frenchman and finished fresh, while Routis was exhausted.

Alec Expects To Win 20 Games

St. Louis, January 14.—(AP) Grover Cleveland Alexander, 40-year-old pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinals, was a visitor here today on his way south to get into training early for next season. Old Pete and Mrs. Alexander were motoring to Florida.

"I'll get an early start at getting the old arm in shape," Alexander said. "We'll make our headquarters at Avon Park and tour the state until the Cards arrive. Yes, I expect to win at least 20 games this year if I don't break my neck."

Alexander said he was in good physical condition after spending the winter months hunting in Nebraska.

Bulldogs Face 6 Conference Games in '28

Atlanta or Athens May Get Annual Tech-Georgia Classic.

Athens, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—Georgia's red-coated Bulldogs will play nine games on the gridiron in 1928, it was announced today by Dr. S. V. Sanford, faculty chairman of athletics at the University of Georgia.

Six of Georgia's opponents will be Southern conference members, while the Athenians again will journey to the Yale bowl at New Haven in an attempt to make it two straight over the northern Bulldogs.

Virginia, an ancient rival, and Clemson are missing from the list. Inability to get together on dates with officials of the Charlottesville institution was foreseen early last season, and the announcement that the Cavaliers will not be played comes as no surprise.

Two Games Unsettled.

Places for two of the games are as yet undecided. This applies to the encounter with Georgia Tech, since it has been announced that either Atlanta or Athens will be settled upon as the battle site. The fact that Georgia may have a new stadium constructed at Athens in time for this contest is believed by followers of the institution to be the reason for the uncertainty.

Florida is the other opponent with a game location still pending decision. The complete schedule follows:

October 6: Mercer at Athens.
October 13: Yale at New Haven.
October 20: Furman at Athens.
October 27: Tulane at Athens (Homecoming).
November 3: Auburn at Columbus.
November 10: Florida (place undecided).
November 17: Louisiana State at Athens.
November 29: Alabama at Birmingham.
December 8: Georgia Tech (either Atlanta or Athens).

Catcher Hamby Sold.

Toledo, Ohio, January 14.—(AP)—Sanford Hamby, catcher with the New York Giants part of last season, was purchased outright tonight from the Hartford club of the Eastern league by the Toledo club of the American association. The amount of cash involved was not announced.

BulldogsCome From Behind To Win Game

Keen Leads Scoring; Heecke Leads White and Gold Attack.

BY WHITNER CARY.

In a game featured by the traditional heartbreaking struggle that goes hand in hand with all Tech-Georgia encounters, the basketball team of the latter school defeated the Jacket cagers Saturday night 33 to 30 on the Tech floor before a crowd that filled every seat.

It was one of those affairs where the lead swings from first one side to the other, with no team ever having a margin of safety. Hence, besides one of the hardest fought engagements of the local season, it was one of the most exciting. From the moment Tech caged that first foul to lead by one point until the final whistle it was anybody's game. As a matter of fact the lead switched no less than three times in the final half.

Although Georgia got the tip off practically every time during the first half the passing and floor work of the Jackets showed a superiority that enabled them to lead at the half by the score of 17 to 14.

During this mad half which saw both teams fighting desperately the work of Nick George, Tech guard, stood out. Nick was all over the court. His passing was splendid, his dribbling of the highest order and his feeding and shooting sensational at times. In fact this aggressive guard was easily the star for the Jackets during the entire game.

Georgia Gets Going.

With the start of the second half, the Georgia team began writing a different story. They began to work the ball down the floor in better style, were following their shots in improved fashion and what was more to the point the oval was time and again going through the hoop. Led by Florence, who contributed some spectacular shooting during the evening, the Georgians began an attack that gave them the lead, 29 to 19, a few minutes after the beginning of the final half. A moment later Keen, who had been playing well all evening, caged a basket from a difficult angle and the Bulldogs were leading by three points.

Heeke found the loop on a free throw and this was followed by Martin adding two points to give the Athenians a four-point lead. At this juncture the Jackets made their most determined stand during the second half. In quick succession, George, Harris and Player found the basket and the scoreboard showed Tech leading, 26 to 25. Keen made a lone point for Georgia during this wild Jacket rampage.

With ten minutes left to play and but one point separating the teams, the play became even fiercer. Palmer put the Bulldogs in the lead, 27 to 26, and followed by adding another goal heaved from an awkward angle. From this point on Tech was unable to even tie the count. Goldie's long shot, one of the prettiest of the game, made five minutes before the final whistle, got the Jackets within striking distance, at 30 to 28.

Frightful Pace.

Both teams had been going at a frightful pace up to this time. It was a pace that could not be kept up forever and for a short while a lull eased the fierce play. This was soon broken when Martin found an opening.

With but a few minutes to play, Tech began a desperate rally. But it was a rally that fell short by three points. Players found the loop from long range and Palmer ended the night's scoring by caging a foul.

Florence, Palmer and Keen were the leading scorers for Georgia. Player's George and Heeke led the attack for the Jackets.

Lineup and Summary.

GEORGIA	POS.	TECH
Florence (9)	f	(8) Player
Keen (10)	f	(2) Harris
Drew (1)	c	(10) Heeke
Palmer (9)	g	(8) George
Martin (4)	g	Goldin

Referee: Sullivan, (A. A. C.); substitutions for Tech: Wilson (2), Bullard.

West's Luck Changes.

The year-end football battles in California brought a change of luck to the west coast teams, which had been losing consistently of late. The Stanford-Pittsburgh score of 7 to 6 makes east and west even up after Notre Dame's victory over Southern California by the same score.

SCOTCH KEEP FIRM HOLD ON 'OLD AGE' GOLF MARKS

ONE PLAYS GAME UP THROUGH NINETY-SIXTH YEAR

BY BASIL G. WYRICK,

Associated Press Golf Writer.

Chicago—(AP)—Scotland, birthplace of golf as now played, still retains some records in that sport, despite the capture of nearly all golfing titles by Americans. Notable are the achievements of the two Earls of Wemyss of the golfing area about Edinburgh.

It fell to one of the early nobles of this house, who lived during the latter half of the eighteenth century, to establish a record for prodigality, all pocketbook jokes about the Scotch to the contrary, notwithstanding.

He spent more than $500,000 to build a baronial mansion near his favorite golf links that he might better enjoy the sport and then abandoned the palatial residence because of dampness.

Possibly not more enthusiastic over golf than this prodigal baron, but surely more persistent than any other devotee of the game on record, was a later earl of the same house, Sir Francis.

Born in 1818, Sir Francis lived 96 years, keeping up his golf from youth until he died in 1914. While John D. Rockefeller shows his ruggedness by playing almost every day at the age of 88, the doughty Sir Francis celebrated his ninety-second birthday by playing a full round of 18 holes. That record, so far as golfing archives go, has never been equaled.

Furthermore, this eighth Earl of Wemyss, according to Jock Hutchison and other Scotch professionals now in America, was not unskillful. He had for partner in his eighty-seventh year no less notable a golfer than Harry Vardon.

In addition, the early set something of a "golf widow" record. Four years after his first wife died in 1896 he took his second bride and apparently made her a golf widow most of the remaining 14 years of his elongated life on the links.

Had Fine Minor Record.

Few pitchers ever have gone to the major leagues from the minors with better records than Lefty Grove, who left Baltimore to join Philadelphia with 26 victories to his credit and only six defeats against him.

Ask Waivers, Report.

Stove league gossip reports that the Pittsburgh Pirates are asking waivers on Hal Rhyne, infielder, who came up from the coast league with a big noise a few seasons ago.

TEX ON WILD GOOSE CHASE AS TUNNEY KILLS TURKEYS

:: Promoter Frantically Searches for Boy for Title Bout ::

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

New York, January 14.—Gene Tunney was down at Brunswck, Ga., today shooting turkeys while Tex Rickard frantically searched every nook and corner of the boxing world for a prominent heavyweight to meet the champion at the Yankee stadium in July.

Jack Sharkey, of Boston, upon whom Rickard had counted heavily as Tunney's opponent in the first defense of his title this summer, was moved back in the ranks by Tom Heeney, the former New Zealand blacksmith, Friday night, when the pair fought an unsatisfactory 12-round draw.

It was the second time Sharkey was within reach of a bout with Tunney, only to fail dismally when his big chance came. Jack Dempsey stopped Sharkey short of pugilistic fame at the Yankee stadium last summer. Unless Sharkey makes a remarkable recovery, he may never again be seriously considered as a heavyweight contender.

The bout bore out Tunney's opinion of Sharkey. The champion always has maintained that Sharkey thought too slowly to establish himself as a dangerous rival.

Not Done With Gob.

However, Rickard is not done with Sharkey. He has signed the Boston gob to meet an unnamed opponent in the Garden on March 12. Sharkey's opponent will be picked from Paolino, Knute Hansen and Nap Dorval.

Unless some heavyweight comes forward fast and furiously within the next two months, Rickard may have to use Jack Dempsey in the first heavyweight title bout of the summer instead of withholding him for the second bout in September. Of course, all ring plans involving Dempsey are uncertain until the ex-champion announces definitely that he will return to the ring. Jack is coming east soon and is expected to make his formal announcement of another comeback at that time.

The dark horse in the heavyweight elimination tournament is Jack Delaney, of Bridgeport, who recently was transferred from Pete Reilly to Joe Jacobs for $50,000.

Jacobs has made himself rather obnoxious to Rickard by signing with Jim Mullen, the Chicago promoter, for Delaney to meet Tunney in Chicago this summer and by making other moves, one of which was to demand

Bill Mehlhorn Leads Field At Long Beach

Burns Up Course To Finish With 138 for 36 Holes.

Long Beach, Calif., January 14.—(AP)—Shooting a scorching 138 in the 36-hole qualifying round, "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., took a two-stroke lead today over a field of nationally known golf stars competing in the $2,500 Long Beach open.

Mehlhorn's card for today's 18 holes was 68, three strokes below par for the Long Beach municipal course. He took a 70 yesterday.

George von Elm, of Los Angeles, former amateur champion, finished the qualifying play as runner-up. His card of 71 today gave him an aggregate of 140 to carry into the 36-hole championship flight tomorrow.

Harry Cooper Next.

One stroke behind von Elm, the flashy "Lighthouse" Harry Cooper, of Los Angeles, with a one-stroke under par card of 70 for the day's play, which added to yesterday's round gave him a total of 141 strokes.

Leo Diegel, of New York, shattered par by two strokes in his round today, turning a card of 69 for an aggregate of 142 for the first two days play. Charles Seover, 16-year-old Los Angeles sensation, surprised everyone by continuing his consistent play, taking a 71 today, one stroke less than yesterday, for a total of 143.

Willard Hutchinson, of Pasadena, who led the field at the close of yesterday's play with a 67, reversed the figures today to 76 for a total card of 143. Five other finished at the 143 station, Joe Turnesa, of New York, turning in individual rounds of 72-71; John Black, of Oakland, 70-73; Leonard Schmutte, Lima, Ohio, 70-73; Al Espinosa, of Chicago, 72-71, and Larry Nabholtz, Cleveland, Ohio, 73-70.

MacDonald Smith, distinguished Long Island, N. Y., stylist, winner of the recent Palos Verdes and Los Angeles open tournaments, finished his qualifying play with 144 strokes, in a tie with four others. His individual rounds for the two days' play were 72-72. The others were Billy Burke, New York, 71-73; Tommy Armour, Washington, national open champion, 73-71; Dick Linares, Long Beach, 71-73, and Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 71-73.

Five Have 145.

Five other well-known golfers occupied positions in the 145 division. Al Watrous, noted Grand Rapids, Mich., pro, had a 74 and a 71; Willie Hunter, of Los Angeles, California open champion, 72-73; Frank Walsh, Appleton, Wis., 72-73; G. D. Paulson, Fort Wayne, Ind., 76-69, and Eric Bannister, Winnipeg, 73-72.

Ed Dudley, Hollywood, had a 72 and a 74, for a total of 146, while Bobby Cruickshank, wee New Yorker, had a total of 148 a 75 and a 73. Angel de la Torre, of New York, with 75-74; Emmett Killian, Colorado Springs, Colo., 75-74, and Ernest Penfold, Minneapolis, with a 74-75 each, had 149's.

The 36-hole championship flight will be played over the Virginia County club course tomorrow with the low 64 scorers and ties at the end of today's play contesting.

MERCER BEARS AND CLEMSON PLAY MONDAY

Macon, Ga., January 14.—(Special) After a successful road trip through Tennessee and north Georgia, the Mercer Bears will return home Sunday, and Monday night will open the home season against the Clemson Tigers.

The tilt Monday night, first since renewal of athletic relations between Mercer and Clemson, is expected to draw a full house.

Clemson this season is coached by Josh Cody, former Mercer basketball mentor, and news reaching Macon has it that Cody has a very strong quintet. Clemson has played some strong teams of South Carolina.

Mercer to date has played only three games, having opened the season against Vanderbilt Friday night. The entire team, however, took a Christmas jaunt through south Georgia and won eight out of nine games played. In opening the season against Vanderbilt Friday, the Bears had to defeat almost the same team which won the southern conference championship last year. Mercer finally won by a 7-point margin. Then Friday night Coach Moore's team played the Middle Tennessee Teachers and defeated them.

After the game with Clemson Mercer will begin getting ready for the two games here Friday and Saturday nights with Citadel, the team which defeated Mercer in the finals of the S. I. A. A. tournament in Charleston last March. Only one man is lost this year to the Citadel team and the boys from South Carolina appear to be in tournament form.

N. O. HANDICAP CUP AWARD IS SELECTED

New Orleans, La., January 14.—Out of more than a score of designs there was selected the model of a $2,500 gold cup to be presented the winner of the New Orleans handicap, the fourth renewal of which will be run at the fair grounds on February 3. The cup will be awarded in addition to the $50,000 purse which also goes to the victor.

The winning design for the trophy was selected by a committee presided over by Miss Ella Miriam Wood, noted New Orleans portrait painter, whose mural decoration of "New Orleans Welcoming the Nations" is the chief decorative feature of the international trade exhibit here. The other members of the committee were William McG. Keefe, of the Times-Picayune; Al Tauzier, of the Item-Tribune, and Harry Martinez, of the States. The selection of the committee was unanimous.

The cup chosen was a Roman design, of solid gold, 14 inches high, set on an onyx pedestal, ornamented with a golden garland of magnolia leaves and blossoms. The two handles of the cup terminate in portrait heads of thoroughbred horses. For the present these will merely be conventionalized thoroughbreds, of base metal, temporarily to be a part of the cup. After the race, two portraits of the winning horse will be cast in solid gold and will form the upper terminals of the vessel's handles. The design was the work of Coleman Adler, of New Orleans.

The finished trophy after its presentation, may serve as a museum piece if the victorious owner so desires. Both the cup and the purse will be presented to the victor by Mayor William Hale Thompson, of Chicago, who, with an official party of 14, will be the guest of the Jockey club here on this occasion.

Hornsby Aftermath

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—Rogers Hornsby was turned down by the Cincinnati Reds, Jack Hendricks, manager of that club, said here.

"The Giants approached me on Hornsby before he was offered to the Braves, but I turned him down," Hendricks said. "I didn't want him for several reasons, besides I have the best second baseman in baseball in Critz."

Chicago, January 14.—(United News.)—"That's going to win the pennant for us," President Veek, of the Chicago Cubs, said when asked what he thought about the Hornsby trade.

St. Louis, January 14.—(United News.)—"I don't think it would be becoming to me to comment on the Hornsby trade," Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, said. "No matter how great a ball player Hornsby is, I don't think the Cardinals could consider his services again since he was let out by us when he was manager of the club."

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, refused to comment on the Hornsby trade.

"That's their business, and I don't want to give my opinion on it," he said.

St. Louis, January 14.—(United News.)—Phil Ball, president of the St. Louis Browns, said that Rogers Hornsby was traded to the Braves because "Jess Stoneham didn't care for him."

When asked about the rumor that the Braves were owned by the Giants, Ball replied:

"I know nothing about the National league; but it's just gossip."

Pittsburgh, January 14.—(United News.)—"I have nothing to say about the Hornsby trade," was the only comment of Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Cleveland, January 14.—(United News.)—"Being in a different league, it would be very unethical for me to say anything about the Hornsby trade," Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, said.

"However, John McGraw must have had a very good reason for such a transfer."

Wisconsin Winter Sports Booming

Madison, Wis., January 14.—Winter sports will be made a permanent unit of the University of Wisconsin in athletic program in accordance with a decision reached by the department officials today. In this step taken by Director George Little provision is made for a regular winter sports team, composed of skaters and skiiers, to compete on a similar basis with other sports.

Johnny Farquhar, hockey coach, will act as winter sports director, with Tom Lieb coaching the skaters and Bob Nohr supervising the work of the skii artists. This move to give a substantial rating to winter sports at Wisconsin may lead the way to an increased interest in skiing and skating among middle western colleges and universities.

Power League

The Gas and Electric team won the first half of the Power league season. The gas boys were too powerful for the other quintets, and went through the list without a defeat. The operators and "D" division both gave them some tough opposition, but they were too experienced to be beaten.

The second half of the season will be played in two divisions, the Gas and Electric Operators and "D" division teams being in the first class, and the "A," "B" and "C" division teams making up the second group. The coming games will determine the winner in each class and the winners in the two classes will play each other for the championship of the second half of the season. The winner in the second half will play the winner of the first half for the Power league championship.

A team will be chosen from all members to play some outside games as the all-star aggregation of the Power league. Several games have already been booked tentatively.

Following is the standing:

The Standing.

Team—	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Gas and Electric	5	0	1.000

"D" Division	3	2	.600
"C" Division	2	3	.400

Two World's Champions Meet Again

N. Y. Champ and N. B. A. Title Holder To Fight It Out Soon.

BY F. G. VOSBURGH.

New York, January 14.—(AP)—For the second time in less than two months, two "world's champions" are to meet in the ring at Madison Square Garden January 27 to settle once and for all which one should wear the crown.

The battlers are Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, who is recognized as featherweight champion by the National Boxing association and so considered in every state but New York, and Tony Canzoneri, of this city, who the New York state athletic commission says is champion.

This effective method of finding the real champ was instituted last month when Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, upheld the judgment of the New York state solons by winning a decision over Jimmy Slattery, of Buffalo, N. Y., the N. B. A.'s choice.

Experiment Liked.

The experiment was so satisfactory to all concerned, including the Madison Square Garden box office, that it appears to have come into permanent favor.

A battle even now is pending for flyweight supremacy between Frenchy Belanger, of Toronto, Canada, N. B. A. "champion," and Izzy Schwartz, of New York, N. Y., state "champion," although that leaves out Newsboy Brown, who defeated Johnny McCoy, the California "champion."

These "battles of champions" even threaten to displace in favor the more ordinary meeting between the champion and the well known "logical contender."

Argument Starts.

Neither Canzoneri nor Bass would deign to sign himself as a mere "logical contender," nor would Tom Donohue, of Hartford, Conn., and the N. B. A., or William Muldoon, of the New York commission, permit his standard-bearer to do so.

Out of this situation arose the fact that neither boxer was willing to take the short end of the purse, thus rendering match-making difficult.

"Not that the money matters," they explained, "but it's the principle of the thing. I'm the champ and I'm supposed to get the champ's end."

In the Canzoneri-Bass case this has been ironed out by making purses approximately the same and the match now is definite with the presence of Mr. Donohue and Mr. Muldoon as cheerleaders practically assured as an added attraction.

Hudkins, Tendler Battle on Friday

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—Returning to New York for his first bout since he met Sergeant Sammy Baker last summer, Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, will meet Lew Tendler, of Philadelphia, in a ten-round bout in Madison Square Garden, Friday night.

Hudkins arrived here Tuesday and has been in active training at Gus Wilson's Orangeburg, N. Y., gymnasium.

Tendler is training in his private gymnasium at Philadelphia.

Andy Di Vodi and Charley Rosen, junior welterweights, will meet in the eight-round semifinal.

Eighty Entries For Dixie Race

Baltimore, January 14.—(AP)—Eighty entries for the Dixie, the mile and three-sixteenths handicap to be run on the first day of the Pimlico Spring meeting were announced today by the Maryland Jockey club. Among the nominations, representing 47 interests, are J. R. Macomber's Petee-Wrack, a colt that ran second to Glade in the Pimlico futurity last year; Stolling Player, a half-brother to Call Boy, the last derby winner bought from the estate of the late Frank Curzon and entered by Carey T. Grayson, together with Knapsack; Grey Lag, coupled with Speedster as the Rancocas stable entry, and Walter J. Salmon's Display, that ran second to Mars in the 1927 Dixie. Harry Payne Whitney made the largest number of entries, with a list of six.

Buying and Selling Pugs Is Great Gamble

Joe Jacobs, Who Recently Purchased Jack Delaney, May Be Surprised if Latter Takes a Flop.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

When Pete Reilly sold Joe Jacobs his Jack Delaney contract for a flat $50,000. Pete turned a good piece of business, if someone happens to tap Delaney, just right, on the point of the chin in his next fight. Perhaps Pete figures something like that may happen. He made good money with Delaney. They thought Pete was crazy when he bought a contract for Delaney's services and paid $900 in cash for it. At that time Jack had just been knocked out by Augie Ratner, and Jack's hands were supposed to be broken beyond repair. The Delaney he turned over to Jacobs was a different article of commerce, with a good up to date fighting record (barring that one disaster last year when Jim Maloney, of Boston, failed to flop and won the decision.) Also a fairly good pair of hands and the prospect of being listed by Rickard among the potential challangers of Gene Tunney. If Delaney goes through a couple of good fights now the contract will be paid for and future income will be velvet for his manager. Delaney is one of the few really popular fighters now in the ring. He has personality, class, boxing skill, a soporific sock. If he just stays on his feet for a while he'll be up where the big money grows.

This buying and selling of fighter contracts is more or less a gamble.

There was the case of young Mr. Tunney, former marine and a pretty good light-heavyweight. Things didn't move fast enough for Mr. Tunney, who had ambition, so he bought his own contract from Doc Bagley, his manager, for $5,000. That was a good buy for Gene. He made a deal with Billy Gibson and started to go up into the money. They called Gene "American light-heavyweight champion." As a title it was more or less synthetic.

Battling Levinski had lost the championship to Carpentier, and Carpentier lost it to Siki, who was in turn beaten by Mike McTigue, who was an American and world's champion. But just about that time Tunney grew out of the class anyhow, so it didn't make much difference. Under Gibson's clever match-making, Tunney began to make money rapidly. He never had made much before fighting. At first he had to let the other fellows get the big end of the purses, but when they began to talk about matching him with Dempsey for the title, his earning power went up with a bound. Gibson got Tunney that chance with Dempsey. He drew down a manager's share of the $200,000 paid Tunney for the fight at Philadelphia. It looked as if Gibson might get into the millionaire class himself, being manager of a heavyweight champion just when heavyweight champions were getting the top-heavy price of something approaching $1,000,000 for a fight. But the agreement under which Bill managed Tunney ran out, and Gene, being a business man, dickered around a little with other managers and finally, according to report, signed up with Bill again, with Bill on a salary basis instead of a cut of the profits. At that Bill draws down not less than $100,000 a year for handling Tunney's matches and exhibitions, which leaves him a fair profit. Tunney does fairly well, too, with over $900,000 for his Chicago fight.

Unlike Old Days.

Quite a change from the old days when Jim Jeffries was the greatest of all world's champions. Jim was a young fellow just out of the boiler shop and doing a little sparring partner stunt for one Gallagher, in San Francisco. Gallagher went on a celebration after his fight and forgot to come back and pay Jim off. Penniless, Jim managed to get a fight with Dan Long, who is now a well known resident of Hollywood and likes to tell how hard Jim could hit in those days. Jim stopped Long and earned $1,000. He went on a mountain hunting trip, got pneumonia, was sick a long time, and when he was ready to start again was flat broke. Visiting San Francisco Jeffries dropped in to see Harry Corbett, brother of Jim Corbett, who was then world's champion and matched to fight Fitzsimmons at Carson. Harry was noted as a good sport, and he took a liking to the young boilermaker. Harry phoned across the bay to Billy Delaney, Corbett's trainer, and Delaney came right over to Corbett's, talked with Jeffries, and offered to use him as a sparring partner at Carson and afterwards get him some fights.

Makes Showing.

Jeffries made a great showing in the camp, and after Corbett had been knocked out, Delaney offered to manage Jim and try to make him a champion. That contract, with the future greatest of all champions, cost Delaney nothing. Jeffries went up the line quickly. Delaney took Billy Brady in as a partner later on, and Brady got the fight with Fitzsimmons that made Jeffries world's champion. Jeff's biggest gate as champion was $66,300 drawn in the fight with Tom Sharkey at Coney Island, November 3, 1890. The fighters split the magnificent sum of $36,465, world's record purse in those days, so far as real money went, although Bob Fitzsimmons had once fought for a $40,000 check that he was unable to cash. As Jeffries and Sharkey fought on a basis of 75 per cent to the winner the champion's end was $27,348—imagine that for a desperate 25-round championship fight that would draw over $2,000,000 in these days. Of the champion's end, Jeffries share was $13,674, and Delaney and Brady staggered into their banks each burdened with $6,837.

Oh, well, they weren't paying $50,000 for almost-challenger's contracts in those days. And a few thousand looked as big and bought as much as several times the money would today. And Delaney and Brady did well with the theatrical ventures ably handled by Mr. Brady in person. And there was no income tax to worry over.

Kearns Had Clinch.

One manager who had a copper riveted cinch while it lasted, which was a long time, was Jack Kearns. He split 50-50 with Jack Dempsey. And Kearns was the first manager to get into really big money, partly because in Tex Rickard he found a promoter who would take a chance. Kearns got a 50 per cent split of $100,000 in the Dempsey-Brennan fight, $300,000 in the Carpentier fight, $200,000 (or more) at Shelby, $470,000 in the Firpo fight and an unknown sum in the theatrical and moving picture and other ventures where he exploited the services of his champion. But Kearns was out of the picture when Dempsey let his contract run out and refused to renew and then drew down $700,000 at Philadelphia and half that with Sharkey and $450,000 at Chicago. Dempsey didn't have any manager after Kearns. He had become a business man, too. He hired Flynn on salary for two fights, to run his training camps.

It would have been funny if Dempsey had really signed up with Flynn as manager, and then Flynn had met Jack Kearns and sold him the contract. It ought to be worth a few dollars, at that.

Epworth League

The St. Mark girls have completed their schedule for the first round in the Epworth league and will play no more games until the first week in February. This team, along with the Emory Nurses, has proved to be one of the outstanding girls' outfits in the association, winning five of their first six games and now holding the league leadership.

The Cascade girls are leading the Girls' B league, being closely followed by Grant Park, which has shown unexpected strength this season.

Capitol View is leading the Boys' B league with five wins and no losses. Grant Park and St. Paul Feds are close on the heels of the leaders.

There will be no games played in the association on Monday night, January 16, since the Wesley court will not be available on that date. These games will be played later.

There has been a slight change in the schedule of games for Friday night. St. Mark girls and Druid Hills, previously scheduled for that night, played their game Friday night, January 13. The Capitol View boys and Haygood boys will mix in the date left vacant.

beaten down with heavy rights and lefts, falling to the ground. He attempted to rise and fight but nature gave way and he fell and was counted out. Corbett was proclaimed champion of America by Referee Duffy. The ovation that Corbett received was tremendous and he walked around the ring hugging his friends. Corbett's visit to Loew's Grand theater this week will be the first he has paid Atlanta in many years. On one of his former visits he was interlocutor of the Cohan and Harris minstrels starring "Honey Boy" George Evans. On that trip he attracted much attention in local sporting circles by refereeing a wrestling match between Hachenschmidt, "The Russian Lion," and Mike Dwyer.

Sewanee League

The past series of games in the Sewanee league were very close, with the general shake-up of the league standing that comes after every series. All teams are now closely bunched.

Capitol View Baptist and Associate Reformed Presbyterian are tied for the lead with the Decatur Presbyterian five a close runner-up, and a game lost by either one of the leaders means a drop to third place.

The rivalry that existed between the baseball teams of the Northwest Baptist and the North Atlanta Baptist will be revived in the Thursday night games, as these clubs will meet for the first time on the court.

The Wesley Memorial five will find their assignment for the coming series a tough one, as the schedule calls for them to battle the Decatur Presbyterian cagers, who have been victors in the last three starts.

Dixie League

No changes were recorded in the league standing as a result of the Tuesday night games of the Dixie league as the leading clubs were all victorious over the teams of the second division.

The Anchor Class cagers are becoming a serious threat to the leaders as they are playing the brand of ball that carried them to the pennant last season.

The F. E. F. Class by displaying more team work than usual is fast rounding into one of the league's best outfits and is sure to cause trouble for the pennant aspirations of the other teams.

The selection of several players from this league for berths on the All Stars of the Y. C. A. A. leagues means that the opponents are going to have to play heads up all the way to expect a victory as some of the best players of the city are with clubs of this league.

The opening game Tuesday night marks the start of the second round of play in this league.

Tuesday night schedule at the Y. M. C. A.:

Y. Stars vs. Anchor Class, 7.
Central Baptist vs. Western Heights, 7:20.
All Saints vs. F. E. F. Class, 8:10.

CITY LEAGUE

Two good games are booked in the City league Thursday. The Gulf Refining company's quintet will meet the strong Southern Bell five and the Knights of Columbus tackle the Avondale clubs. The leading A. A. C. Reds will be idle with the privilege of inviting some outside opponent.

Southern Bell has a good scoring machine and they will make the Gulf hustle to come out a winner in the opening tilt at 7:30 o'clock.

It is not yet known what team the A. A. C. Reds will invite to play them Thursday, but the other two games will be played as follows:

Gulf Refining Co. vs. Southern Bell, at 7:30 o'clock.
Knights of Columbus vs. Avondale, at 8:30 o'clock.
A. A. C. Reds, bye.

Rickard Seeking Foe for Tunney

a bout with the winner of the Sharkey-Heeney contest.

However, Rickard may have to forgive all and bring Delaney around at all costs. Jess McMahon, Garden matchmaker, tried all day to close arrangements for a bout between Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker boy, and Delaney in the Garden on February 10, but failed to get Jacobs' signature.

Demands 15-Round Bouts.

As a result of the disappointing ending of the 12-round Sharkey-Heeney bout, Tex Rickard will demand that all future heavyweight bouts must be 15 rounds. Jacobs is holding up the Risko-Delaney bout by refusing to allow his charge to fight more than 10 rounds.

Delaney will fight Sully Montgomery, the former Centre college football star, in a scheduled 10-round bout at St. Nicholas arena Monday night.

As for Tom Heeney, the New Zealander is not exactly in or out of line for a bout with Tunney. Although Heeney wants another bout with Sharkey, Rickard said today that he had no intention of rematching them any time soon. Present plans call for Heeney to meet one of the leading heavyweights between February 10 and March 14.

If Risko and Delaney are matched, it seems likely that the winner will be pitted against Heeney.

Paolino has broken loose from Rickard and is taking on all comers as fast as he can. He will fight Ed Keeley, the Boston southpaw, at the Broadway arena Monday night. After that he will meet Romero-Rojas in Mexico City and possibly George Godfrey in Los Angeles.

Rickard is importing another Argentine giant in hope that he will turn out to be a second Firpo. The new heavyweight's name is Vitorio Campolo. He weighs 220 pounds and is said to be built along the lines of Firpo. He will arrive February 1.

A. J. REACH, OLD DIAMOND STAR, DIES

Philadelphia, January 14.—(AP)—Alfred J. Reach, pioneer professional baseball player and millionaire sporting goods manufacturer, who was the Babe Ruth of his day as a batsman, died in Atlantic City today. He was 87 years old.

"Al" Reach was the first man in Philadelphia to play baseball for money. He was offered $25 a week as "expenses," back in 1865, when he was asked to join the famous old Athletics. In those days baseball was played by amateurs and the offering of what amounted to a salary to Reach to "play baseball" was not looked on with favor.

A Noted Hitter.

Reach played second base and was noted for his hard hitting. He played with the Athletics from 1865 to 1876, meeting the best teams in the country, including the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston team.

He saved his money and in subsequent years started the sporting goods manufacturing concern which bears his name. His partner in the business was Benjamin F. Shibe, who died exactly six years ago to the day at the age of 84. Both men prospered from the start and became millionaires.

Reach was one of the founders of the Philadelphia National league club in the late '70's, and Shibe became the chief financial supporter and president of the Philadelphia American league, when the Athletics became established here in 1891.

Reach joined the Athletics in '65, it became a traveling team and played throughout the country. The old question of amateurism was as pertinent then as it is today and after several years the sport became frankly professional.

Helped Win Pennant.

Reach continued as second baseman of the Athletics when the first league, the National association, was organized in 1871, and he helped win the first pennant for the Athletics. Reach still was a second baseman for the Athletics when the "association" was replaced by the present National league, in 1876. He was a left handed batsman and a good fielder.

In 1868, when the New York "Clipper" picked the first all-American baseball team, he was placed at second base.

Mr. Reach, who was born in London, England, retired from active business several years ago, although maintaining his financial interest in the company.

He leaves his widow, who is 83; one son and three daughters.

Consternation Caused By Hornsby Trade

himself legally absolved of some $90,000 in losses, which the bookmaker claimed to have carried on the cuff. There are no pari-mutuel facilities at the New York race tracks and the bookmaker therefore is held as high in public respect as the delicatessen man, who delivers the gin.

Those who do not pay the bookmaker compel the bookmaker to reduce his dividend rate in paying off successful investors and consequently it is generally held to be an offense against one 's fellowmen to soil the bookmaker's cuff and then blandly refuse to pay for the laundering.

"And Another Thing."

And, in the third place, it is the disposition of this place to go to a man's show or stay away, according to one's individual preference. If Mr. Ziegfeld should trade Miss Marilyn Miller to the western wheel burlesque circuit, the customers might decline to go to his show, and watch a substitute perform, but they would not picket the front of his house proclaiming he was deficient in civic pride, and exhorting all right-minded citizens to boycott his business.

The Giants have demonstrated in past transactions with the Boston branch that this principle applies to the baseball business. They offer the customers a baseball show and they never have led them to believe that they were privileged to select the members of the cast. Young Mr. Eddie Farrell, a shortstop, whose work had pleased the New York customers, was sent up to the Boston branch last spring to stimulate business there, and any of the New York customers, who objected to this transfer, were privileged to stay away. Before that they had sent Mr. Beauty Bancroft, their shortstop and team captain, to Boston, but they always retained a good staff in the main plant, and put on such a good show that business has been well sustained.

So, when summer comes, the New York customers will patronize the New York plant in proportion to the merits of the performance and if the departure of Hornsby detracts from the performance and also from the receipts, then his work in Boston doubtless will enhance the performance there and cause a proportionate enhancement of the Boston receipts, thus adjusting matters all around.

Spalding League

GIRLS' LEAGUE.

The third series of games of the Spalding Girls' league will be played in conjunction with the game between Albany Y. M. C. A. and the Atlanta Athletic club on the club court Saturday night. Both of the girls' games will be played before the club game starts. All three of the games may be seen for the price of one admission.

The Georgia Power company attacks a team that made a fine record last year, but has not hit its stride this year. The Western Electrics are capable of playing a very good game of basketball and hope to rout the league leaders. A two weeks' rest has given them an opportunity to improve some since their last league game.

Comptometer company meets Crum and Foster in the other game. Crum and Foster is not so good without the services of Miss Ward, their star forward, and it is probable that they will have to play without her on Saturday. This will even up the going in the second game and should make it interesting.

Following is the standing:

The Standing.

Team—	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Georgia Power company	2	0	1.000
Crum and Foster	1	1	.500
Western Electric	1	1	.500
Comptometer company	0	2	.000

Schedule for Saturday night, January 21, games at the Atlanta Athletic club:

7:00 p. m.—Georgia Power company vs. Western Electric.
7:20 p. m.—Comptometer company vs. Crum and Foster.

Resolutions Adopted By Committee

Complete Harmony Between Two Bodies Seen as Result of Move.

New York, January 14.—(AP)—The United States Lawn Tennis association is prepared to extend the olive branch to professional elements of the game and "encourage the growth" of the newly organized professional lawn tennis association.

This is disclosed in announcement of resolutions proposed by the amateur rule committee for adoption at the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. at Chicago February 11.

Citing the purpose of the professional organization and its close contact with younger players through tennis instructors, the U. S. L. T. A. proposes this definition of its policy:

Pros Can Benefit Game.

"That it is the sense of the U. S. L. T. A. that the game of lawn tennis will be benefited and the influence of professional players with the younger amateurs will be bettered by the development and improvement of standards of instruction and play among the professionals, and by the maintenance on their part of a high standard of ethics, conduct and sportsmanship and that the U. S. L. T. A. to accomplish these

Local Women Golfers Look For Big Year

Several Big Tourneys To Be Entered by Atlanta Players in 1928.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Lest it be said that the women golfers of this city have been completely buried by the avalanche of basketball scores that are now daily pouring in or had been frozen by the rather unkind golfing weather that has visited our fair town during the past few weeks, your correspondent makes haste to correct any erroneous impression that might have arisen. The feminine mashie wielders are far from dead, nor are they even out and are a considerable ways from being down. They are simply hibernating for the winter. Laying plans for the coming tournament season and gathering strength through winter's cruel reign to make stalwart assaults on par and each other when the first breath of spring displaces the icy chill of the basketball season.

All of which, when closely analyzed, means that the feminine golfing talent of this city will stoon start what gives every promise of being the biggest and best season ever pulled off in Atlanta. January will see little activity. In fact, your correspondent has it on the authority of none other than Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, newly elected president of the Atlanta Women's Golf association, that the first month of 1928 will see considerable more bridge than golf being played.

But whatever lassitude may be in order during frigid January will be supplanted by February's milder rule. During this latter month the first of the monthly tournaments that always prove such successful affairs will be staged. March and April will see the flock swing into full action in preparation for the first big fixture of the season—the southern championship, which will be held in May at the Roebuck Country club in Birmingham.

City Championship.

While no definite date has yet been set for the Atlanta city championship, this event, which was won by Miss Rosalie Mayer last year, will most likely follow the southern championship.

The city title chase, while the biggest of the local events, is by no means the only tournament to be held in the city during the season. The Maier-Berkele cup tournament and the many club championships share the spotlight with it.

From all indications, the coming season will see more interest in women's golf in this city than ever before. All the old-time stars are contemplating serious play during the season. Added to these are a flock of younger players whose performances during the past year marked them as rising lights in the feminine golfing world.

Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, who was out of play for most of last season due to an injured arm, is now fully recovered. The return to regular play of this former southern champion naturally adds much zest to the 1928 program.

Miss Rosalie Mayer, who won the city championship last season and who was a prominent figure in many other tournaments, should have another great season. The same applies for Miss Margaret Maddox, one of the younger players who gives great promise for 1928. In fact, the play of Miss Maddox was so impressive at times in '27 that many critics contend she is slated for high honors in southern golf.

Mrs. T. T. Williams, Mrs. Clarence Bradley, Mrs. L. H. Beck, Miss Jimmie Pattillo, Mrs. Tommie Wilson and the host of other crack players are understood to be ready for the opening gun, which insures plenty of keen competition. Yes, the year 1928 should see plenty of heated golf competition among the women players.

Decatur Awarded Tilt With Fulton

Gilland, the billigerent Fulton High school player who slugged W. C. Maddox during the course of a game with Decatur Friday, will be barred from ever participating in prep athletics again, according to O. L. Amsler, principal of Decatur High school. Mr. Amsler stated that a rule to this effect had been adopted by the prep league recently.

In Friday night's game Gilland repeatedly talked back to Referee Maddox and had three personal fouls called on him. Then he committed another. Four personal fouls caused banishment from the game, and when Maddox told Gilland to get out of the game, the former hit him from behind.

Then the game was called off and awarded to Decatur.

BIG LEAGUERS, SANDLOTTERS TO HOLD MEET

Cincinnati, January 14.—(AP)—The sandlotters and major leaguers of baseball will discuss a program of mutual benefit in Chicago the latter part of this month when committees from the National Amateur Baseball federation and the professionals meet.

Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, President John Heydler, of the National league, and President E. S. Barnard, of the American league, will represent the leagues and Cliff Martin, of Cincinnati, Virgil Vetterlind, of Detroit, and Clayton Townes, of Cleveland, the sandlotters.

Committee Named.

The committee to represent the sandlotters was appointed at the closing session of the federation's meeting here today. Speakers pointed out the need of the amateurs for financial assistance, the desirability of the counsel and support of the leagues and the advantage to promising young players in stepping into the big time game through lessening the existing gap between the branches of the sport.

Virtually all other business was carried over until the next meeting which will be in Charleston, S. C., April 6 and 7. The July meeting will be held at Akron, Ohio.

A franchise committee was appointed which will take over the work of that particular nature. The board of directors formerly handled all franchises.

Selection of a 1928 tournament city will be made at the Charleston meeting.

Arthur Spiegel, of Cincinnati, was elected president, succeeding Virgil Vetterlind.

SMITHIES WIN OVER G. M. A. CADETS, 52-42

Tech High's Smithies withstood the battering assaults of a fighting G. M. A. basketball team Saturday afternoon at College Park and emerged victorious in a hard-fought game, 52 to 42.

For three of the four quarters the Cadets and the Smithies fought it out on even terms. But there was another quarter. That was the third when Tech High's defense tightened and a spark of life was breathed into their offense. Right there came the downfall of G. M. A. The Cadets couldn't get near the goal. Tech High could.

The first quarter ended with Tech High leading, 12 to 11. At the end of the half it was 27 to 25 in favor of Tech High. And at the end of the third period the Smithies were further ahead, 40 to 30.

It was a hard-fought game, one of the best in prep circles this season.

AND—IN THIS CORNER

by Ben Cothran

Comes now the startling news informing one that that austere body, the United States Lawn Tennis association, is assuming a fatherly and benevolent attitude towards the newly-formed Professional Lawn Tennis association and will "encourage its growth."

Wonder just what's behind that?

To this writer it seems a good move. The United States needs professionals in the tennis ranks. Good ones and plenty of them.

Heretofore the professional end of the game has been rather "declasse." To us it seems a bad thing. The professional is needed to start the youngster off on the right foot and guide him during the formative period of his game.

Some of the larger and richer northern clubs have professionals. There are a few on the Pacific coast. Look up your champions and nationally ranking players. They come largely from the north and the west coast. The players had the benefits of professional coaching.

These were, for the most part, imported from England. Nearly every club you'll find over there has its professional, just as there are golf professionals at practically every golf club in America.

And now this move of the U. S. L. T. A. to foster the professional game in America. The start naturally will be slow. But it probably won't be many years before there'll be the national professional tennis championships and possibly a national open tennis title chase.

There'll be prize money and there'll be lesser pro tournaments with prize money. That will attract a large part of the good players into the pro ranks and in a few years they will be spreading out to the clubs over the country. With that will come a betterment of America's tennis. When the stars like Tilden pass there'll be no wild scramble for a successor. He'll be right there, well trained in the fundamentals and with a good background that comes from professional coaching.

Possibly that will mean a standardization of the game. But golf is standardized. And Americans still rank at the top.

It looks to us like a wise move on the part of the amateur association. With the passing of Tilden and the rest, who ruled the world for so many years, the light has been seen. And the U. S. L. T. A. is building for the future.

* * * * *

The sending down the river of Rogers Hornsby during the past week was news enough to keep baseball fans the country over slightly pop-eyed. And no one yet has unearthed the reason why he was shipped.

We'l still like to know: "What's the matter with Rogers Hornsby?"

Here in Atlanta the baseball news has been rather subdued. Sam Johnson, Mr. Spiller's ground keeper, is planting grass and saying little. Mr Spiller is saying little and waiting for his holdouts, if any, to crop up.

He did say Saturday, however, that he had sent a contract to Frank Werre, husky right-hander, who pitched for Reading last year in the International league. Reading, you'll probably remember, is where the Cubs sent Pete Fowler, who toiled on the hill for the Crackers last summer.

Werre, Mr. Spiller says, is highly recommended by Jack Slappey, who was a Cracker flinger a few years back.

This week should see the return of a few contracts. March 5, when the Crax begin training, isn't as far away as it sounds.

GOLF'S BIG MOMENTS

WHEN ARMOUR ACCOMPLISHED THE IMPOSSIBLE.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Suppose you were playing in an open golf championship over one of the hardest layouts in the United States, that you had completed 66 of your 72 holes and to tie for the championship you had to play those last terrible six holes in one under par. It is to be supposed that you would naturally feel considerable pain. It is also a likely surmise that you would hardly find golf in your bag to turn the trick. Yet less than eight months ago in the American open championship played over the deep bunkered and difficult Oakmont course, at Pittsburgh, Tommy Armour did that very thing.

If a short story writer wanted to find a setting for a dramatic golf story there is nothing in a vivid imagination that could surpass the stage effects marking the concluding round of Armour's in the 1927 American open.

Tommy Armour, Scot by birth, American by adoption, fighter by heritage and tradition and one of the greatest iron players who ever took hold of a club, had gone fairly well in the 1927 event. So well that his first three rounds of 78, 71 and 76 had put him in striking distance of the most prized championship in America—the national open. "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, the colorful young Los Angeles pro who had made the statement before the tournament that "he would walk back to Los Angeles if he failed to finish within the first five had made good his resolution and had cantered through the 72-hole jaunt in 301. Not surprisingly low figures, but apparently low enough to send him back to the Pacific in a drawing room.

Wild Scrambling Start.

When the field started off in mad pursuit of the golden fleece in that final 18-hole journey, Harry Cooper was showing the way by two strokes. The two who appeared most dangerous to bar his path were Tommy Armour and "Wild Bill" Melhorn. The stock of Wild Bill took a decided upward jump when this brilliant entry reached the turn in an amazing 32. Cooper had finished with a 301. All "Wild Bill" needed to tie was a 37 on those last nine holes. A 36 would give him the crown. But "Wild Bill" failed badly on the concluding lap and was swept out of the championship picture.

Thus did Fate send a brilliant actor to the wings while clearing the golfing stage for a lone performer. That performer was Tommy Armour, struggling out there on that deep bunkered terrain for the heights that beckoned only a few holes away. The man whose steady hand and iron nerve had directed a British tank over many a shell invested field in France was fighting with the same spirit to direct golf shots over those last treacherous holes.

As he stood on the tee of the long par 5 12th, Tommy saw a clear picture of the championship heights and the pot of gold. When Tommy stood on the tee of the 13th, the beautiful vista that appeared at the 12th had been turned into a sickening mirage. For an ugly 7 at that 12th milestone had almost mathematically buried his hopes. I say practically buried them, for to get a tie with Cooper, Tommy had to shoot those last six holes in one under par. Par at any time over any stretch of Oakmont's yawning terrain is hard enough. Par in any open championship is hard enough. One under par over the last half dozen holes at Oakmont with an open championship at stake—well it, of course, could be done, but such things only happen in the romantic musings of some story writer.

Tommy Does Impossible.

Yet the man who had guided a tank over the battle-scarred meadows of far-off France when the odds were against him put the lie to figures, tradition and haunting doubts of his friends by doing that which seemed the impossible. Yes, Tommy finished those last half dozen holes in exactly 1 under par. It was amazing and stupifying golf, coming as it did at this time. Par for those last six holes is 344, 344. Tommy reeled off the first fice of these in perfect figures. But to tie for the championship he had to do better than perfect. He had to snatch one stroke from par's card. His last chance came at the 18th. Could a finish present a more dramatic setting?

A great drive split the fairway. The green loomed fully 200 yards away. That next shot had to be sent close enough to the little hole denting the velvet surface to enable Tommy to send the putt home. It looked almost impossible.

Why Tommy Armour is rated the greatest iron player in the game was demonstrated a few seconds later when his great second found the green, rolled a yard and came to rest 12 feet from the pin. Tommy's driver and his iron had done their duty—it was now left for his putting blade to either play him traitor or write his name in gilded letters on America's golfing scroll of fame. Tommy carefully studied that putt. And again it was the man of steel that acted. Maybe vision of some shell-torn battlefield came before his eyes. Maybe he was once more back in the English tank corps directing his engine of death against the German forces. At any rate, it was a hand of steel governed by a fighting soul that sent that putt on its way. A moment of heartbreaking suspense and the click of the ball in the hole was the signal for the name of Tommy Armour to be blazed around the golfing world. He got his tie. The story of the play-off, in which he beat Cooper, is exciting. But it seems tame when compared to the history of those last six holes of the championship journey. That was where Tommy Armour really wrote the word "American champion" after his name. That which followed was merely a benediction to his great soul-stirring effort.

Next: How Miss Rosalie Mayer kept the final of the city championship from going into extra holes and won the title.

Jackets Meet Georgia Nine In Four Games

February 6 and Kid Clay comes into his own again. Why? Well, February 6 is the first day of baseball practice at Tech. And naturally when one thinks of Tech and baseball, one thinks of Kid Clay.

Featuring the schedule for the Jackets, announced Saturday, four games each with Georgia and Alabama and two with Ohio State. There are 28 games on the list, one of the heaviest ever made by a conference school.

Outstanding on the list is the trio of traditional rivals the Jackets will face during the season. Auburn, in four games, two at Grant field and two at Auburn, will be met, besides the old rivals of Georgia and Alabama. Georgia will be encountered in two games on Grant field, the other two in Athens. Alabama will be fought twice here and twice in Tuscaloosa.

The Jackets start the season with a practice game with the Atlanta Crackers March 16. They meet the Crackers again the following day and undertake the collegiate schedule the following week, meeting Ohio State March 23 in the first of a two-game series.

Oglethorpe, Tech's Atlanta rival, will tie up with the Clay stingers in a two-game series. Dates for these two games were set for April 6 and April 7. Other collegiate teams on the schedule are Clemson, Mercer, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and South Carolina, with each of whom the Jackets play two games.

The schedule follows:

Marietta Quints Split Cage Bill

The Russell High school basketball teams of East Point split a twin bill with the teams of Marietta High school on the East Point court. The Marietta boys won by the score of 31 to 21, while the East Point lassies came through, 12 to 9.

The boys' game was fast, with Marietta leading most of the time. Jolly and Anderson, of Marietta, led the attack with 13 and 10 points, respectively. Stitch, East Point center, was high-point man for the locals with 10 counters. The girls' game was close, but the Russellites were a little faster than their opponents and won by their speed.

Sarazen, Farrell Sign for Match

Clearwater, Fla., January 14.—(AP) Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell have been signed up for an exhibition match at the Clearwater Country club January 21, and their local opponents will probably be Hugh Halsell, national senior amateur titleholder, of Dallas, Texas, who is wintering at the Belleair, and "Dazzy" Vance, big league strikeout king, who is cutting a wide swath in local golf here this winter.

Killifer Signs 3-Year Contract

San Francisco, January 14.—(AP)—Wade "Red" Killefer, former manager and part owner of the Seattle Indians, today signed a three-year contract to manage the San Francisco Missions of the Pacific Coast league.

In making the announcement, William M. McCarthy, president of the club, said that Killefer's contract calls for the highest salary ever paid a minor league manager. He declined to give out the figure, but said he was positive in his assertion.

Killefer replaces Harry Hooper, former big league star, whose release was announced yesterday.

Darlington Wins.

Rome, Ga., January 14.—(Special.) The undefeated Darlington basketball team beat the Calhoun High school five Saturday night by the score of 59 to 24. Hutaff and Talley starred on the local team.

H. K. DEVEREUX GRAND CIRCUIT HEAD POPULAR

Cleveland, Ohio, January 14.—When stewards of the Grand circuit at their annual meeting in Atlanta recently, reelected as president H. K. Devereux, of Cleveland, they gave that gentleman their indorsement for the 18th successive year.

The president of this great circuit of tracks, devoted exclusively to harness racing, has made the industry it represents the sole interest of his busy life. Hence his selection in the first instance, to head the affairs of the circuit, was entirely fitting and once his services were secured, so well did he attend to his manifold duties, that no one has ever been presented as a candidate against him.

Mr. Devereux is nationally known and admired by all lovers of the trotter and pacer. He is a breeder, an accomplished driver, though he never has driven professionally and it may be truthfully said of him, that the year around he "lives" in the saddle, for he is an enthusiastic equestrian. He finds time to do some sulky riding and occasionally drives one of his fast young trotters for an official record against time.

Bates Sets Pace In Emory Races

Featuring the hare and hound races at Emory university last week was the continued good running of Bates of the Sigma Chi team. He won first in the three races held last week to keep his perfect record of first place in every race.

The Beta Tau team, leading since the races began, lost a few points to the Sigma Chi team in second place. The Beta Taus, however, continue to lead by 40 points.

In the first race of the week, Westenberger, of the Beta Taus, led the field, being followed in order by Michaux and Gordon of the Sigma Chi team. Bates, having won the previous race, laid the trail for his first place. Bates won the race on Wednesday. Fullerton, of the Beta Taus, was second. In the last race of the week Westenberger again won first place after being hard pressed at the finish by Nunan, former Tech High star.

These races are run annually during the winter months and keep the track men in shape for the spring. Teams are entered by fraternities and other campus groups. They will continue to be run until March 1. A cup will be presented the winning team and medals to the 10 men with the highest individual scores.

THREE WORLD RECORDS FALL AT NEW YORK

New York, January 14—(AP)—Three world's records were broken, including Johnny Weissmuller's standard for the 100-yard back stroke, at the Metropolitan A. A. U. swimming championships in the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. tonight.

All the marks were shattered during a 300-yard medley relay race, the Brooklyn Central team bettering its former world's record of 3:14 1-5 with the new time of 3:12 4-5.

The relay called for back stroke, breast stroke and free style. George Kojac, of the Boys' club, national back-stroke champion, swam the first 100 yards in 1 minute 2 3-5 seconds, against Weissmuller's time of 1 minute 3 2-5 seconds.

Kojac's advantage for the Boys' club in the first sprint of the relay was overcome in the next lap by Walter Spence, of the Brooklyn Central "Y," breast-stroke champion, who surpassed his former mark in swimming the second 100 yards by a fifth of a second. The new time is 1 minute 8 1-5 seconds.

The contestants were started by a pistol shot in order to comply with the regulations for individual marks.

COLOREDFIGHT CARD MONDAY AT ELKS REST

Billy Hooper's next boxing show is scheduled for Monday night at the colored Elks Rest with three bouts and a battle royal. The time is set for 8:30 o'clock.

The main bout draws two fighters well capable of giving entertainment and plenty of it to the fans. Cecil Flowers, brother of the late Tiger, is carded for his second bout before local fans. He is to battle Sylvester Davis, of New Orleans, who claims the southeast title of the colored welterweight division.

Davis, too, has fought once before on a show staged here by Hooper. He made a good showing in beating Battling Kennon, a local boy.

Cowboy Kid and Richard Moore will tangle in the semi-windup, a bout that will give the fans plenty of slugging. Moore hails from Galveston, Texas, while Cowboy Kid is a local battler.

The first preliminary combat is between Herbert Moore and King Soloman, completing a card with the battle royal that looks like the best one yet to be arranged by Hooper.

Class Football Revived at Mercer

BY GEORGE CLARKE, JR.

Macon, Ga., January 14.—Class football at Mercer university will begin sometime within the next two weeks, it was announced here today.

Not since two years ago have the different classes had football teams, but the idea was so popular that the intra-mural board of Mercer has decided in favor of reinstating the annual championship games.

Major J. D. Blair is in charge of all arrangements.

Coaches are to be appointed within a few days, but definite formulations have not been made.

Several games between the class teams—then the winner will be decided. After the final game 50 of the best class team players will be selected by the coaches of the different teams and are to be divided into two groups of 15 men each. These two groups of players will meet in the classic game, and an all-university team will be picked, the men chosen to receive silver footballs.

Rules for eligibility and the schedule will be worked out by Major Blair and he will appoint different committees from each class.

Women Hold First Open Squash Meet

Greenwich, Conn., January 14.—(United News.)—Women players from all over the country will participate in the first open squash racquet tournament held in the United States at the Round Hill club here during this week. Mrs. Edzar Arnold, of Greenwich, is in charge of the tournament.

Marion Zinderstein Jessup, of Delaware, and Miss Eleanor Sears and Mrs. Wightman, of Boston, are among the prominent players entered.

Teams of five players each representing Boston, Philadelphia and Greenwich also will take part.

Burke Terrors Invade J. P. C. Monday Night

Athletic Club Goes to Birmingham; Tech Freshmen Also on Road.

Tech's varsity, Tech's freshmen, the A. A. C. and the J. P. C. will all be busily engaged this week in keeping the wolf from the door as it were during battles with out-of-town teams.

On Tuesday night the senior Jackets take on the Clemson Tigers in the Tech gym. The Tigers will be in the midst of a road trip, playing Mercer in Macon Monday night. From all reports Clemson is knocking 'em over with regularity in South Carolina and the Jackets will have an entertaining evening.

Face Vols Friday.

Then Friday night comes the Tennessee Volunteers, down from the mountains round-about Knoxville. The Vols, so 'tis rumored, form one of the strongest teams in the conference. Thus, another night of wild scrambling and hard playing for Tech. That will be all for the varsity. But then perhaps it will be plenty.

Joe Bean and his clubbers are going over to Slagtown for a scrap with the Birmingham A. C. team. At times, in the past, that word scrap when applied to games between these two, has meant just that. The two play hard games and no foolin'. The Bean Boys are striding along mightily at this moment and it seems that they'll do so all through the season. But the scriveners in Birmingham are of the opinion that the B. A. C. will have something to offer in the way of opposition.

Terrors Here Monday.

The J. P. C. will have troubles of its own when the Burke Terrors are met Monday night on the Progressives' home court. The Burke bunch, a strong amateur organization from Nashville, is taking a swing around this part of the country, and so far have coped successfully with everything they have met.

The Junior Jackets will hit the road for two games, one Friday night when the Cumming A. C. is played in Cumming, Ga., and the following Saturday night when the Larvae meet the Auburn Tiger cubs down in the loveliest village of the plains.

VANDY, FLA. ARE DROPPED BY MARYLAND

College Park, Md., January 14.—(AP) Nine football games have been arranged for the University of Maryland football team for next fall, with the probability that a tenth will materialize, H. C. (Curley) Byrd, athletic director, has announced.

Yale, which has been met in New Haven annually for a number of years, again is on the list, with five southern conference teams — South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia Military institute, Virginia Poly and Virginia, with Washington and Lee, another member of the Dixie circle, as the team expected to be added. Three teams from within the state—Washington college, was named and Johns Hopkins—rounded out the list.

Five of the games booked will be decided at College Park and Hopkins will be met in Baltimore, equivalent to a home field. If Washington and Lee is scheduled, the contest will be played in Washington or Baltimore.

Western Maryland is the only newcomer with Vanderbilt and Florida, teams that were met last year, missing. Maryland played 11 games last season as against a limit of ten this year, Florida being met on December 3.

The list is well balanced, with no two trips being taken in succession.

The schedule:

September 29, Washington college.

October 6, North Carolina; 13, South Carolina at Columbia; 20, Western Maryland; 27, Virginia Military institute at Richmond, Va.

November 3, Virginia Poly; 10, Yale at New Haven; 17, Virginia; 24, Washington and Lee (pending) at Washington or Baltimore; 20, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore.

VARIOUS WHIPPET RECORDS UNSURPASSED IN LIGHT CAR FIELD

STONE MOUNTAIN CLIMB HERE AMONG GREAT RECORDS

Performances Entitle Popular Car to Place Among the Foremost in Class Field.

In presenting the perfected line of Whippets at new low prices that place it in direct competition with the lowest priced cars, executives of the Willys-Overland company declare that never before in the history of the automobile industry—especially in the light four-cylinder field—has a car set such a long list of notable records as the Whippet. These records, made over a period of 18 months since the original presentation of this modern light car, cover every phase of test and in each instance the Whippet has set such a high standard of performance that it is accorded the quality leadership in the American light car field.

In addition to the special tests that were made the Whippet also has established an unusual performance record in the hands of more than 150,000 owners who have proven the Whippet stamina, speed, power and economy of operation over a combined total of a half billion miles of travel.

The following are cited as a few of the outstanding accomplishments of the Whippet:

Cannonball Baker drove a Whippet from coast to coast, a distance of 3,559 miles, averaging 43.28 miles to the gallon of fuel. This record was made under the official observation of the A. A. A.

Ed Hughes drove a Whippet from a point in Death Valley, 284 feet below sea level to a point in White mountains, 13,150 feet above sea level, the highest point ever reached by any automobile on the Pacific coast.

Ten thousand persons saw a Whippet climb the trackless Stone mountain near Atlanta, Ga. The Whippet was the first light car to accomplish the climb. Only three cars have ever made the grade, the other two being much larger and more expensive automobiles.

In a speed run from Atlanta to Macon, Ga., a Whippet averaged 48.3 miles an hour.

Traveling 1,843 miles from Canada to Mexico a Whippet averaged 29.3 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

One of the best speed records of the Whippet was a 50-mile test on Rockingham speedway in which the fast four-cylinder light car averaged 71.6 miles an hour.

A Whippet a few weeks ago broke all existing records for climbing the difficult Mt. Diablo in California, negotiating the steep, curved grade, 11 1-2 miles, in 24 minutes, 6 seconds.

Chet Kilmeyer drove a Whippet from Sacramento to New York city, 3,205 miles, in 5 days, 3 hours and 47 minutes. This was officially checked by Western Union.

Traveling in second gear only, a Whippet covered 135 miles in 4 hours, 3 minutes, averaging 33.33 miles an hour. A similar performance in second gear over a 467-mile course from Los Angeles to San Francisco set an acerage of 27.36 miles an hour.

In a 24-hour non-stop run, Lee Doud, Casper, Wyo., drove a Whippet 1,077 miles.

A notable recent performance was a Whippet's climb up the Seventeenth street inclined plane railway at Pittsburgh, the first car of any make to accomplish this power feat. The climb was 850 feet with a grade of 41 per cent. The official time for the climb was 46 seconds.

In and about Elmira, N. Y., a Whippet ran for 30 days and 30 night without a motor stop, covering 12,008 miles, averaging 31.1 miles per gallon of gas.

Other records were: Grand Rapids to Petoskey, 219 miles in 212 minutes; Peoria to Chicago, 152 miles in 2 hours, 51 minutes; Dubuque to Chicago, 180 miles, average 55 miles per hour; Danville to Chicago, 134 miles in 2 hours, 40 minutes; Cheyenne to Denver, 110 miles in 110 minutes; speed run through lower Michigan, checked by Western Union, 468 miles, average speed 54.95 mils an hour.

Numerous other speed, power, fuel economy and stamina marks have been set by the Whippet since it first appeared on the market in June, 1926. Because of its outstanding performance the basic principles of this car that has set a new and definite trend in the light car field, remain unchanged, Willys-Overland officials point out. It is said that because of the new standard of performance set by the Whippet it occupied a leading position in the light car field and is responsible for other manufacturers adopting certain distinctive features first introduced and perfected in the Whippet.

VICTORY SIX GOING FAST, SAYS ESKRIDGE

With recent announcement of the new Dodge Victory Six creating a sensation in the automobile field throughout America, the Atlanta buying public has shown a record breaking response, B. L. Eskridge, of the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company, local Dodge agents, reported in a statement that sales activity in Dodge Brothers products in Atlanta is better to date than has been recorded in any past January.

An unusual feature of the public's fascination for the new Dodge car is noted in the quick action on the part of buyers, Mr. Eskridge stated. According to him this is due to a large extent to the public's expression of confidence in the past history of Dodge Brothers products. But another factor pointed to in accounting for the speed of automobile purchasers to place orders on the new car immediately after its introduction is the vast number of improvements and innovations in design and mechan m brought forth with the latest Victory Six.

Another advantage gained by the Lambeth-Eskridge Motor company with the introduction of the new model Victory Six was pointed out by the executive with the assertion "that the interest attracted by that model and the resulting heavy purchases as stimulated sales in all other Dodge models to a remarkable extent."

This favorable trend has mar. the special showing of the new Dodge car, which will be continued all this week as a convenience to those who have been eager to learn more of the automobile, Mr. Eskridge announced.

Dodge motor car dealers throughout the territory coming under the Lambeth-Eskridge agency, have reported the same rising activity witnessed in Atlanta, the local dealer remarked.

"The Victory Six has certainly gone over faster than we ever anticipated," Mr. Eskridge said. "Right now we are a month behind on deliveries, and if anyone is anxious for one of these new models he better act quick.

"The Victory Six is not the only Dodge model selling fast. It seems to have stimulated sales for all other models, the fours and sixes going exceptionally well.

"Reports from our dealers throughout this territory reveal unusual interest in the Dodge line and we are anticipating the largest January in the history of Dodge in this territory.

"We are continuing our special showing of the new Dodge Victory Six all this week and we cordially invite everyone to visit our showrooms to get acquainted with the latest motor car sensation."

Congratulations and Best Wishes to

General Motors Presents New Models in Many Lines

Commenting upon the new line of cars just announced by the various General Motors car divisions, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the corporation, made the following statement today:

"General Motors, through the Chevrolet Motor division, is offering at this time a full line of new models—a bigger and better Chevrolet. While the details are being fully announced in the usual manner by the Chevrolet Motor company, I want to emphasize the very material advance which these cars offer over any car that the Chevrolet Motor company has heretofore been able to present.

"In the first place, the power plant has been materially improved, resulting in increased performance. This is in line with the current trend, particularly in the direction of increased acceleration for traffic and hill climbing. Many details in construction of the chassis have been altered to effect this result. The most striking advance, however, is an entirely new line of Fisher bodies which, together with a new radiator and hood treatment, results in an artistic development which has never been equaled before in motor cars in the Chevrolet price class. The new bodies provide not only great luxury of appointment but added comfort and convenience as well as considerably more room. Four-wheel brakes have also been included to effect a more positive control. The wheel base has also been lengthened. There results a bigger and better Chevrolet in every sense of the word In the development of the Chevrolet it has been in the past and will continue to be the policy of General Motors to offer in that car the maximum possible value that its extensive resources permit at the price, rather than to build the car at the lowest possible price.

"In the new models of the Pontiac offered by the Oakland Motor car division, important changes have also been made. The power plant has been materially improved, increasing performance, particularly acceleration. A new line of Fisher bodies have been provided which, together with a new development in the front, have greatly improved the artistic appearance of the car. Four-wheel brakes have also been added.

"The Olds Motor division is offering an entirely new motor car from beginning to end—a complete new power plant as well as a complete line of new Fisher bodies. I feel sure that the Olds Motor works, in collaboration with the engineers of the Fisher body division, have developed a car of unusual attractiveness even in this day of many attractive motor car products.

"Still in addition to the above, the Cadillac Motor division is offering additional models in the LaSalle line, particularly a very interesting five-passenger sedan at an unusually attractive price. This is made possible by the substantial increase in volume enjoyed by the Cadillac Motor Car company, resulting from the inauguration of the new Cadillac as well as the addition of the LaSalle to the Cadillac line.

"To make the General Motors picture complete, I should include the fact that Buick and Oakland announced their new models in the recent past so that General Motors now presents a solid front of an entire new line of cars to the public.

"All the above offerings are in harmony with the policy that General Motors established some years ago and to which it has consistently adhered, i.e., a program of constant progress with quality as the dominating keynote or, in other words, giving to the public promptly new ideas in motor car construction and development as advanced methods of manufacture and proved engineering developments make possible to the end that General Motors products shall represent a continually increasing standard of value. There is no question but what new offerings at this time represent values that General Motors has never been able to offer before. Prices in the main have not materially altered. There have been adjustments on the various models as altered costs have required. The greatest benefit accruing to the public in my estimation is the very substantial increased value that has been put back into the cars themselves. I have confidence that the public will show its appreciation of these new motor cars the same as it has indorsed General Motors' new offerings in the past."

SAYS MOTORCYCLE SALES INCREASING

According to J. B. McNaughton, sales and advertising manager of the Indian Motorcycle company, at Springfield, Mass., both the popularity and sales of motorcycles have been on the up-grade the past five years and especially so during 1926 and 1927.

"The sale of Indian motorcycles," he states, "in the United States, has shown an increase each year for the past five years. Right in local territory of the motorcycle factory itself the sales for the calendar year of 1926 were double the sales of 1925, while the sales for 1927 showed an increase of 33 1-3 per cent over 1926.

"Not only is the popularity of motorcycles for sports, pleasure and transportation increasing, but the use of motorcycles with vans attached for light delivery service has increased 300 per cent in the past 18 months. A similar condition exists with the use of motorcycles by police departments. Over 4,000 police departments throughout the United States use motorcycles and they are increasing their equipment yearly to meet the ever-growing congested thoroughfares situation.

"To the average individual, who is not closely identified with the motorcycle industry, it appears strange that so few motorcycles are seen at this time of the year, and also so few registered. But, those engaged and interested in the motorcycle fraternity realize that motorcycle riders generally do not take out their registration plates at the beginning of the calendar year—they usually wait until early spring."

AVIATION FEATURING PACKARD MOTORS

A bulletin just issued by the National Aeronautical association shows that the Packard 600-horsepower airplane motor far excels any other airplane motor in America as a holder of world records. The Packard engine, the bulletin shows, is approached by only one other motor in the world as a breaker of world records.

In addition to the nine world records held by the Packard airplane engine, the same motor, used as a marine power plant, holds a world's record for boats of any size or description for 150 miles. With this mark the Packard motor is easily first among the motors of the entire world.

The bulletin of the aeronautical association officially gives the Packard 600-horsepower engine 20 American records in addition to the nine world marks.

A review of the feats accomplished by Packard engines show that, with new marks made in other fields, either on land, in the air, or on the water, they have held 20 world records and have established many other records in contests confined to America alone. Among the most important world marks held by Packard, officially recognized internationally, are those for distance, altitude with load and duration made by seaplanes.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS SEEN AT N. Y. SHOW

BY ROY D. CHAPIN,
Chairman of the board, Hudson Motor Car Company.

What is the outstanding feature of the show? I believe it is the general betterment of motor cars—improvements which add to satisfaction and pride. With such cars Hudson-Essex enjoyed in 1927 the largest and most active year in its history, and now with still new betterments, we believe that with other manufacturers able to meet the public's ideas, we shall find 1928 even a more satisfactory season.

The public's one universal demand is for better and still better automobiles. We have long had utility in the medium and the lower price fields; now the public has called for and is receiving superior performance, better style and improved appearance—yet prices stay down. Four-wheel brakes cost real money; so do chassis bettered throughout; so do superior upholstery and fittings; all creating new standards of value. To provide these advances and yet keep prices moderate a superlative manufacturing efficiency is necessary.

Modern Production Economies.

The public knows, or believes, that all motor car plants employ 'straight-line' production methods; however, modern efficiencies go beyond this system of manufacturing. To cite our own company, let us assume that Hudson-Essex is building 1,500 cars a day. We are ourselves then building 1,500 axles, 1,500 motors, 1,500 transmissions a day, etc., and assembling them into cars. Somewhere else 6,000 tires are being built for us daily—a very large order which will keep one or even several big tire divisions busy on Hudson-Essex tires alone. The tire-maker sets up moulds of the right size for us—once—and from then on operations are continuous, economical. His costs are low.

Somewhere else, another manufacturer is making 3,000 head lamps a day for us; another 1,500 radiators; another 1,500 steering wheels. Each one of these manufacturers is doing his exact job daily, planning ahead, buying and working efficiently. Each day he ships us our contracted supply. Railways in turn deliver shipments on regular and prompt schedule. Even special steels, which possibly had to start six weeks earlier, reach their finished stage on schedule and are forwarded to us.

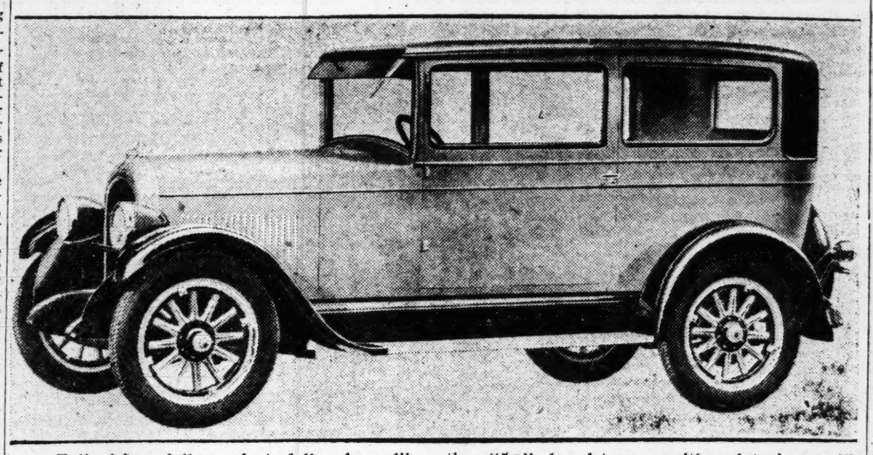

Materials Always in Transit.

Such is the modern development of the "straight-line" system by a volume manufacturer. It is the one method that allows ever increasing quality with moderate prices. If our volume was so small that the tire-maker, lamp-maker, etc., could not set up a daily production for us, costs would begin to mount, for then these goods would have to be made in job lots and put into storage. Instead of always moving, parts would first handle into storage, then out of storage, then in job lots to us, always with the unproductive expenses of labor, warehouse space and interest.

Naturally the volume manufacturer is at a great advantage in offering car values to the public; for once volume is large enough, we have the true, complete straight-line system, beginning with raw materials and finishing with the completed cars. All such activities are the servants of quality. They enable the public to get better cars, better material, better workmanship. Thus you have finest quality, yet moderate cost.

We know at Hudson that materials are purchased advantageously; that manufacturing is carried on by the finest facilities available; that overhead is low. To turn an inventory five or six times a year is an average standard of efficiency; our organization turns it twice a month. We have no finished supplies or parts in storage; everything, so to speak, is in transit; starts in transit, in fact, before we receive it.

The New Chrysler "52" Two Door Sedan

Full vision, full comfort, full value—like other "52" closed types—with cadet visor, military front, vertical ventilating windshield, generous seating space and high-quality upholstery and finish.

NEW PRICES FOR CHRYSLER '52,' '62'

Substantial savings in the prices of the new Chrysler "52" and Great New "62," effective January 10, are announced by Chrysler officials.

The new prices make various body styles of these two cars from $50 to $100 lower than heretofore.

New "52" factory list prices, together with the savings, are:

Roadster (with rumble seat)	$670	Saving $55
Coupe	$670	Saving $55
Two-door sedan	$670	Saving $65
Touring	$695	Saving $55
Four-door sedan	$720	Saving $75
De Luxe coupe	$720	Saving $75
De Luxe sedan	$790	Saving $85

New "62" factor list prices and savings are:

Business coupe	$1,065	Saving $ 60
Roadster (with rumble seat)	$1,075	Saving $100
Two-door sedan	$1,095	Saving $ 50
Coupe (with rumble seat)	$1,145	Saving $100
Four-door sedan	$1,175	Saving $ 70
Landau sedan	$1,235	Saving $ 60

The "52," it is pointed out, has unusually roomy and comfortable wood and steel bodies, larger than for any other car in the low-price field, and combines with these features a remarkable performance capacity.

The Great New "62" includes features also not found in any other car at either its new or previous prices. Foremost among these are rubber shock insulators—pioneered in the Chrysler Imperial "80"—invar strut pistons and the seven-bearing crankshaft engine.

Economies in manufacture incident to Chrysler's strong growth, and the further advancement of the company's widely known principle of standardized quality, are given by the company officials as factors contributing to make possible these greater values to the public.

During the year 1927 the company advanced to third place among all manufacturers in the sales records of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Its growth has been the most rapid of any single company in the history of the automotive industry.

Company officials point out that 1927 sales of both these cars were the highest yet attained. They point out that by passing on to the public the even greater value these new prices make possible, that a still greater number of motor car owners can now take advantage of the abilities offered in these two cars.

MILLER ANNOUNCES 30X4.50 TIRE

Announcement of a new balloon tire size, the 30x4.50, to the growing list of balloon tire sizes to fit the new Ford and oversize on cars now using the 29x4.40 was made to local agencies by the Miller Rubber company today.

Construction of the new tire embodies those scientific principles of tire construction, one piece tread and sidewall, flat, roadshaped tread and Uniflex processes whose announcement a year or two ago revolutionized conceptions of tire manufacture.

The new tires have the heavy geared-to-the-road tread whose fine appearance makes them particularly desirable for use as spares on the new Fords, completing the equipment of the car. They have already been tested tens of thousands of miles on test cars running night and day, where actual service conditions have shown them to possess remarkable life and endurance under the demands of more weight, quick acceleration, great speed and quick stopping ability of the new car.

While designed primarily to fit new Fords, 30x4.50 balloons take the same rims as 29x4.40 tires and are proper oversize for all cars now equipped with that size. Wide adoption of the new tire on cars with the smaller tire is foreseen.

Quick indorsement of the 30x4.50 sizes, which already is being stocked by tire dealers throughout the country, has been received. Miller factories are rushed to supply the demand for the new size.

The new size is built to withstand 50 pounds more weight to the wheel, a total of 200 pounds to the car. Pressure of 35 pounds is advised by engineers. It is of four-ply carcass construction with a greater cross-section area than the 29x4.40 tire.

Stearns-Knight Completes Program Started 2 Years Ago

A Statement by H. J. Howard, President.

The initial policy adopted by the present financial group back of the Stearns-Knight organization which took control of the company two years ago called for the gradual development of a complete line of luxury vehicles to cover the upper price ranges in the quality group of fine cars, in addition to the standard lines of six and eight-cylinder models.

For the first year, efforts were devoted to perfecting the six-cylinder model on the standard chassis. Last year the Stearns-Knight straight-eight was introduced and it has subsequently established itself in a strong position among owners of the finer types of automobiles.

This was an innovation in Knight sleeve-valve motored cars in this country but was in line with the accomplishments of Panhard and other foreign builders of Knight motored cars.

It was the first American built car adapted to general distribution methods in the luxury car group, to offer an engine with a powerful development in excess of 100 horse-power.

From its initial showing it attracted favorable attention whereever it was exhibited and has since built up an enviable reputation for that type of service which is expected from a car of its price and general specifications.

This was the second step in the program of expansion along luxury car lines. This year the introduction of a de luxe line, powered with the Stearns-Knight straight-eight sleeve-valve motor and offered on two chassis of different wheelbase completes the original program and enables the Stearns-Knight organization to serve every demand in the upper price classes.

While the de luxe models will be built as standard production there will be custom built town cars to serve the requirements of buyers to whom this type of body makes special appeal.

The efforts of the Stearns-Knight Sales corporation, the newly organized distributing company will be devoted to furthering the interests of motor car owners in the sales field which is served by the Stearns-Knight.

This company wil direct all sales and service activties throughout the entire country.

P. A. HARSCH TO SPEAK ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Paul A. Harsch, C. S. B., of Toledo, Ohio, will deliver an address on Christian Science at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Keith's Georgia theater. The lecture is sponsored by First and Second Churches of Christ, Scientist, Atlanta.

Mr. Harsch's primary aim will be to acquaint the audience with facts concerning Christian Science. The subject of his lecture is "Christian Science: The Power of Good."

The lecturer is an authorized member of the board of lecturship of the mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Masts.

Beauty and Smart Lines Mark Models at New York Show

New York, January 14.—The men who make the "wheels" of America go round are here.

In a spectacular setting and with record-breaking crowds these automobile geniuses of America have come forward and laid their 1928 creations on the altar of public choice at the twenty-eighth annual national automobile show here this week.

Cars! Cars! Cars! Blues and greens and tans; mauves and yellows and reds. The end of the rainbow seems to have settled down here in Grand Central palace and left its glowing colors.

There are more new models, more advancements, more refinements, more subtleties of manufacturing than ever before offered the public. America has indeed grown up in automobile art.

There are at least a thousand different models at Grand Central palace, private showings in hotels and in salesrooms with an intrinsic value of over $2,000,000. Nearly 40 different makes of cars are exhibited.

There are no radical changes in the prices of cars this year in the majority of groups, but manufacturers are giving better value, adding much in fineness and comfort. Several makers have gone in for greater horsepower, noticeably Chrysler with a new 112-horsepower motor, and Auburn, with a new 115-horsepower one.

Two new types of bodies are also being presented — the boat-shaped speedster and the phaeton-sedan. The top of the phaeton-sedan can be lowered as can all four doors, thus giving the owner the benefit of an open car as well as a closed one.

Immaculately dressed salesmen, most of them in tuxedoes, explain in polished tones the qualities of their individual car to the onlookers. District agents and dealers from Missouri, from Texas, from California, inspect the new models approvingly and talk of the big sales in 1928. Company officials confer with them on business prospects. Ideas are interchanged. Sales methods are discussed. And all the time the crowds come and go; buying crowds, onlookers; from the east side, from Fifth avenue; from white wing to banker.

But the men who make the New York show possible are conspicuously absent. The big men of the industry; the giants of the automobile world, men like Chrysler, Cord, Willys, Sloan, Nash and Erskine are greatly talked of but seldom seen.

Quietly, but in many cases unassumingly, they are working in their hotel suites or in financial offices.

Who are these men and how did they rise to leadership?

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors corporation, a man a little past middle age with a body six feet tall and weighing less than 130 pounds, is to be found here. Sloan's philosophy is simple: "Without hard work nothing can be accomplished. There is no shortcut."

E. L. Cord, the youngest president in the industry, has made a phenomenal success with Auburn in his three years of leadership. He is the aggressive, quick on the trigger, executive. Always on his toes, passing by no ideas, trying always to forecast the public's taste. Cord is only 34, but since he has been with the Auburn company he has doubled its sales each year. He, too, works with executives as does Sloan, but there is not a detail in the factory that he doesn't know about. The automobile company assumes an obligation to its clientele, is his belief. This responsibility must be met by giving this clientele a better car each year at a lower commensurate cost. That's Cord and his philosophy.

Then there's John Willys. Sauve and polished with convincing personality by his very ease. Seldom does he give orders, but his executives have a way of anticipating his desires.

Walter Chrysler is another young executive although younger in ideas than in years. He gave up a million-dollar-a-year job to start his own factory. Chrysler wants young men around him, men with ideas. His philosophy? Will Chrysler go ahead in 1928? In Walter Chrysler's philosophy of work and ideas there is no doubt about it.

Executives of other companies are here, too, big and little, and each one seems to have his particular idea of what the public wants. But of one thing they are all agreed on and that is that America is demanding more beauty in its automobiles, more value and safety. The displays at the 1928 show would seem to answer that demand.

CHAMPION SPARKERS HAVE UNIQUE STUNT

Here is a brand-new one in radio program features—a serial song—and this unique stunt is to be presented by the Champion Sparkers, sponsored by the Champion Spark Plug company, of Toledo, Ohio, and Windsor, Canada, each Wednesday evening from 8 to 8:30 o'clock, eastern standard time, over stations WJZ, WRZA, WBZ, KDKA, WLW, WJR, KYW, KSD and WGMS.

The song to be serialized is the tremendous hit, "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie."

The song was introduced by the Champion Sparkers on December 14 and scored such a tremendous success that it immediately appeared on other programs, but Champion Sparkers scored again by repeating it on the next Wednesday night.

Now special arrangements have been made with the publishers, DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., of New York, whereby each week for ten weeks the Champion Sparkers will present brand-new choruses prepared by leading song writers.

Not only that, but the public will be given a chance to participate as requests for choruses from the listeners-in will be made and those who are successful will have their chorus sung.

The working out of this serial song, which is just like a serial story in a magazine or newspaper, will be watched with considerable interest because of the newness of the idea.

THE ONLY CAR OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD

For numberless puzzled motorists Dodge Brothers New Victory Six will simplify the problem of selection, for nowhere in the world is there a car like it. Greater expenditure will not duplicate it.

To possess this car's unique advantages you must possess this car.

A Radical Departure in Body Design

In The Victory, for the first time in history, the body sill is eliminated. Body and chassis are built as a single integral unit.

Thus, the wide, deep chassis frame of The Victory, now flush with the lines of the body, avoids the customary overhang of a wide body upon a narrow frame; and the chassis itself, rather than the body, supports all weight—body, floor, seats and passengers.

Amazing Results

The results of this construction are astonishing:

330 body parts are eliminated.

175 pounds of superfluous weight are cast off.

The all-important CENTER OF GRAVITY is materially lowered.

Without the slightest sacrifice of head-room or road-clearance, the over-all height of the car is also lowered—one of the secrets of The Victory's great beauty.

The amazing resources of the car's brilliant power plant are multiplied still further by perfect distribution and economy of weight.

Power in relation to load is materially increased—pick-up quickened—far greater flexibility achieved.

21 valid miles per gallon at 25 miles per hour is made possible FOR A SIX! Incredible smoothness at high speed is another great gift of this new design!

Elimination of back-wheel "chatter" when the 4-wheel Lockheed-Hydraulic brakes are quickly applied is still another!

And thanks to The Victory's low center of gravity and wide chassis frame, swaying, skidding, tipping—each a factor of weight and its proper and improper placement—are reduced to a new and negligible minimum.

Another New Safety Feature

Yet Dodge Brothers have taken a further revolutionary step to insure the safest motor transportation it is possible to create.

For the first time in automobile history, they have applied the so-called battleship construction to closed car design.

In other words, the body has a double steel shell, locked together, with an air space intervening—is actually TWO bodies, one within the other—yet lighter by 175 pounds—and the safest body known.

The VICTORY SIX

DODGE BROTHERS, INC.

THE SENIOR SIX AND AMERICA'S FASTEST FOUR ALSO ON DISPLAY

VICTORY SIX COMPLETES DODGE DIVERSIFICATION POLICY

LINE COMPLETE WITH VICTORY SIX

New Models Give Company Extensive Line of Most Attractive Passenger Cars.

With the recent announcement of the Victory Six by President E. G. Wilmer, it becomes evident that Dodge Brothers, Inc., has definitely entered upon a policy of diversification after many years during which the company operated in a single price field. Mr. Wilmer stated that the announcement of the Victory Six was the final step in an extensive program of readjustment which the company has been undergoing for the last year and a half, conducting its current business without interruption in the meantime.

The 1928 plans of Dodge Brothers include production of three separate lines of passenger cars. The standard four-cylinder line starts at $795 f. o. b. Detroit, the entirely new Victory Six line is priced at from $1,045 to $1,170, and the recently announced Senior models range between $1,495 and $1,595. The Graham Brothers truck division, now fully owned by Dodge Brothers, Inc., will continue to manufacture a comprehensive line of commercial cars, trucks, in five capacities from one-half-ton to two-ton, and motor coaches. Part of the line is powered with four-cylinder and part with six-cylinder engines.

It has been estimated that the development and introduction of the new lines has cost Dodge Brothers, Inc., between nine and ten million dollars, including new plant facilities and machinery. Despite these expenditures and the reduction in sales which accompanied the transition from a single to a multiple line of cars, the company has come through the first nine months of 1927 with all charges and preference dividend requirements fully covered and with $3,252,244 earnings applicable to the common stock. Total earned surplus, as of September 30, 1927, was $28,823,633. Figures for the last quarter will not be available for several weeks, but there was nothing in the situation during October, November and December to indicate any considerable alteration, one way or the other, in the company's financial position.

Marked increase in the activities at the Dodge factories here has been observed during the last few days. It is current knowledge in Detroit that the working force is being augmented substantially, one of the local signs that production is being stepped up.

From official sources it has been stated that the competitive position of the Dodge organization has been materially fortified by the new and diversified lines of products, and that the 1928 prospects for large production in the Dodge plants are considered excellent.

POLICE GRILLING BANDIT SUSPECTS

With a few suspects in the fatal shooting of W. M. Cleveland during a filling station robbery at Boulevard and Houston streets being grilled at the station house, police and detectives Saturday widened their search for the red-headed bandit who slugged and robbed Miss Mary Mankin, assistant secretary and bookkeeper of the Druid Hills Golf club, of $559 Friday morning.

Miss Mankin has furnished police with the numbers of 50 new $1 bills which were taken by the bandit. The numbers ran serially from N-2269201-I No N-2269251-D, police said. The robbery took place just after Miss Mankin alighted from a Ponce de Leon avenue car at Clifton road, the man felling her with a blow of his fist and grabbing the bag containing the money, Miss Mankin told police.

Funeral services for Cleveland, who was shot by a pair of negro bandits when he resisted their effort to rob his filling station, will be held at 10 o'clock this morning from the First Baptist church in East Point. The Rev. Joseph Crumbley will officiate. Interment will be in McDonough cemetery.

Other officers elected and installed were L. A. Thomas, first vice president; S. G. Davis, second vice president; F. L. Sweeney, secretary; Mrs. O. M. Brown, corresponding secretary, and I. A. Thomas, treasurer.

Retiring President Harris was paid high tribute as he vacated his chair for the incoming president. The club adopted resolutions expressing its appreciation for the cooperation received from the Fulton county commissioners, the mayor and general council of the city and The Constitution in the many improvements sponsored by the organization.

THIEF ENTERS HOME ON ARGONNE AVENUE

Theft of $15 from the home of W. H. Penland, at 873 Argonne avenue, N. E., was reported Saturday to police. The money was taken from Mr. Penland's clothes by a burglar who escaped from a window as Mrs. M. L. Penland walked into her son's room, it was said.

Emma Kennedy, negress, of 604 Magnolia street, reported to police the loss of $15 in cash and a money order for $10.

PIERCE-ARROW SIGNS NEW DEALERS

A marked growth in the size of Pierce-Arrow's sales organization since the introduction of the new series 81, Pierce-Arrow's moderately priced car, has been announced by George C. Hubbs, assistant to the president in charge of sales.

"The increase in size of an automobile sales organization is important to every owner," said Mr. Hubbs, "because it extends service to points where he may care to visit in his travels. Pierce-Arrow, regarded as a 'big city' car only a few years back, since service could only be obtained in the larger centers, now has increasingly wider representation in the majority of cities and towns. Its recent marked expansion gives indications of even greater service during the coming year."

Three important distributorships were announced by Mr. Hubbs. At Washington, D. C., David S. Hendrick has recently been appointed Pierce-Arrow distributor. At New Orleans, La., the Adams Motor Car company, Inc., have taken over the Pierce-Arrow franchise. At Charleston, S. C., E. B. Means, Inc., is the new Pierce-Arrow distributor.

Other points where Pierce-Arrow has new representation include: Fleigh Motor and Tire company, Cumberland, Md.; Reliance motors, Galesburg, Ill.; Right garage, La Salle, Ill.; H. B. McFerren, Chambersburg, Pa.

PEP MEETING HELD AT BUICK BRANCH HERE

J. R. J. Shepherd, Buick retail salesman, with Joe B. Johnson, Tampa, Fla., was the guest of the Buick Atlanta branch Monday evening, having been brought to Atlanta by H. H. Alexander, Buick branch manager, to repeat a sales talk which Mr. Shepherd has carried to a number of Buick organizations.

"Pep" talks usually originate with sales executives and are brought to the retail sales force. In this case a retail salesman stopped his work on the firing line to bring a message to other retail salesmen, sales managers and factory representatives. Mr. Shepherd's audience consisted of the sales staffs of Decatur Buick company, D. C. Black, and the entire personnel of the Atlanta Buick branch. The speaker's message, based on his successful sales experience, was enthusiastically received by his Buick co-workers.

COLUMBUS JURIST TO ADDRESS DINNER OF VETERANS' SONS

Judge A. W. Cozart, of Columbus, will be the principal speaker at a dinner of the John B. Gordon camp Sons of Confederate Veterans, at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night, it was announced Saturday. The banquet will be held on the roof of the Ansley hotel, and all members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy have been invited to attend.

Thursday is the birthday of that heroic leader of the Confederate forces in the war between the state, General Robert E. Lee, and the occasion will be fittingly celebrated. Henderson Hallman, newly-elected commander of the camp, will preside as toastmaster. Former Senator Hoke Smith will introduce Judge Cozart.

Members of the camp are planning to carry a large delegation to the national convention of the Sons of the Confederacy, which will be held at Little Rock, Ark., in May. The local delegation will invite the 1929 convention to Atlanta.

Commander Booth To Attend Salvation Army Meet Here

The southern territorial congress of the Salvation Army will be held in Atlanta January 20-25, and more than 600 delegates from 15 southern states are expected to attend.

Commander Evangeline Booth, national leader of the Salvation Army forces, will be present and will deliver two of her famous sermons at the Howard theater on Sunday, January 22. The text for the morning sermon will be "The Search of the Ages." This service begins at 10:45 and the evening service at 7:30. Miss Booth's subject in the evening will be "The Christ of the Doorstep."

A special musical program, to start at 2:45 in the afternoon, has been arranged and Lieutenant Commissioner W. A. McIntyre, of the Salvation Army, will preside.

On Monday evening at 7:45 o'clock the delegates will, at the Forsyth theater, present a spectacular pageant showing life of their respective states. The public is invited to attend all meetings.

Woman's Leadership Demonstrated.

Commander Evangeline Booth is a living demonstration of the opportunities for leadership and distinguished public service that are open to women of capacity and conviction. This fact is all the more interesting when it is remembered that, as a girl of 20, she became a dominating public figure during a period when women leaders were not accorded the deference and sympathy they now receive in public life.

Commander Booth is usually described as "a singularly gifted personality." She inherited many fine qualities from her parents, William and Catherine Booth, the founders of the Salvation Army. But "gifts" of this character soon lose their glamor and usefulness unless utilized and subjected to exacting tests. Evangeline Booth has not reached the pinnacle of a brilliant career simply and only because she is a "gifted personality." She has reached her present position as commander of Salvation Army forces in the United States, and as one of the outstanding women of recent history, by utilizing and developing her "gifts" and by proving herself supremely worthy of the responsibilities and opportunities they have entailed. Her distinction has come solely as a result of continuous hard work, devotion to convictions and ideals, willingness to face perplexing situations as well as pleasant ones, a comprehensive love of mankind and a deep-rooted understanding of the glory of God's plan for His children.

Evangeline Booth was born in London on Christmas day, the fourth daughter and seventh child of William and Catherine Booth. Her record of service extends over 40 years. Of this period 23 years have been spent in this country as national commander.

Assisted Children's Meetings.

Before the commander had entered her 'teens she assisted in the children's meetings conducted in the schoolroom of her father's home, and a few years later she was placed as captain in charge of the great western hall which the army had opened in Marylebone, in one of the worst quarters of London.

Later, as field commissioner, she traveled the country extensively, and plunged fearlessly into the riots promoted against the army at Eastbourne, Torquay and other places. The commander's service in England included charge of the international training garrison. Later she became territorial commissioner for Canada and Newfoundland.

The commander, who, as a platform speaker, is regarded as among the foremost women in America, is also a musician, and has written and composed a number of Salvation Army songs, her latest productions having been just issued under the title, "The Song of the Evangel."

President Wilson bestowed upon the commander the distinguished service medal in recognition of the Salvation Army's special service and cooperation during the war period. She received in 1921 the honorary degree of M. A. of Tufts college, Massachusetts.

Berry Schools Observe 26th Year of Founding

Rome, Ga., January 14.—(Special.)—"The future of the schools does not depend so much upon me now, neither does it depend so much upon the alumni but it depends on you," said Miss Martha Berry, founder of Berry schools, in an address to the students on the twenty-sixth anniversary of their founding, which was observed Friday and Saturday.

Miss Berry's address, in part, follows:

"This morning I went over to the little original cabin and I could not help but linger there and think over the early days of the schools. That little log cabin is so wonderful to me. It is full of love, full of vision, full of hope. It was there I first thought of you and loved you and I wish that I had you there this morning, because I feel that we should be there on the anniversary of the schools.

"Yesterday, I had lunch with the visitors in our beautiful dining hall at the girls' school. All the real beauty of the school depends on the lives of the boys and girls. Living in a beautiful place I feel that one should have beautiful thoughts. Guests often ask me why I have tried to make the building so beautiful, and if I do not think that they are too good for the girls. I always tell them 'No, they are not too good.' I think nothing is too good for the boys and girls. The better surroundings you have the more beautiful your characters should be and that is why I want to have everything beautiful at the Berry schools.

"The future of the schools does not depend so much upon me now, neither does it depend so much upon the alumni. Of course, it depends upon them in some measure, but it depends a great deal upon you. The ones you see on the platform are our products of the past and you are to be the products of the future. I cannot hope to be here on the fiftieth anniversary, but I expect you to be here, and I expect those little children of the log cabin schol to be here on the platform. It is the loyalty of the boys and girls that makes the Berry schools different from other schools.

"I would rather be a girl or a boy, facing me this morning as a Berry school student, working his or her way, than to be a son or daughter of a millionaire. The day is past when you can live on the names of your fathers and forefathers. This is the age when a person must work his own way and make his own name. Your struggles are an honor to you, but if you are ashamed of your struggles, if you are ashamed that you are working your way, if you have the slightest thing about your school of which you are ashamed, I would not want to be you. The Berry schools have nothing to be ashamed of.

CENTER HILL BAPTISTS PLAN CHURCH AFFAIR

Plans are being completed for the new year's party for the Center Hill Baptist church, which will be held at the church at 7:15 o'clock Wednesday night, January 18.

The second of a series of messages will be brought to the congregation this morning by the pastor, the Rev. W. F. Hinesley, his subject being "How Do We Know That the Bible Is the Word of God." The third of the series will be delivered Sunday night on "The Great Tragedies of the Bible."

A Wolverine sedan visits "Monticello," the home of Thomas Jefferson, near Charlottesville, Virginia.

LIVE WOLVERINE CAPTURED IN NORTH

According to information recently received from the Reo factory by Mr. R. F. Watson, of the Reo Atlanta company, local Reo branch, the national zoological park at Washington, D. C., will soon be the home of an Alaskan wolverine, one of the rarest specimens in captivity and the animal from which the Reo Wolverine takes its name. The rarity of the wolverine in park collections, Mr. Watson stated, is not due to its scarcity, but to the difficulty of catching one alive, or in fit shape to be held in captivity.

"The wolverine is the most powerful of all animals of its size and is probably the cleverest animal alive in matching its wits against men," Mr. Watson says. "It is a prize for fur trappers, if it can be caught, but there are few traps, however, cleverly concealed, which deceive the wolverine. It will follow up a line of traps for miles along northern rivers, carefully taking the bait from each one and removing and eating any other fur-bearing animal which may have been captured. Special traps have been devised for the wolverine himself, but generally they furnish him with a meal without injuring him. He is the Houdini of the animal world."

The Reo Wolverine, according to Mr. Watson was named for the wolverine of the woods because it is a wolverine in every part—a wolverine for strength, a wolverine for tireless endurance and a wolverine in ability to do its job.

The rare California condor is the largest bird in existence.

SERVICE MANAGER FOR HALL DAVIS

A. J. ("JEFF") BELLAH.

The Hall Davis Motor company, one of the largest Ford dealers in the city, announces the appointment of A. J. ("Jeff") Bellah as service manager.

Mr. Bellah has been continuously identified with the servicing of Ford cars for many years—in fact, connected with local Ford dealers as "trouble shooter" and service manager for about twelve years. During this period he has made an enviable reputation for his capability to diagnose and eliminate automobile troubles of all kinds, and is recognized for his ability to deliver work when promised. He is personally known by a large clientele of Ford fleet owners and commercial houses as well as individuals, and is well qualified to fill this new appointment.

Flee From Floods.

Rio Janeiro, January 14.—(AP)—The National Telegraph company today stated that floods in the states of Mina Ceraes and Bahia had caused the people to evacuate several towns and that it was feared that many lives had been lost. The floods were caused by heavy storms in the upper plateau region of central Brazil.

Chromium Plating Adopted For All Studebaker Exteriors

Chromium plating has been adopted for all exterior "bright-metal" parts on Studebaker cars, according to an announcement made by the Studebaker corporation. As a result of the use of this new metal Studebaker owners are assured of bumpers, headlights, radiator shells and other plated parts which are free from rust or tarnish, and which in addition are virtually wearproof.

Chromium is even brighter than nickel when polished, and is harder than the hardest tool steel. It is rustproof, impervious to salt and all but two acids, and resists heat up to 3,000 degree. It is practically unscratchable, and so hard that even a thin film of it on other metal will cut glass. Finally it can be plated on almost any other metal, giving a coat of complete and lasting protection.

While this last quality would make it possible for Studebaker to apply chromium direct to the polished metal, thus taking a short cut to reduce production costs, the corporation's research engineers found that the most satisfactory results were obtained when the surface to be plated was first polished, then copper plated, then nickel plated, and after a final polish, given its lasting coat of chromium.

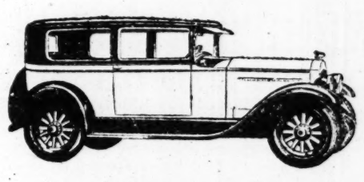

Brighter than nickel when first applied, chromium has the added advantage of being extremely easy to keep bright. Due to the fact that it will not tarnish or rust, a few strokes with a soft cloth is sufficient to restore the original luster to headlamps and radiator shell after they have become dulled by rain or exposure. And regardless of how much the chromium coating is polished, it does not wear off like a similar thin coating of nickel plating.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

OVER ONE MILLION CARS BUILT BY CHEVROLET COMPANY IN 1927

DECEMBER RUSH PUTS TOTAL OVER MILLION MARK

Company's Production for Year Nearly 100 Per Cent Over Output of 1925.

Having achieved world leadership in automobile manufacturing in 1927 with a yearly output nearly 2,000 units in excess of its program of 1,000,000 cars, the Chevrolet Motor company has embarked in 1928 upon the most ambitious production and sales plans in its entire 16 years of existence, according to W. S. Knudson, president and general manager.

Production for the year just ended totaled 1,001,834 units for a gain of more than 36 per cent over the 732,147 cars and trucks built in 1926 and 93 per cent over the 1925 production of 519,060 units.

The 1,000,000th car built in 1927 rolled off the assembly lines at the Flint, Mich., plant December 30, with C. F. Barth, vice president in charge of manufacturing, at the wheel. The history making model was a sedan. It was prepared for immediate shipment so that, with more than 32,000 other new models built in December, it might be available for prompt delivery to new-car purchasers.

Throughout 1927 factories were on peak production schedules, while month after month tentative schedules had to be increased to meet the demand for the 1927 models.

The year as a result was the most spectacular and most successful in Chevrolet history.

Remarkable as were its 1927 achievements, however, the outlook for 1928 looms even brighter, according to Mr. Knudson, who stated that while no definite production figure has been set for 1928, this year's volume is certain to top by a comfortable margin the record high mark for 1927.

His prediction is based on country-wide prosperity, which by every token should bring the automobile industry the greatest year it has ever known, Mr. Knudsen stated.

"Our own organization is prepared to handle its full share of this anticipated growth in business," he said. "All Chevrolet production operations are on a maximum capacity basis that we may meet the 1928 demand, and make immediate delivery on all models.

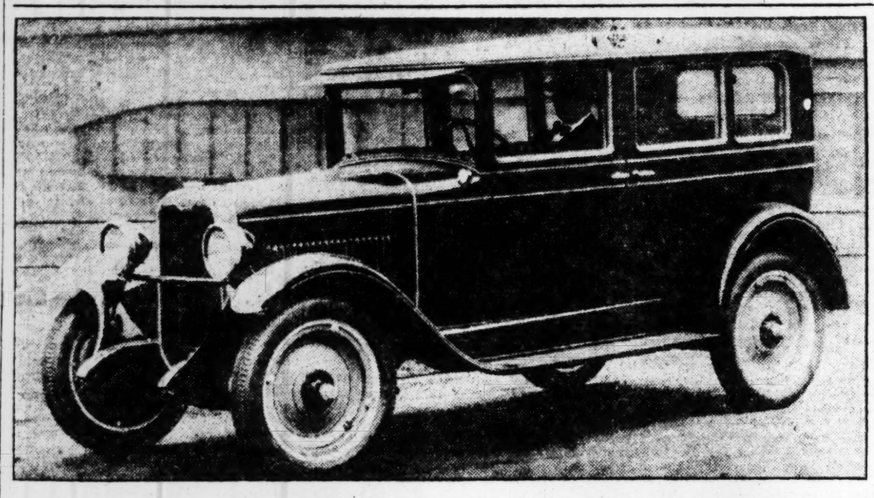

"During the latter part of 1927 we made extensive preparations for our 1928 program. Our sales organization has been enlarged and intensified through the creation of the new regional and zone sales offices, and by additions to the field personnel.

"Our service to the owner is on a new high level through the opening of new parts depots and warehouses to expedite delivery of new or replacement parts.

"Production facilities also have been augmented by the recent purchase of a $4,500,000 foundry at Saginaw, Mich., and a new assembly plant which will get into production shortly at Atlanta, Ga., to supply the southwest, and which will increase by 550 cars a day the volume of the other seven assembly plants now in operation in the United States.

"With these improved facilities, and with our bigger and better car for 1928, which at substantial price reductions, won such a warm public reception upon its initial showing on January 1, we feel assured of establishing new records this year and of maintaining the steadfast public confidence in the Chevrolet Motor company, which alone made possible our very-gratifying showing in 1927."

The 1,000,000 car built in 1927 by Chevrolet Motor company is shown above as it rolled off the assembly line at Flint, Mich., on December 30, with C. F. Barth, vice president in charge of manufacturing, at the wheel. The record model was a new 1928 sedan. More than 50,000 of the new cars have been built to date that all dealers in all parts of the country may make immediate delivery on all models.

TEAL TO SUCCEED SHORT AT HOWARD

With the departure this morning of Al Short, Howard band leader, who goes to the post of managing director of the Capitol theater, Chicago, the Howard announces that Ray Teal, who arrived here Saturday night from Richmond, Va., will succeed Mr. Short and present John Murray Anderson's "Tokio Blues" as his initial offering this week.

Mr. Teal is an experienced stage band director, having served in that capacity in the Mosque theater, Richmond. He is said to be an accomplished soloist on saxophone and clarinet, and to have an engaging personality.

The new Howard leader is a graduate of the University of California and spent several years on the Pacific coast, where he was associated with Fanchon and Marco, large theater interests.

Mr. Short's final week at the Howard theater was marked by great ovations for the popular band leader, who, in the past five months, has made himself one of the most prominent theatrical figures in the city. He was entertained Saturday night at a farewell party by Ernest Morrison, manager of the Howard, and Edwin Adler, assistant manager. A number of Mr. Short's closer friends, including the press, were invited.

CAPT. A. R. BOLLING SENT TO FORT HUNT

Captain A. R. Bolling, the oldest officer in point of service with the twenty-second infantry, has been detached from the regiment after eight consecutive years' duty. He goes to the sixteenth infantry brigade, stationed at Fort Hunt, Virginia. General H. O. Williams, former post commander at Fort McPherson, is commanding the brigade. Captain Bolling will act as adjutant for the brigade as well as for the district of Washington, which General Williams also commands.

Captain Bolling first joined the twenty-second infantry from Fort Huachuca in November, 1920, and moved to Fort McPherson with the regiment from Fort Jay in 1922. He has commanded several companies in the regiment and has been regimental post adjutant, holding the latter position when his transfer orders were received. Captain Bolling has been especially interested in the athletic and recreational features of the service. He coached both the basketball and soccer teams of the twenty-second infantry for several years and also acted as manager of the basketball team.

The note was raised from a $10 certificate to a $20 bill by pasting the figure "2" over the "1," according to charges against McArthur, who claims that he was given the bill by another man and did not know that it had been raised.

EFFORT TO STOP WOOLEN MILL SALE LOSES IN U. S. COURT

An injunction sought by the Peerless Woolen Mills, of Rossville, Ga., to prevent Josiah T. Rose, collector of internal revenue, from selling the plant Tuesday under a distraint warrant issued for the collection of income taxes, was refused Saturday morning by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley in district court.

The woolen mills' petition sought to show that the tax was too high. Judge Sibley informed the petitioners that they would have until 9 o'clock Monday morning to prepare a petition for an appeal.

The woolen mills returned income taxes at $116,000 for 1919 and paid half of that amount, claiming that it did not owe the entire amount, it was said.

State Supreme Court Withdraws Its Opinion In Chatham Tax Case

The state supreme court has withdrawn its recently-rendered opinion sustaining Chatham superior court in requiring the Chatham county commissioners to levy a five-mill school tax voted in 1926, it was learned from court attaches here Saturday.

Such withdrawal, however, does not change the present status of the case, it was explained, the judgment to stand as rendered unless the high court decides to change it later. Withdrawing an opinion, court officials pointed out, does not necessarily mean that the judgment will be revoked. It may mean, on the contrary, only a desire of the court to make minor revisions in the statement of its decision.

In the original opinion, handed down Tuesday, the supreme court held that the Chatham school system qualified as an independent local school system, and as such was authorized under state law to levy school taxes additional to the five-mill levy permitted counties by the state constitution. The decision affirmed the Chatham court's judgment in issuing a mandamus requiring the commissioners to proceed with the levy.

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

GA. AVE. FOURTH PLANS PLAYLET

Georgia Avenue school had a fine daddies' meeting of the P.-T. A. last week. In spite of the cold weather many were there and enjoyed the program and the social hour afterward. We were glad to have several of the board members as our guests on this occasion.

Thirty-six boys and girls from our school have won Palmer penmanship buttons by having their test papers sent to the Palmer company in New York city. The high sixth boys and girls won the advanced button. We are so glad to have such excellent Palmer method people in our school. It represents long, careful work on their part to gain this reward. Miss West, graduate of the Palmer school, is our teacher in penmanship.

High one pupils are working out a project on the protectors as policemen, firemen and soldiers.

Low two is trying to get every person in the room to drink three cups of milk a day. They are also making clocks so they can tell time.

High two were very to have Everett Duncan and Robert Hartford as new pupils.

Low four is going to have a play, "A Frog He Would Awooing Go." Ann Kendrick is Miss Mousie, Carrie Osborn is the frog's mother, J. C. Jackson is Uncle Rat, and Henry Jones is the frog.

High four bought a pencil sharpener with the money won at the P.-T. A. meeting. They have a new pupil, Evelyn Pair, from Adair school.

Low five is making milk posters. They are studying the weather in science—dew, frost, rain, wind, hail and snow.

High five pupils are thinking of having a program Friday night, January 20, about the time of the civil war and a few poems about General Lee. Our teacher, Mrs. Daniel, is running the kitchen this week.

Low six pupils were glad to have a new boy, Sam Duncan. We have had 100 per cent in banking for eight weeks in succession. We are all working hard as promotion time is near. We are all so glad that the weather is so that we can stay in our own room again, for we have been in the auditorium.

High six enjoyed a visit from Mr. Hunter last week. We are always glad to have visitors in our school.

LEONARD RODBELL.

ILLUSTRATED TALK AT HARRIS SCHOOL

This week our school had charge of the school radio programs for the elementary schools. On Monday the sixth grades had as their subject "Frank L. Stanton." Several of his songs were sung, "Just a Wearying for You" and "Sweet Miss Mary;" an original poem, "Frank L. Stanton," was written and read by Mabel Ward, and Joel Chandler Harris' tribute to Stanton was read.

The Wednesday program was given by the third and fourth grades. They gave two violin solos, an original song, "J. C. Harris," was sung and several speeches by George Bishop and Margaret Wakefield made up the rest of the program.

The Friday program, by the first and second grades, consisted of a story, "Hansel and Gretel," told by Miss Walter Dallas, a song by Jacqueline Gullat, and a story, "The Jumping Jack," told by Jane Denton.

We had several visitors this week, Miss Charlotte Smith, the art supervisor, visited the upper grades, and Mrs. Stone the lower grades. We enjoyed them so much.

Dr. Donaldson gave a most interesting talk on teeth and illustrated it with moving pictures. It helped us so much, and we will remember it very much longer on account of the pictures.

FAITH LOW TWO STUDIES ESKIMOS

Low kindergarten enjoyed the snow and cold weather last week. The children made sun pictures and jello.

One of the children in high kindergarten brought a pair of ice skates to school and we enjoyed seeing them and talking of how children use them in the colder states.

Low 1 is sorry that Miss Pollard, their teacher, is sick, and hope she will soon be well again.

We want everyone in high first to make an extra effort to come to school every day and also to make an effort to bank every week.

High 2 is trying to get every child in the class to drink four glasses of milk every day. We need healthy bodies so we can have healthy minds.

The children in low 2 are very interested in the study of Eskimo children. They have made a chart about them.

Low 3 is glad to welcome Ivy and Willard Johnson as new members of our class.

Low 4 has written Mr. Sutton a letter.

High 4 was very glad when their teacher told them that they could make milk charts. Every child will make one.

We are glad to have Elnora Cowan back with us after a week's absence. Carl Mitchell is leading the class in good work.

Low 6 is going to start on their milk posters soon. They have very fine ideas.

The boys of ungraded high are trying their skill at writing stories in rhyme.

The ungraded low class enjoyed the snow last week. INEZ KALB.

ATLANTA CHILDREN TO HEAR RADIO CONCERT

A cordial invitation is extended by the Atlanta Music club, through its chairman of public school music, Miss Ruth Hinman, to every child over the age of ten to attend the special Damrosch radio concert on Saturday evening, January 21, at 7 o'clock, in the tea room of M. Rich & Bros. Co.'s store. This program will be presented for the children under auspices of the Atlanta Music club, and affords an excellent opportunity to all music-loving pupils of the Atlanta schools to hear the program, which was arranged especially for children by Walter Damrosch, eminent orchestra conductor of New York city.

The Alabama street entrance to the store will be open promptly at 6:30 p. m. of the 21st, and a special elevator will be run for the occasion. Parents are invited to accompany the children, and all are requested to be in their seats by 6:45 o'clock. There is no charge for admission.

DR. COX IS SPEAKER FOR O'KEEFE P.-T. A.

Half the year has gone. The mid-year exams are drawing near and naturally there is much wailing and gnashing of teeth and such remarks as "Gee! I wouldn't mind math so much but if I have to take English I'll just pass out." On the nineteenth and twentieth these people will meet their doom for those days are set aside for the midyear finals.

The eighth grade pupils are asked to give special thought to the choice of their courses, as these will continue until they enter senior high school. There is the choice between three courses, the general, which includes Latin, the commercial with the typing and bookkeeping and the technical, which gives the shops or domestic science.

Nine A pupils who are to pass on to the senior high school have had several days set aside for their graduation exercises at the close of the semester.

The mid-year meeting of O'Keefe's P.-T. A. was a very outstanding one. It was held Thursday evening, January 12, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Cox, president of Emory university, spoke to the parents on "Characteristics of the Adolescent Age." His discourse was very interesting and very instructive.

PARIS POLICE ASK RASPUTIN'S SLAYER TO LEAVE FRANCE

Paris, January 14.—(United News.) Prince Yousopoff, confessed slayer of Rasputin, the monk whose notoriety in connection with the imperial Russian family attracted world-wide attention a few years ago, was understood today to have been asked to leave France. Youssopoff was a Russian imperial prince.

Complaints said to have been made to police by fathers of several young girls were reported to have caused the request for his departure.

Juniors of S. M. Inman School Collect Old Shoes by Hundreds

Junior Red Cross members at the Samuel M. Inman school have done their bit toward the January project of the Atlanta chapter by saving old shoes. These three young ladies are shown surrounded by a portion of the collection that has been made during the last week or two. They are, left to right, Betty Weithington, Margaret Beasley and Natalie Mallory.

Shoes of all sizes, shapes and colors are proving the basis of a most interesting and important project that the Atlanta Junior Red Cross is carrying out during the month of January. This month has been designed as Thrift month, and in connection with this idea the juniors have been collecting old shoes.

These shoes will be repaired by students at the Thompson Junior High school under the direction of a professional shoe repairer, whose services have been engaged by the chapter. When the repairs have been completed the shoes will be turned over to the agencies of the Community Chest who have a use for them and through these agencies they will be distributed or otherwise disposed of.

This project is one of three years' standing with the Atlanta Junior Red Cross and has come to be regarded as one of its most important. The original plan as begun three years ago was to have the juniors repair the shoes and then to dispose of them at a sale, turning the funds into other channels of welfare work. Lately it has developed into the plan of repairing the shoes and permitting some agencies of the Community Chest to use them.

Last year an ex-service man had charge of the instruction of the juniors in the repair work. In this way hundreds of pairs of shoes were made usable and the work of a number of welfare agencies was materially aided.

The project is one of a real practical value and is being entered into heartily by the Atlanta Junior Red Cross members.

JOE BROWN TO GRADUATE CLASS

Life is strange! Two events loom before us, close, so close! One event is filled with misgivings, the other with pure joy. To reach the second, we must pass the first, which is examinations spelled with a capital E. Of course, some few lucky ones will be exempt, but others of us must pass tests next week. And if we pass, then comes the second event—promotion day.

On January 26 at Park Street Methodist church, 35 Joe Brown pupils will receive promotion certificates. Already the program is being planned. Dr. W. M. Seay will give the invocation, Frazier Moore and Estelle McKibben will speak, and Dr. Lee Cutts will pronounce the benediction. The school orchestra will furnish the music.

On the afternoon of the 27th the promotees from the nearby schools will be welcomed to Joe Brown. We hear that the classes coming to us are made up of fine boys and girls and we shall be glad to have them at Joe Brown.

MORELAND ATHLETES LEAD CITY SCHOOLS

Moreland school was happy to read in Sunday's paper that they had won two first places in the city in athletics. The girls of high six and the boys of low six won first places. Sam Hill, of low six, led the city in chinning, pulling up 23 times.

The dentist has finished examining our teeth and we hope to be 100 per cent soon.

The children are about settled after the holidays and have fresh, clean minds with which to begin the new year.

The kindergarten pupils are enjoying their new piano and are making up for lost time.

The entire school had lots of fun during the recent snow and enjoyed making snow scenes.

Miss Rowland's class made New Year cards.

The attendance banner was won by Miss Cockrell's class this week.

All classes are studying for examinations and almost every child expects to get promoted. Low six pupils are very proud of their athletic record. They are working hard in the milk campaign. OLIVIA TAYLOR.

T. H. S. Basketball Season Shows List of Victories

Tomorrow and Tuesday are the only days for review at Tech High before exams. The examinations come on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Many Smithies will get three days' holiday for obtaining an average of 80 per cent or more in all of their studies, as this mark exempts any student who acquires it in the study.

Basketball season is well under way at Tech High. The Smithies have played four games up to the writing of this article, all four having been victories. The scores of the games were: Tech High 35, Canton High 28; Tech High 31, Lawrenceville High 28; Tech High 36, Insurance of North America 20; Tech High 43, Fulton High 9.

The rest of the independent schedule is as follows: January 12, Commercial High at J. P. C.; January 14, G. M. A. at T. H. S.; January 17, G. M. A. at G. M. A.; January 19, Fulton High at T. H. S.; January 21, Columbus High at Columbus, Ga.; January 24, Commercial at T. H. S.; January 27, Boys' High at T. H. S.; February 7, Boys' High at T. H. S.; Lanier High, Macon; U. S. B.; Decatur; Braselton and the prep tournament will be played, but the exact dates have not been fixed.

Henry Maddox, football manager for the 1927 team, was elected to act as basketball manager for the Smithies this year. Maddox is a very popular student and should prove a very satisfactory manager.

Due to some unintentional mistake, the name of Miss Frances Jameson, one of the "Tehisean" sponsors, was left off the announcement of sponsors a few weeks ago.

Last Wednesday J. C. Savage and Clinton Ezell, coach and captain of the 1928 Smithy swimming team, called a meeting of the candidates for this year's swimming squad. Plans were discussed and it was decided that practice would be held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at the Y. M. C. A. The last year's leter men who are back are Ezell, Knox, Wise, Rich, Kingsberry, Bragg, MacNamara and Sanders. Besides these there are several stars from Junior High and boys who failed to make letters last year.

Tech High's mermen have won the city prep championship for the past two years and should repeat again with ease this year.

Superintendent Sutton Sends Weekly Message

TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ATLANTA,

My dear Boys and Girls:

The beginning of anything is interesting. We like to study the beginning of a life. Biography tells where a man was born and about his early childhood and what he did as he grew from boyhood to manhood. The beginning of a country is always an interesting part of its history. We like to read of the voyage of Columbus discovering a new land, and of the wild savages that he found on the western coast. The beginnings of an organization or a school or any kind of an institution is always an interesting part of its history.

And so it is that the beginning of a new year is one of the best and most interesting parts of the year. Well begun is half done—is a fine old phrase, and one that is really worth remembering. So to you, my boys and girls, I wish to ask that we shall make a good beginning in the year 1928. In a week or two we shall have our final examinations in our high schools, and we in the elementary schools shall get our report cards saying "promoted" or "not promoted." All of this will come upon us very soon. So in the beginning of the year 1928, let us make each one of the hours in each of the days count toward having a splendid record. Do not under any circumstances neglect our lessons at this critical time. See to it that each day's work is carefully prepared, and that we go to our recitations ready to give the right answers to the questions asked by our teachers, and to discuss the subjects which we have. Let us begin the year 1928 right. Make January the greatest month of all your history.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Boys' High Students Win Spelling Holiday Friday

Twenty-eight Boys' High students enjoyed a full holiday last Friday, January 13, in recognition of their attainment of 100 per cent on the recent city-wide high school spelling test. Not a few boys in the school missed their goal by only one or two points, and if the privilege had been extended several more points the authorized absences would have passed the 50 mark.

The final touches are being made to the Aliciphronian, Boys' High's Senior Year Book, and all copy will be in the hands of the printer within the next fortnight. The theme of this year's annual is an unusual one, and the production bids fair to surpass all others in the history of the school. Jack Weems, editor-in-chief, and Howard Floyd, business manager, backed by a capable and efficient staff, are putting forth their best efforts to present an annual worthy of highest praise.

Final examinations are looming up now closer than ever and will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

When the junior high schools graduate their mid-year classes in February many of the boys will come to Boys' High school as freshmen. This will materially increase the school's enrollment and bring the grand total well over 650. Boys' High is constantly growing and if the present situation continues will threaten the records of other schools in enrollment.

Debate and declamation programs have been temporarily suspended and will be resumed only after the final exams and semester end have been safely passed. The crowded program of the days preceding examinations and beginning a new quarter made this necessary in order to give more time to the classroom work. The programs will recommence on February 9, however, and continue throughout the rest of the term.

Boys' High debaters are planning several contests for the early spring. It is planned that the school will enter the Sewanee meets, held annually at the University of the South. Debates with city schools will be arranged and the school teams will enter the fifth district meet held in April.

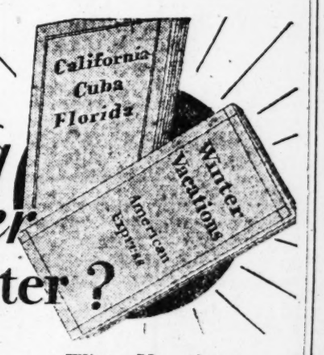

MARIST FORMS OFFICERS' CLUB

Last week the Marist debating team held forth on the subject, "Capital Punishment Should Be Abolished." The negative was victorious, represented by Frank Davie, Betram Jacobson and Paschal Rapier. The affirmative was well stated by Charles Coleman, Dowdell Brown and James Fitzsimmons.

An officer's club has been established at Marist for the purpose of bringing the commissioned officers into closer personal contact.

The club officers recently elected are: Eugene Murphy, president; Rufus Darby, vice president, and Dick Voorhis, secretary and treasurer. Major E. R. E. Schmidt was elected an honorary member of the club.

ORMEWOOD FIRST HOLDS CAMPAIGN

One hundred per cent in every activity is the aim of the Ormewood school fourth grade, and they are beginning with an attempt to gain this record in promotions. The students were glad to receive a visit from Miss Smith last week. They are at present studying the horse in their science work.

Mrs. Stone recently entertained the second grade with a talk on the Eskimos. These pupils are studying these people in every phase, their methods of living and all they eat and do.

High and low three were proud of the nine 100 per cent papers that were made in their Friday arithmetic test.

High two pupils have enjoyed making models and pictures in paper of the toys they received at Christmas.

The milk campaign is of great interest to the children of the first grade. Mrs. Stone also spoke to this class Friday.

The study of milk has been the leading feature of the work in the high kindergarten for the past week, and there has been much competition among the pupils to see who shall drink the most milk and gain the most in weight.

MARGARET HANSELL.

SPRING LOW THREE WINS P.-T. A. PRIZES

Six one is studying about the snow. They find it very interesting.

Six two is enjoying the talks on "Drinking Lots of Milk."

Each child in low five one made a record card which they are marking when they get 100.

Low four five have been enjoying drawing snow scenes.

Low four is working hard to get their work done for promotion day.

Low three is very fortunate in having 85 to spend, that they have won as P.-T. A. prizes. They are planning to spend the money in beautifying the room.

The children of low two have an Eskimo scene on the sand table.

All the high first children are working hard to be up to the right weight by the time the milk campaign ends.

The children of the kindergarten are very much interested in the milk campaign. They check up each day.

MARVIN R. M'CLATCHEY.

New Law Makes Iowa Town Paradise for Radio Fans

ELECTRIC MACHINES BANNED NOON TO MIDNIGHT

Fairfield, Iowa, January 14.—(AP)—Housewives of Fairfield who use electrical devices to aid their daily activities must have such work completed before noon each day.

If washing machines and vacuum cleaners are operated after that hour and interfere with radio reception, the owner of the cause of the interference is liable to a fine of not more than $100 or 30 days in jail, for, beginning today, afternoons and evenings in Fairfield belong to radio owners.

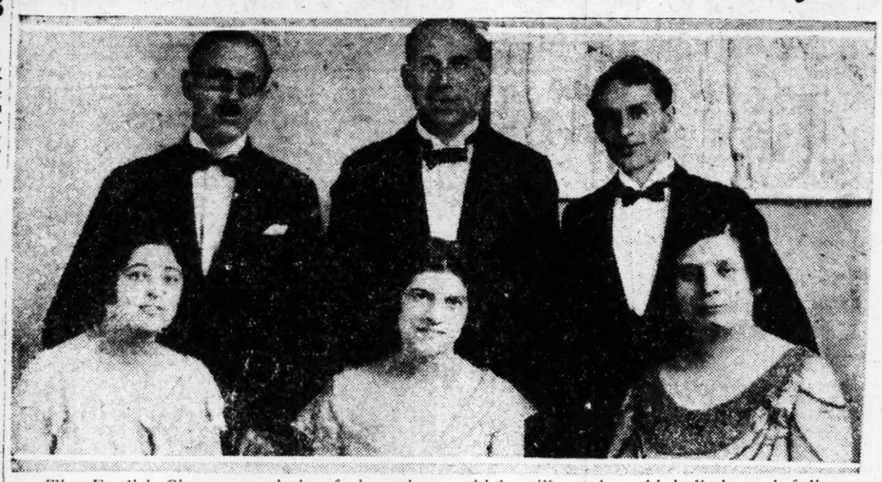

An ordinance forbidding the use of electrical appliances that interfere with radio between noon and midnight went into effect at noon. Owners of receiving sets, with the town officials, are keeping ears tuned for the first unnecessary and unlawful interference with their daily programs.

Operators of violet-ray machines, housewives with washing machines or vacuum cleaners which produce static in neighbors' loud speakers—owners of any electrical appliance that interferes with radio reception—must finish their work before noon or take the consequences.

As the only exception, physicians will be permitted to use X-ray machines in cases of emergency.

The new ordinance, announced 10 days ago, became immediately popular in Fairfield, Mayor Harley Carter said. He anticipates the movement will spread to other communities, since copies of the ordinance have been requested from persons in Wisconsin, South Dakota, Minnesota, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Iowa.

English Singers To Present "Folk-Song" Concert at Woman's Club on January 19

The English Singers, a choir of six voices, which will render old ballads and folk-songs before an Atlanta audience on the evening of January 19.

The English Singers, a choir of six voices specializing in ancient ballads and folk songs, will present a program at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, January 19, in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club under auspices of the Atlanta Music club, it was announced by Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president.

This sextet, composed of three women and three men, comes to Atlanta heralded as one of the most highly-endowed and perfectly-drilled organizations of its kind in the country today. Tickets for the concert will go on sale Tuesday morning at the Phillips & Crew Piano company.

The singers have been booked in most of the country's leading cities, and at many universities, their itinerary calling for no less than 85 appearances in America.

Members of the chorus, who have served long apprenticeships in perfecting concerted vocal numbers, with particular regard for folk songs composed some 350 years ago, are content to subdue individual talents for the good of the whole chorus, critics say, in attributing to this feature much of the popularity of the organization.

Every number on the program is tuneful and intelligible to the American audience, while there is a refreshing beauty and quaint humor about the ballads that make them doubly attractive, advance reports say.

24-Hour Broadcasts Just Ahead, Director Declares

BY GEORGE H. JASPER
Director WBZ, WBZA.

The broadcasting game isn't what it used to be. Radical changes of policy and the perfection of transmitting equipment have raised radio to a new plane in American life. Five years ago, when the science of wireless entertainment was in its adolescence, if a station was on the air two or three hours out of every 24, the staff congratulated itself—and called it a day.

Today the majority of the more powerful stations are operating on an eight to 16-hour schedule, and there is every indication that a longer broadcasting day is at hand. The gain has been well-marked although not particularly rapid. In all probability broadcasters of the next generation will be plugging the air 24 hours a day. Day and night broadcasting is just ahead of us, and the game is opening up.

Suddenly become the center of the musical and artistic life of many communities, radio has imposed new obligations on station managers. Broadcasting is not now the simple, easy-going business many people suppose. It has become highly organized and complex. Competition is keen. The pace is fast and hectic. One must keep his ear finely attuned to the demands of the public. Its likes and dislikes must be perpetually consulted. "The public must be pleased" must be the motto of the broadcaster if he is to survive and prosper.

1928 OPENS NEW BROADCAST ERA

BY DR. ALFRED N. GOLDSMITH
Chief Broadcast Engineer, Radio Corporation of America.

There are some years in the development of radio which mark the end of one era and the beginning of another. Among these years has been 1927, for during this year certain basic tendencies have proved their importance in radio development, have been definitely accepted by the engineers and the public, and may now be expected to lead to continued further development along proved lines.

It is now recognized that the era of unregulated or only partially regulated radio transmission has come to an end. The passage of the federal radio act of 1927, and the appointment of the federal radio commission under the provisions of the law, have for the first time enabled the governmental regulating powers to be exercised systematically in the direction of minimizing interference between broadcasting stations and allocating frequencies to such stations based on a nationally applicable plan and yet flexible toward local conditions. The excellent preliminary work of the department of commerce along these lines prior to the passage of the 1927 radio law has been utilized as a foundation by the federal radio commission. One great contribution of the commission has been its consistent unawillingness to permit the erection and operation of unnecessary additional broadcasting stations in regions already adequately served.

Receiver Design.

The circumstances just mentioned have had a considerable influence on radio receiver design. Since it has become evident that an indefinite multiplication of stations will not be permitted, and that the congestion of stations in a given district will be greatly reduced and the field strengths corresponding to the various program signals will be systematically increased, the designers of receiving sets have been enabled to produce generally useful but simple and compact receivers with greater assurance than heretofore. It is now reasonably certain that stations of considerable power having frequency allocations less than 50 kilocycles apart will not be erected within a given district; that the building of powerful stations in regions of high population density will be discouraged; and that stations giving a demonstrably valuable service to the public will be afforded channels for clear reception up to the reasonable range of the station.

The end of the era of low-power broadcasting transmitters and freak long distance reception is also at hand. Transmitters of 5 to 50 kilowatt capacity have become increasingly common, and several stations of 50 kilowatts have either been established during the year or are planned for early erection. Experimentally, a power of 100 kilowatts has been successfully used by station WGY, at Schenectedy, and it is understood that the permanent use of this power is contemplated. These station powers are in marked contrast to the half-kilowatt power of the average station only a few years ago, which with entirely undue optimism was at that time regarded as capable of spanning tremendous distances.

G. H. S. Literary Supplement Appears In Next "Hi-Times"

On Monday the students at Girls' High made their tentative elections for the second half of the school year. As the midyear examinations are to be given on January 18, 19 and 20, it was well to decide what to take for the last half of the year some time ahead. This system saves much time and trouble for both girls and teachers.

On Thursday afternoon the junior branch of the Dramatic club presented their outstanding effort of this year—a jolly little play by the name of "A Regiment of Two." The presentation was in the music hall after school, and all members of all the dramatic clubs of the school were invited. The play was so witty and so cleverly presented that it was a splendid success.

The literary supplement, a semi-annual feature of the Hi-Times, the Girls' High school paper, is to appear in connection with the next issue of the paper. Prior to its appearance a contest has been staged in order to obtain meritorious work for this issue. Prizes were offered for the best short story, poem, personal essay, feature story and for the best freshman contribution. Interest has been very keen and the appearance of the literary supplement and the simultaneous announcement of the prize-winners is awaited with much interest. The supplement contest closed January 8, at 2 o'clock, and many contributions were received. We are expecting this issue of the literary supplement to outshine all others.

ANTI-SALOON CHIEF SEEKS DRY WORLD

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—Another world League of Nations with representatives of every country, race and religion on the globe, will be launched in Cairo, Egypt in 1930, if present plans of Ernest H. Cherrington, Anti-Saloon leader and executive secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, are successful.

He hopes that King Fuad, of Egypt, will issue the official invitation to the conference. To that end the influence of Prince Omar Tossoum, cousin of the king and Egyptian leader, has been pledged. Prohibition would be secondary in the consideration of the contemplated world League of Nations.

Seeks Better Understanding.

The real objective of the assemblage would be to obtain a better understanding between nations and settle political religious, social and economic problems of the world, one leader in the movement said.

Cherrington, regarded by many as the real brains behind the American Anti-Saloon league, has grown up with the dry movement in this country. He witnessed the part prohibition has had in shaping political destinies of the nation and he has conceived the same idea for the world.

Sees Hope for World.

"If nations can be brought together on the prohibition problem, they can be brought together on other questions of controversy, political, religious and racial," he said.

"If we can get official representatives of the nations of the world together in a common meeting of understanding, we can wipe out misunderstanding, which is the cause of wars and hatred."

RADIO 'SHORT WAVE' REQUESTS THURSDAY

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Commercial interests of every type, the army and navy, and the great body of amateur and professional radio men, will present their applications for allocation of radio "short waves," or higher frequencies to the federal radio commission next Tuesday.

The commission has decided that there shall be no recurrence of the congestion which still makes transmission and reception on the long broadcasting waves, and wishes to establish a permanent basis for allocation of the short wave channels.

The order of precedence in which applications will be favored, tentatively decided upon is: Marine distress, agencies having no other means of communication, governmental, public toll message, private communications, experiments and relay broadcasting.

Nearly 100 short wave lengths have been assigned, but nearly 5,000 are available. The commission does not contemplate their immediate allocation, but will lay plans for estimated future needs.

The Ford Motor company, General Electric company, American Telephone & Telegraph company and the Goodyear Rubber company are among the number of firms that have notified the commission they would send their engineers to the hearing. Will Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers' association, also will attend.

SOUTHERN SONGS ON AIR WEDNESDAY

A radio production featuring "Songs of Stephen Foster" and the presentation of Richard von Calio, of the Atlanta Salvation Army staff band and formerly of Sousa's band, will be outstanding on the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation program from WSB next Wednesday night from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Stephen Foster, the anniversary of whose death occurred Friday, January 13, is recognized as America's foremost writer of southern folk songs. More of his ballads are sung today than those of any other early American composer. Three of his most famous numbers were, "Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe" and "Old Folks at Home," and these will be included in the program. The Sears-Roebuck Instrumentalists, Foundation Four, Esther Billingslea, soprano, and John Clotworthy, tenor, all well-known foundation performers, will portray with song and music the famous heart songs of Foster.

An artist who plays professionally 30 different instruments and who has appeared in concert in both Europe and America is Mr. Calio. He will give a 20-minute concert starting at 7 o'clock, featuring numbers on his marmibaphone and iano-accordion. This Salvation Army worker has had a very adventurous career, having served in the Russian and German armies and joining the musical unit of the United States army where he attained the rank of captain. Later he joined Sousa's band and while in Scotland during an international tour he was converted and decided to devote his life to religious work. He has been in Atlanta five months.

Paul and John, harmony team; Frank W. Day, flute soloist, and the Ludville Boys, mountain players, will entertain on the R. F. D. club program Monday noon. Otto Strid, accordion soloist; the Long Sisters, radio team, and Lawrence Smith, pianist, are scheduled for Wednesday noon, while the Sears-Roebuck Players, directed by Harry J. Pomar, Paul Crutchfield, tenor, and Ralph Richardson, baritone, are on the air Friday noon. J. Andrew Shearer, prominent farmer of Chatooga county, Georgia, will discuss winter cover crops on the Friday noon broadcast.

U.S. INSPECTION OF JAILS BLAMED FOR OUTBREAK

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—Federal inspection of county jails housing government prisoners underway for a week in the northern Illinois district, may have been the cause of the outbreak among the prisoners in the Sycamore, Ill., jail yesterday, which was quelled by Mrs. Helena Solder, recently appointed sheriff.

C. J. Weaver, federal prison inspector, visited the Sycamore jail shortly before the outbreak last night and said the prisoners perhaps made their demonstration to arouse his attention. Of the 92 prisoners in the DeKalb county jail, 80 are held for the government. The sheriff, under government direction, is allowed 75 cents a day to feed the federal prisoners.

The federal inspection followed reports that some of the jails were not feeding their prisoners properly.

FARMERS' COURSES ON RADIO ENDED; SUMMARY ISSUED

The second annual radio farmers' short course was concluded Saturday night over station WSB after a two weeks' series of farm programs, in which outstanding authorities from five southeastern states were presented.

Agricultural colleges, experiment stations, farm papers, railroad development departments, cotton mills, bankers, commissioners of agriculture, fertilizer associations and "dirt farmers" were represented on the short course faculty. Several hundred farmers from a dozen southern states enrolled for the radio school, sponsored by the soil improvement committee, National Fertilizer association, and the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation.

Summarizing the most important points broadcast by the authorities gives an excellent list of suggesions for a profitable farming program in 1928, declares the foundation, which lists the "highlights" as follows:

Prospects are bright for the cotton farmer in 1928 if he does not plant as he did in 1926 and produce a large surplus crop of cotton.

More low waste land should be cleared, drained and placed in pasture, which would make conditions more favorable for the production of live stock as a money crop.

It is a paying proposition to devote land to the growing of food and feed crops for the family and live stock in preference to buying these necessities from the proceeds of cotton.

More economical production of cotton is a necessity. This may be brought about by using high quality pure bred seed, applying more high-grade fertilizer per acre and through soil improvement practices, such as preventing erosion by proper terracing, growing leguminous winter cover crops, such as vetch, growing such summer legumes as soy beans and cow peas and the applying of barn-yard manure. Plowing under such vegetation gives the soil more organic matter, which increases its moisture-holding capacity and improves its general condition.

ERNEST LYNN HARMON.

YOUTHFUL MURDERER GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Providence, R. I., January 14.—(United News.)—An 18-year-old youth who claimed to have confessed to a murder "just to get out of jail," must go back to prison—this time for life.

After deliberating only an hour and a half a superior court jury late today returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree in the case of Arthur E. Evans, 18. The conviction carries an automatic sentence of life imprisonment.

Evans was on trial for the murder of Herold Hillman, chain store manager, during a holdup in Cranston on March 13, 1926.

Several months ago, while serving a short sentence at the York, Pa., jail, Evans confessed to the Cranston murder. When he arrived here for trial, however, he repudiated the confession, declaring he made it merely to obtain his release from jail.

HUMPHREY HITS "DIPLOMA MILLS" PREYING ON U. S.

Atlantic City, N. J., January 14.—(AP)—Fake universities, dealing in fraudulent degrees, sold principally to gullible clergymen, can be reached and eliminated most easily through the publishers of their misleading advertising, W. E. Humphrey, chairman of the federal trade commission, today told the Association of American Colleges in session here.

Characterizing these "diploma mills" as fakes, frauds and pirates, Humphrey declared they were libels on education and a travesty upon honesty and fair dealing. The only requirement for graduation from these schools, he said, is cash.

Marie of Rumania Was Married 35 Years Ago Saturday

Bucharest, January 14.—(AP)—Queen Marie has just celebrated her 35th wedding anniversary. Marrying King Ferdinand when only 17, every year of the sovereign's wedlock has been full of stirring happenings and exciting episodes, investing her life with unusual glamor, variety and richness.

Today, at 52, the dowager queen looks as young as at 35. Her first act on the anniversary was to place fresh flowers and "the eternal lamp of remembrance" on Ferdinand's grave. The versatile queen still works 15 hours a day, devoting several hours each morning to writing her memoirs.

2 MEN SWEPT TO SEA IN BOAT ARE RESCUED

New York, January 14.—(AP)—Two men, swept far out to sea from West Palm Beach, Fla., in a disabled motor launch and picked up after three days by the Canadian steamer Pioneer, reached here on board the steamer today.

They are Olin Swenson, of Brooklyn, and Albert Carter, of West Palm Beach, negro mechanic. Their food and water was gone when they were rescued and they were near exhaustion. The high seas forced them to bail water steadily for hours.

CHURCH PLANS TO HELP WORLD BROTHERHOOD

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—An educational program to combat "the poisonous doctrines of American superiority and American isolation" and to foster a world brotherhood will be introduced into Congregational churches throughout the United States.

Reasons given for the program, outlined today at a conference of education leaders of the Congregational church, include that every church member needs to be Christianized to such an extent that "he will manifest good will in his actual interracial contacts" and that in "his purposes and his habits of active service as well as in his creeds he will be world-minded."

Railway Conductor Falls Under Train; Hand Is Amputated

Americus, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—B. J. Jefferson, of Columbus, lost his left hand in a railroad accident here Friday morning. He is a conductor running between Columbus and Americus, and had brought train No. 21 into the local yards only a short time before the accident occurred. With other members of the train crew, he was engaged in turning a heavy locomotive around upon the turntable when he stumbled and fell, his hand falling directly beneath one of the wheels of the heavy engine tender, which was moving slowly. The hand was so badly mangled as to necessitate amputation, an operation being performed at the Americus and Sumter county hospital by Dr. A. C. Primrose, resident physician for the Central of Georgia railway.

Freak Bill Seeks Prosperity, With Reward to Finder

Boston, January 14. — (United News.)—There is at least one resident of the president's home state who does not link the name of Coolidge with prosperity.

One of the "freak" bills filed with the Massachusetts legislature late today before the deadline for filing was reached, would provide: "That the state of Massachusetts appropriate $5,000 to be given the person who can find prosperity in Massachusetts outside of that enjoyed by big business."

The petition was filed by one Francis Finneran, of Boston.

3 MEN ARRESTED NEAR MONTEZUMA ON DRY CHARGE

Montezuma, Ga., January 14.—(Special.)—At a farm house six miles east of Montezuma Friday night A. C. Heath, deputy sheriff of Macon county, arrested Clarence Wilson, Ollie Wilson and Grady Puckett, white men from near Musella, in Crawford county, and obtained from them 20 gallons of whisky.

The men were placed in the county jail at Oglethorpe under a $1,500 bond and will be tried at the spring term of city court which convenes January 24.

They are charged with transporting, selling and having whisky in their possession.

ALLEGED TENNESSEE SHERIFF IS JAILED

New Orleans, January 14.—(AP)—A man who said he was Walter Anderson, sheriff of Knox county, Knoxville, Tenn., was in jail here today charged with disturbing the peace, using obscene language, resisting arrest, tearing an officer's uniform and refusing to pay a 75-cent taxi bill.

The trouble began with an argument with two taxicab drivers over payment of a bill, officers said, and ended with a fight with policemen at the precinct station to which he was taken.

PRETTY HAMMER SLAYER'S LAWYERS PREPARE DEFENSE

Painesville, Ohio, January 14.—(United News.)—The date for the trial of Velma West is expected to be set early next week when the blonde housewife will be arraigned on a first degree murder indictment.

Francis W. Poulson and Richard Rostwick, attorneys for the girl who battered Edward West, her husband, to death with a hammer, continued defense plans today. Self-defense, it was expected, would form the major part of their case, although temporary insanity may play a part.

County Prosecutor Seth Paulin and Special Prosecutor Homer Harper will seek to send the pretty blonde to the electric chair on the basis of her written confession.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO MEET CORBETT AS JAMES' GUESTS

Representatives of each of the Atlanta newspapers will be present as well as Claude Buchanan, chairman of the city boxing commission.

Corbett will visit Atlanta for the first time in more than ten years. He will appear as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater with his partner, Bobby Barry, famous comedian in a sketch entitled "Taking the Air."

The luncheon will be given at the Ansley hotel and several prominent local sportsmen will be invited to greet the former champion.

POLISH WOMAN AUTHOR EXPECTS TO DIE MONDAY

New York, January 14.—(United News.)—On the threshold of what she expected to be the greatest triumph in her literary career, Anzia Yezierska, celebrated polish author, faces an operation tomorrow from which she predicts fatalistically that she will ever recover.

The book to which she has devoted every effort since her arrival from Poland 15 years ago is only partly completed, but enough of it is finished to have given her hope that it may clinch her fame. Miss Yezierska, always a fatalist, has abandoned hope that the major operation which she will undergo at St. Mark's hospital, tomorrow will save the life which surgeons tell her is threatened.

RADIO LICENSES EXPIRING FEB. 1 EXTENDED MONTH

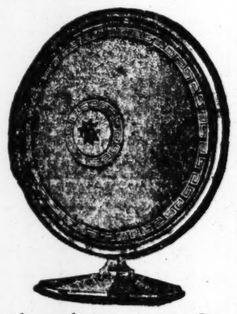

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—The federal radio commission announced today that all broadcasting licenses which were to have expired February 1 would be extended to March 1.

The extension was made on recommendation of Judge Eugene Sykes, acting chairman of the commission, because the three other members of the commission are as yet unconfirmed by the senate. Station transfers and other changes, which the commission planned to announce January 15, also have been postponed until confirmation of a quorum of the commission's membership.

BILL GIVES NAVY JURISDICTION OVER OIL LAND LEASES

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—A bill to give the navy department jurisdiction over leases issued by the secretary of interior on naval oil leases was passed today by the senate and sent to the house.

The measure, which was introduced at the request of Secretary Work, affects several leases, none of which are involved in the court action against the leases made by former Secretary Fall.

Tests Show How Stations Are Being Received; Many Problems Are Uncovered

Radio Fans Check Power, Heterodyning and Other Interference Trouble by Receivers.

From listeners in the middle west come most comprehensive reports on the effect of wave-length changes.

Here the value of the "cleared channels" can be gauged most accurately. Because on good nights, with sensitive and selective receivers, stations on both coasts are heard.

Investigations conducted reveal a general improvement in reception, but some stations (like WGN) which had been favorites, booming through, are now more or less absent. WEAF'S power brings it in well, but when KGD, comes on a heterodyne results. On the other hand, WJZ displays even greater effectiveness and goes through the whistle created when KFRC starts transmitting.

Fans Reporting.

A succession of facts interesting to listener in every section of the country has been presented in the symposium conducted by the Freed-Eisemann Radio corporation, which is presenting an electric receiver to the fan who sends in the best report to its offices in Brooklyn; and in turn the principal contributions will be turned over to the federal radio commission for its information.

Harry H. Seckler, of 306 Miami street, Leavenworth, Kan., in a long report says in part:

In the beginning it is positively stated that reception now is as good as it was during the winter of 1924-25, when it was possible, owing to the smaller number of broadcast stations, for we of the middlewest to bring in audibly the programs from Springfield, Mass., to Havana; practically all stations in Canada, and the more powerful ones on the Pacific coast.

Then comes the upheaval: stealing of wave lengths, disregard by broadcasters of the rights of others; the piling up of super-power without asking permission of anyone or any organization; with the resultant "cat calls," "peanut whistles," etc., and this condition practically remained unchanged until the radio commission after playing checkers with broadcasting stations for some months, each move a bettering of air conditions for the "ultimate consumer," produced the grand finale of December 1. Up until that time it was not worth while to play the game of "radio golf" wherein one gets a real thrill from bringing in distant, low-powered stations, nor to get one hour's good reception from any station, no matter what power it had nor how close to home.

Now all this is changed, and it is a real pleasure for the set owner; and, has brought about a revival of radio business for the retailer who handles sets and radio accessories. This is especially true here in the middlewest.

East and West.

But the fact that we are centrally located gives us possibly a little more interference than is encountered by those in either the extreme east of extreme west.

As instances of the foregoing statement:

Early in the evening we enjoy the program of WEAF without any interference; later, however, when KGW, Portland, "takes the air" WEAF's reception is not so clear, yet its super-power makes it possible for its offerings to be heard. In the past it was absolutely impossible to get WEAF at all. But, later in the night, when WEAF closes down for the night, KGW comes in a booming.

The foregoing statement also holds good for WJZ, New York, whose programs are heard even on smaller than five tube sets, and much more clearly than are those of WEAF, but when KFRC, San Francisco, takes the ether WJZ is "whistled," but not badly.

The most serious interference in a cleared channel for we of this district, comes when WRC, Washington, D. C., and KFI, Los Angeles, are on at the same time. WRC, being only 500 watts, is never heard audibly, but it is sufficiently strong to muddle the KFI offerings.

In the 670 kilocycle channel KFCA is seldom heard, while the stations in Chicago on the same wave length are sufficiently strong to drown it out.

Detroit's stations are sufficiently powerful to not suffer from interference from KFSD, yet we are enabled to also hear the latter station clearly when WJR or WCX is not on the air. WLW, on 700 kilocycles, has the field to itself and furnishes a clear program.

Station WOR, though not within reach of many sets here, has no interference from KPO, though the latter station is not heard here as often as it was two years ago. This is doubtless due to WLW's superpower and also our close proximity to Chicago's most powerful broadcaster, WGN. The same might be said of WEAF and WTAM, for WCCO, powerful and directly north, interferes. Not that WCCO varies from its assigned wave length, but "overlaps" because of its power.

Power Counting.

In the 770 channel the Chicago stations have things clearly to themselves, while WGY, Schenectady, though not so near as the super-stations of WOC, Davenport, and WDAF, Kansas City, comes clearly, which is proof that its 50,000 watt power is able to cut through the two near-by broadcasters.

As stated for the 770 channel, the same can be said of the 820-kc. channel, KMJ, Fresno, and WEEI, Boston, not being in evidence on the average five-tube set.

WWJ, Detroit, while clearly audible, though but of 1,000 kws., suffers from its close proximity of WSAI, Cincinnati, while the latter in turn does not seem to be affected by WDAF, Kansas City. Later in the night KFWB, Los Angeles, is logged by many sets, but not until WSAI shuts down.

WLS, Chicago, with its 5,000 watts, is unable to come through clearly early because of KVOO, Bristow, Oklahoma, with its 1,000 watts close by. In times past this was one of this district's favorite stations, but not now.

WSM, Nashville, though cleared, requires some exceedingly sharp tuning to bring in, because of the 1,000-watt stations at WJAX and WAPI; and when WOQ or WHAB, Kansas City, is on the air Nashville's programs are not for our ears.

KOA, Denver, during the winter of 1926-27, was one of the best in this territory, but because the 900-kc. channel above has not been cleared, it is "mushy" most of the time. Clearing of this channel would be greatly appreciated by Missouri valley set owners.

It is strange, yet true, that WHAS, Louisville, is not clearly heard here, and though dials have been twisted frantically to find WKAQ, Porto Rico, this station still remains silent.

In the 940 channel, KOIL, Council Bluffs, holds sway and KFAB, Lincoln, the same when they are broadcasting; KOIN, Portland, is logged on many sets when those two powerful midwest stations quit for the night.

KDKA, Pittsburgh, is one of our "best bets," but KPSN must wait until later in the night to visit with us.

Power Reports.

WBAC, Richmond Hill, Long Island, comes in feebly despite its power, but KYA, San Francisco, is still among the missing because of its low power.

WHAT and WHIB, Chicago, are so strong here that WHAZ and KOMO are not on any of the logs of local sets, so far as known.

In the 930 channel we have never heard WGR, Buffalo, and a "dead spot" between here and Salt Lake City closes the doors to that station.

KMOX, St. Louis, holds fully sway in the 1,000 kc. channel

Cleveland is considered a good location for tests and here is what S. W. Burgess, of 3760 East 127th street, that city, discovers:

Cleveland is considered a good location for tests and here is what S. W. Burgess, of 3760 East 127th street, that city, discovers:

Since Cleveland, Ohio, is in a very central location with respect to the thickly-populated sections of the country, reception here should be a good criterion.

In order to analyze the effect of the recent changes on the 500-1,000 kilocycles band, it is first necessary to summarize what is most desirable in receiving conditions. There is little doubt that for the great majority of listeners east of the Rockies, the acme of reception would be attained if each night they had their choice of the programs relayed by the key stations WEAF, WJZ and WOR. Of course, it is possible to get these three direct with good volume and tone, and free from distortion, if none of them are dependable for regular reception.

Therefore, for a Cleveland listener, dependence must be placed on the near-by stations relaying such programs. The local station WTAM relays some red network programs, but only a small portion of that handled by WWJ, Detroit, for example. This means that Cleveland listeners would appreciate free access to WWJ, Detroit, or WSAI, Cincinnati, or WCAE, Pittsburgh, for the WEAF programs; to KDKA, Pittsburgh, or WJR, Detroit, or WSM, Nashville, for the WJZ programs, and to WADC, Akron, or WGHP, Detroit, for the WOR programs.

Heterodyne Problems.

For the above stations the following conditions obtain:

WWJ, Detroit, is still heterodyned by an unidentified station, causing distortion and sometimes a whistle, but its volume is good.

WSA, Cincinnati, is now free from interference, but cannot be depended on for sufficient volume.

WSAB, Pittsburgh, is so badly heterodyned as to make its reception almost impossible, volume being weak and distortion very marked.

KDKA, Pittsburgh, is free of interference, and would be a first-class station for volume and tone if it were not for the well-known "fading" that accompanies its reception.

WJR, Detroit, is badly heterodyned by one or more stations, with the result that the signals are distorted beyond the endurance of even a patient listener. Volume, of course, is quite satisfactory.

WSM, Nashville, is sometimes heterodyned, but is unusually dependable for good tone and fair volume.

WADC, Akron, being outside the cleared band, is interfered with, resulting in a steady whistle which generally is not loud enough to detract from the enjoyment of the program, however. Volume and tone are almost equally as good as those of local stations.

WGHP, Detroit, is not dependable for volume, and is not free from interference, being outside the cleared band.

Come in at Times.

Reception of stations other than those in Red, Blue and Columbia networks is fairly good. Enough Chicago stations are available each night to suit anyone, with one exception. The transposition of WHT and WGN resulted in making WHT the loudest of the Chicago group, while WGN is now about the weakest, and in addition is difficult to tune through the local station, WTAM. The WGN situation is regrettable from the standpoint of Sam 'n Henry addicts but otherwise Chicago reception is quite satisfactory.

More distant stations are received sporadically, such as Lincoln, Dallas, New Orleans and Miami Beach, but the general concensus of opinion seems to be that if good reception were assured from stations within 400 miles distance, little attention would be paid to the more distant stations. The writer is a "distance hound," but nevertheless appreciates the near-by stations a great deal more, provided they can be properly received.

As an indication that the writer is qualified to express an opinion on receiving conditions, the following facts regarding operation of his five-tube set may be of interest:

Seventy-two different stations were put on the loud speaker between May 28 and September 8, 1927; maximum distance 1,200 miles, average distance 400 miles.

Outside stations 10 kilocycles apart were separated.

Stations 20 kilocycles from locals were separated.

In summing up, it may safely be stated that present receiving conditions are much better since the recent changes, but that interference has not disappeared entirely from the "cleared band," probably due to some stations failing to confine themselves to their proper wavelength.

The Name Means Everything

Strict vigilance guards the acknowledged high standards of these tubes with the result of an ever-increasing efficiency of performance.

A set of spare tubes provides uninterrupted reception.

NEW DEVICE RECORDS STRENGTH OF SIGNAL

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—A device which records the signal strength of long wave transmitting stations is being perfected at the radio laboratory of the bureau of standards.

Controlled by a master clock, the apparatus is of special value because records can be taken at all hours without the presence of an observer. At the bureau of standards laboratory it makes observations at night which otherwise would require the "listening in" of one or two members of the staff.

E. B. Judson, of the radio transmission research division, is conducting the experiments with the device which also measures the strength and direction of static. The new recorder, Mr. Judson says, has already afforded valuable information regarding hourly variations in the strength of radio signals. Experiments conducted with stations in Europe have provided additional evidence of the effect of the sun's rays on transmission, the strongest signals being recorded between 7 p. m. and 10 p. m., the period of "all darkness" over the Atlantic.

The receiving set used by Mr. Judson is an ordinary autodyne type with inductively coupled antenna and secondary circuits. The recording is done on a Cambridge-Paul recorder connected in series with a two-electrode rectifier in a circuit coupled by an audio transformer to the plate circuit of the last amplifier tube. The records are made by depressing the galvanometer needle of the recorder by clockwork once every 30 seconds. This forces an inked thread into contact with the paper on the rotating recorder drum, thus making the record.

Large glass-lined asbestos tanks have been fitted on railway trains in England to transport milk in bulk at even temperatures.

Naval Commander Given Shortwave Work Medal

New York, January 14.—(AP)—Commander A. Hoyt Taylor, superintendent of the radio division of the naval research laboratory at Bellevue, has received the Morris Liebmann memorial medal for the Institute of Radio Engineers.

The medal, representing the highest award for accomplishment in the radio field within a year, was presented at the I. R. E. convention to Commander Taylor for his research in short wave phenomena. He collaborated in the development of useful formula for the determination of skip distances in the higher frequencies.

A pioneer in radio, Commander Taylor began his first investigations in 1899 while still a student at Northwestern university. From the start he paid particular attention to wave propagation, fading, influence of weather conditions and directive systems.

Entering the naval reserve as a lieutenant in 1917, he was promoted to lieutenant commander in 1918, going to Hampton Roads, Va., where he acted as head of the experimental division of the naval air station. In 1919 he was placed in charge of the aircraft radio laboratory at Washington, with additional duties of a consulting capacity for other naval radio activities. Early in 1923 he was made a commander and became superintendent at Bellevue.

Commander Taylor has written extensively and contributed a number of inventions to radio, giving most of his attention in recent years to various circuits for piezo electric control of transmitters and receivers. He regards the series of experiments which led to the publication of papers dealing with the theory of short wave transmission as his most important contribution to radio.

VIRGINIA SOCIETY FOUNDED IN 1800 IS REORGANIZED

Alexandria, Va., January 14.—(AP) Reorganization of the Washington Society of Alexandria, at the old Gadsby tavern, 128 years after it was founded, was consummated here tonight by two score persons, who carried out, as near as possible, the procedure of the original members of the organization.

The organization, which was founded in 1800 and numbered among its members Chief Justice John Marshall, Francis Scott Key and William Fitzhugh, ceased to exist in 1843. William Buckner McGroarty, an authority on the colonial and revolutionary history of Virginia and Charles Callahan, author, found the records of the organizations in Harvard college and issued the call for the reorganization.

M'CORMACK, JERITZA ON VICTOR PROGRAM

The promise of radio to present during the coming year the best programs ever broadcast will be kept once more on Friday, January 20, at 10 p. m., eastern standard time, when the Victor Talking Machine company offers its second 1928 concert from station WJZ, New York, and associated stations of the National Broadcasting company. Mme. In addition she will sing two other operatic arias, one from "Le Cid," by Massenet and the other, "Voi Lo Sapete," from the ever-popular "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Mr. McCormack is hurrying back to this country from his estate in Ireland in order to sing on the Victor program. His selections will include a group of songs for children, three of the Irish folk songs which he has made so famous, and a group of favorites among which is "Dear Old Pal of Mine."

The Victor orchestra, under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret, will accompany Mme. Jeritza. Edwin Schneider, pianist, will be Mr. McCormack's accompanist in all his numbers.

With RADIO as with PIANOS—TONE is the vital difference

LOOK at two pianos in a store window. They seem alike—both have the same graceful design and high polish. Yet one, because of its tone, costs hundreds of dollars more than the other. So in Radio, tone is the vital difference. There are many reasons for the superlative quality of Stromberg-Carlson Tone:—unsparing use of materials as indicated by the weight, insuring exact reproduction on the heavy passages of music; the use of time-tested D. C. Tubes for A. C. operation, giving uniform amplification over the widest tonal range; the provision of a Meter, indicating at all times the proper amount of current for tone purity.

When you buy a Radio, make your choice as you would of a piano—for Tone.

NAME MILLIONAIRE IN HUGE RUM PLOT

Wheeling, W. Va., January 14.—(United News.)—A warrant was issued here today for the arrest of Harry Gee, Wheeling millionaire electrical manufacturer, on charges of conspiring to violate the prohibition law.

The warrant was issued upon order from John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator at Pittsburgh. Four Pittsburgh men were linked with Gee in the conspiracy charges.

Shipped Whisky, Wines.

The dry administrator charged that Gee had shipped a large quantity of wines and whisky from Newark, N. J., to Pittsburgh and that efforts were being made to remove the shipments from the Baltimore & Ohio station to a truck in Pittsbugh when dry agents interfered.

Those charged with Gee were Nick Hanna, Mike Potchnik, Robert W. Lovan and William H. Brady, all connected with a labor agency in Pittsburgh. They furnished bond pending a hearing.

The warrant alleges the five men bought the liquors from the estate of a wealthy man in Newark and shipped them to Pittsburgh labeled "syrup." It is charged the shipment was to have been hauled to Wheeling by motor truck.

HOUSE NAVAL BODY IGNORES COOLIDGE

Washington, January 14.—(United News.)—President Coolidge's naval building specifications were discarded almost in their entirety today by the house naval affairs committee.

The measure proposed by the president and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur was amended to provide a definite five-year program. A provision whereby the president could suspend the building in event of another disarmament conference was eliminated.

Favor Ship Building.

Committee members explained they had put themselves on record in favor of building ships, instead of merely authorizing them. The construction to begin immediately and to be halted not by prospects of another disarmament conference, but only by a treaty providing further disarmament among the powers.

Several committee members have questioned the administration's intentions, pointing out the ships might never be built under such a blanket authorization as that suggested by the president. In some quarters, the building program had been accepted as a "gesture" to line up the powers for further disarmament.

71 New Ships Provided.

When the committee finished the only part of the administration plan remaining was the section providing for 71 new ships.

The exact number of vessels will be decided upon after further hearings. But the committee will specify five years for laying down the ships, and eight years for their completion.

CHINESE THREAT BELIEVED AIMED AT CANADIANS

London, January 14.—(AP)—A Reuter's dispatch from Peking says that the statement issued by Feng Yu-Hsiang yesterday threatening unreserved opposition to unsympathetic foreigners in his territory apparently refers to Canadian and other missionaries in Honan, toward whom his policy already seems in force.

The dispatch says that authentic news has been received in Peking that Feng's troops recently looted the premises of many Canadian Presbyterians who evacuated the province of Honan last spring. A Chinese girls' boarding school at Weihwei, which was fitted with new equipment in 1927, was looted and burned.

'Tuneful Horn' For Fog-Bound Ships Demanded

Nanaimo, B. C., January 14.—(AP)—A more melodious fog horn is demanded by the "nerve shattered" populace of Nanaimo.

At an indignation meeting last night, presided over by Mayor Busby, a formal demand was framed for presentation to the Canadian premier and to British Columbia members of parliament, that the "present fog horn at the entrance to the harbor be replaced."

The fog horn now in use has been "howling and moaning like an animal in its death throes," every night for a week, the resolution declares.

OPERA IN MACON IS BIG SUCCESS

Macon, Ga., January 14.—(AP)—Macon's first week of grand opera closed tonight with the presentation of "Il Trovatore" at the Municipal auditorium, hundreds purchasing standing room in addition to the 4,200 seats for the final performance.

A special train from Milledgeville tonight brought 1,000 young women from the Georgia State College for Women. Another special train was operated from Bessie Tift college at Forsyth, Ga.

Eight performances of grand opera were given during the week. The Grand Opera association, a local group that guaranteed expenses, announced that all guarantees had been paid and all expenses paid and more than $2,500 remained in the treasury.

The San Carlo Opera company leaves in the morning for Richmond, Va.

COMMITTEE OKAYS TWO REPUBLICANS IN CONTEST SEATS

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Two republican representatives today were recommended for clear title to their seats in the house by an elections committee which disapproved contests by democratic opponents.

They were Representative La Guardia, of New York, whose election was questioned by Warren Hubbard, of New York, and Representative White, of Kansas, whose place was contested by W. A. Clark, of Hoxie, Kan. The committee adopted motions to seat the two republicans and will make a formal report later to the house.

MEXICO MAPS OUT DRIVE ON BANDITS

Mexico City, January 14.—(AP)—Both Secretary of War Amaro and General Jose Alvarez, chief of President Calles personal staff, have gone to Colima for a military council in regard to plans for crushing rebel movements in the states of Jalisco, Colima Aguscalientes and Michoacan.

Federal reinforcements believed to total several thousand troops have been distributed in the state of Jalisco in addition to the regular garrisons. Reinforcements also have been sent to other states. Senor Amaro expects to remain in the field and personally direct the campaign.

Federals Capture Town.

Press dispatches from Coalcoman, state of Michoacan, say that a federal column commanded by General Juan Dominguez, captured Coalcoman after a brief battle.

No other details are given and no reference is made to casualties. Presumably Coalcoman, like some other towns in the disaffected region, has been in the hands of rebel groups which operate in guerrila style, plundering towns and villages where there are no federal guards, sometimes attacking trains or burning bridges, and then scattering into the mountains where pursuit is difficult.

Dispatches Avoid Details.

Press dispatches and official information avoid details as to numbers and distribution of federal forces and rebels, but well informed persons say the situation is about the same as it has been for years in this region, especially sections of Jalisco. Roaming bands, called bandits or rebels, constantly prey upon towns, villages and ranches of the region.

The problem of the federals has always been to force the enemy groups into open fighting. The federal program at present seems to be to increase their forces enough to pursue the rebel bands into the mountains one by one to exterminate them.

ROADS FORBIDDEN TO ALTER RATES

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Florida railroads were ordered today by the interstate commerce commission to refrain from altering the present adjustment of classified freight rates between Jacksonville and Tampa territory in making effective the new southern classified freight schedules tomorrow.

The southern classified schedules go on a new basis January 15 and Florida railroads in filing their schedules propose to cancel the Jacksonville-Tampa class rate arrangements applying on shipments moving between these two points but bound for more distant destinations. The commission held that the railroad changes proposed in these proportional rates between Jacksonville and Tampa must be suspended until August 15.

In the meantime railroads must continue to charge the present rates and the commission will undertake an investigation to determine what should be the proper rate level.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —(adv.)

GANGLAND HUNTED FOR GIRL'S SLAYER

Chicago, January 14.—(AP)—Police today continued to search the underworld for the slayers of Betty Chambers, victim two days ago of a "tap-murder," in her luxuriously furnished apartment in a fashionable North Side hotel.

The police had revised their original estimate of the crime and termed it the slaying of one who had threatened to "squeal" and reveal secrets of gangland. They called the young woman the "White Diamond," and said she was the leader of a band of diamond thieves who had stolen millions of dollars' worth of gems.

Robbed Diamond Merchants.

A few months ago the "white diamond" participated in the theft of $250,000 worth of diamonds from a Cleveland, Ohio, jewelry store, the police said, and it was only a month ago that she came to Chicago to extend her activities.

Seeking known former companions of Betty Chambers, the police raided the hotel apartment of Marian Kirk and her husband, Joseph. They learned the Kirks had departed hastily the day the Chambers woman was slain but found a picture of Betty and an expensive fur coat she had worn.

The name "Marian" was called loudly during a heated argument of four persons with the "White Diamond" just before she was slain, according to the statement of neighbors to the police.

Quarreled With "Husband."

"Marian," said the police, might have been the woman over whom Mrs. Chambers quarreled with the man she had introduced as her husband, a youth of about 19.

A week ago the "White Diamond," also known as McDonald, gave her "husband" a diamond ring and then quarreled with him after she accused him of giving it to another woman. As a climax, she fired three shots at him and later found him on a street and again fired at him.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Landsiedel, of Detroit, parents of the slain girl, came to Chicago today and sought legal permission to open a safety deposit box held in her name.

Meekins, of the eastern North Carolina federal court district.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

F. Rubenstein & Co. Leases Whitehall Street Store

Report of details in leasing of the Whitehall street store being vacated by J. P. Allen & Co. to F. Rubenstein & Co., well-known ladies' specialty chain shop operators of New Orleans, coming upon the heels of announcement of two other important leases in this section, is regarded in local real estate circles as confirming the opinion that the Whitehall-Alabama street retail shopping center has not had its dominance impaired by the notable expansions that have taken place on the north end.

Lease of the building, at 51 Whitehall street, to F. Rubenstein & Co. for H. H. Dean estate, the owner, was handled by Otto F. Feil, as agent. The structure contains five floors and basement and has frontage on two important retail shopping streets, measuring 28 feet on Whitehall and 50 feet on Broad street. The structure extends back 175 feet.

The lease is for a term of ten years, effective from January 1, 1929, but it is understood that arrangements probably will be made whereby the lessees can take possession of the building shortly after the present occupant moves out of it. Representatives of the New Orleans firm, who attended to negotiations for the lease here were Frank Rubenstein, president, and Harry Greenburg, vice president. While the aggregate rental is known to place the deal among the most important real estate transactions of the season, the figure was withheld.

Two other important leases of property in this section to be announced within the past two weeks involved letting of the Broad street front of the former Davison-Paxon building to Duffee-Freeman Furniture company and lease to Paul H. Berwald Shoe company of the Whitehall street store occupied by Fred S. Stewart company, both of which were handled by Adams-Cates company. Shortly before that Adams-Cates leased the Maier & Berkele store, two doors from Stewarts, to G. R. Kinney & Co., while the location formerly occupied by Carlton Shoe and Clothing company, on the opposite side of Whitehall street, was leased some months ago to Julian Goldman Stores, Inc., through Adair's.

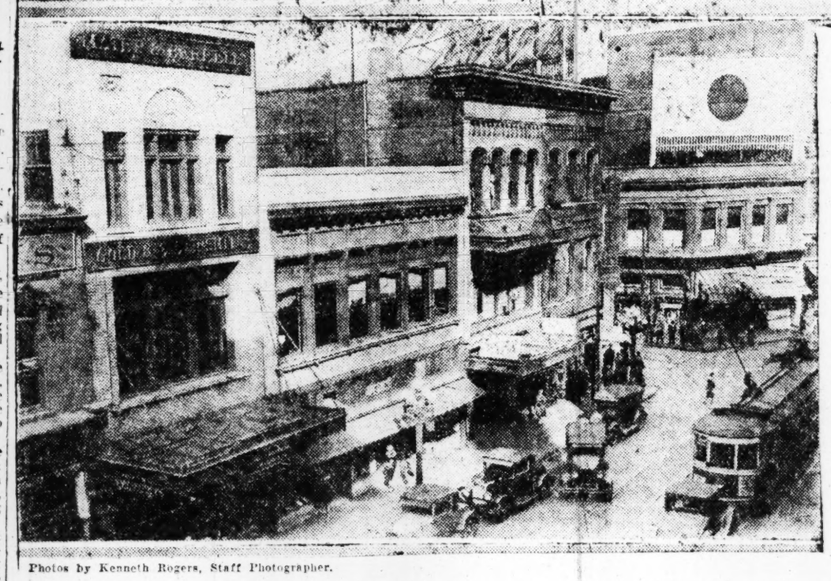

While this activity reveals a northward trend of some of the older tenants, the ease with which the locations were released, in practically every case being accomplished before removal of the original tenant, is regarded by loca, real estate men as indicating the continued popularity of this section for retail businesses. Construction of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts is pointed to as a factor which should add permanence to this popularity. The northward movement of a portion of the business interests is explained by men who have studied the property situation as an expansion of Atlanta's business district, rather than a shifting of the retail shopping center.

Another important feature of the recent Whitehall and Broad strets leases is the representative character of the concerns taking these locations. The Rubenstein firm operates stores in many southern cities. The headquarters of this prominent ladies' ready-to-wear concern are in New Orleans, where two stores are conducted. In addition, the company operates several stores in Texas, it has recently opened one in Birmingham and recently remodeled for its new tenants. It will contain women's dresses, suits, coats, millinery, shoes, novelties and allied lines.

It is understood that no leases in the Whitehall street retail center expire during this year that have not already been contracted for, which, together with the fact that there are practically no vacancies in the section, makes the 1928 real estate outlook for this center a bright one.

Rubenstein & Co., large New Orleans concern. To the right is a view of the Broad street side of this block, which is the latest expansion of the center. The new Duffee-Freeman Furniture company location is also seen here.

MORRIS BUILDING GETS BIG START

Five homes, costing $32,187, now under construction for the owner by F. P. and George J. Morris, were started during the first two weeks in January, Keller F. Melton, sales manager of the Morris building department, announced Saturday. The heavy activity bids fair to set a new record in January construction for the fast-growing department.

During the two-week period the company began construction on a residence for J. M. Roseff, district manager of Quaker Oats company. The structure is a six-room brick bungalow of English type architecture. It is situated on Morningside drive.

Another English type bungalow of five rooms was started by the Morris company for Mrs. Gustav Kuhn, proprietor of the Daffodil Tearoom. The site is on Farr road, just off of Peachtree road.

A two-story brick house of colonial design has been started for Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Muir, manager of a newspaper equipment concern. The residence is being built on Emory road, in Druid Hills.

Construction on a fourth home was just begun by F. P. and George J. Morris for W. J. Whited, of the Reo Sales and Service company. The site of the dwelling, which is a six-room American type bungalow, is in West End Park.

The company has started to build another six-room American type bungalow for Mr. and Mrs. Sherer, on Yorkshire drive, in Morningside.

In discussing this large volume of home sales and construction activity, Mr. Melton attributed it in large measure to the special home ownership plan devised by the Morris company, in addition to the generally good business outlook.

Local Realtors Plan To Attend National Meet

The midwinter meeting of the National Association of Real Estate boards will be held in Houston, Texas, January 25. Frank C. Owens, president of the Atlanta real estate board, announced, adding that this promises to be one of the most constructive gatherings ever held in the history of the national association.

"From the present list of speakers, some of the most capable men in the real estate business have been secured to discuss current problems pertaining to the real estate business," the local president said.

"All members of the real estate board will be notified of this meeting, Mr. Owens continues, urging every one who can arrange his business so he can attend, to do so and not fail to make the trip.

The Atlanta delegation will leave Monday, January 23, stopping over a day in New Orleans, and will return by way of Memphis or New Orleans, getting back here the following Monday.

Certificates for reduced fares can be secured at the office of the real estate board. Members who have not made their reservations and desire to go should communicate with the secretary so that proper railroad, Pullman and hotel reservations can be made.

At present those who have signified their intentions of attending are Dana Bolser, Frank C. Owens, Ward Wight, M. S. Rankin, P. C. Maddox, A. B. Cates and M. C. Kiser.

Judge "Lifts" Lid on Curfew In Washington

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Curfew will not ring at midnight Saturdays hereafter for Washington night clubs and hotels permitting dancing; but the police lid remains on, so far as theaters are concerned.

Police Judge McMahon today dismissed charges against the manager of Le Paradis cafe that he had violated a regulation on New Year's eve, which prohibits certain amusements here on Sundays except between 2 and 11 p. m. As a result, cases against 15 other night club and hotel proprietors are to be dropped.

The judge, however, placed theatrical exhibitions in a different category and fined the manager of Keith's theater $25 for staging a midnight show New Year's eve. Cases are also pending against two other theater managers.

The court held that dancing by patrons of a night club or hotel is not a public exhibition and therefore does not come within the scope of the police regulations.

WOMEN SEEK CURE FOR WAR AT MEET

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Representatives of nine of the largest women's organizations in the United States were assembling here today for the third conference on the cause and cure of war, which will get underway tomorrow night and continue through Thursday.

Nine hundred delegates are expected, and discussion will embrace, among other subjects, America's foreign policy, particularly with regard to Nicaragua and China, international efforts to outlaw war and the policy of the Russian soviet toward arbitration. The conference will seek to formulate a peace program for adoption by groups of men and women throughout the country.

Leaders to Preside.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, general chairman of the conference, has announced that those who will preside over sessions will include: Mrs. John D. Sherman, of the General Federation of Women's clubs; Miss Rose Schneiderman, of the Women's Trade Union league; Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, of the National Council of Jewish Women.

At the initial session tomorrow night representatives of three war-making agencies of the government—

COOLIDGE ASKS INCREASED FUND TO LIGHT AIRWAYS

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—An additional appropriation of $475,000 for the commerce department for the use of the commercial aviation division was recommended to congress today by President Coolidge.

The funds would provide lighted airways in addition to the 200 miles proposed in the regular appropriation recommendation for the next fiscal year. It was stated that next June 30 there will be 7,512 miles of lighted airways with more than 10,000 miles at the end of the succeeding year. Part of the additional appropriation also would be used for increasing radio facilities as an aid to air navigation.

PITTSBURGH ASKS TO BE CONSIDERED IN FLOOD CONTROL

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Inclusion of the Pittsburgh district in the federal government's plan for the control of the nation's rivers was advocated today by the flood commission of Pittsburgh and three of Pennsylvania's representatives before the house flood control committee.

The witnesses, who included George S. Davison, the commission president, and Representatives Campbell, Estep and Kelly, all republicans, held a unanimous view that the solution of the flood problem was a national responsibility to be paid for entirely by the federal government.

That the tributaries should be included in the flood legislation, which congress expects to enact at this session, as paramount to the control of the high waters of the main stream, also was urged by the Pittsburgh group.

BURIAL IN ROME FOR MAN SLAIN IN ALABAMA FIGHT

Gadsden, Ala., January 14.—(AP)—Joe McBurnett, 17, who severed the jugular vein of Bill Cagle, 24, his brother-in-law, in a fight near Cedar Bluff, Ala., late Thursday afternoon was preparing today to furnish $2,500 bond. The body of Cagle was taken to Rome, Ga., for burial today.

HICCOUGH VICTIM IS AGAIN ABLE TO EAT OATMEAL

Falls City, Neb., January 14.—(United News.)—James Goldman, 69, who has been suffering with hiccoughs for 29 days, was able to eat oatmeal today, the first "solid" food in four weeks.

Goldman showed much more improvement today than at any other time during his illness, and his friends were confident that he would recover. His hiccoughing had stopped.

Two days ago physicians said Goldman's only hope lay in an operation for gall bladder trouble. They did not attempt the operation because of his weakened condition.

E. B. CASEY FORMS NEW REALTY CONCERN

Organization of the Casey Realty company with offices in the Candler building has taken place with the auspicious opening of what offers to be a prosperous year for real estate business. The new firm has been formed by E. B. Casey, one of the most active figures in Atlanta's residential market.

Mr. Casey was formerly wtih one of Atlanta's leading real estate concerns, with which he was connected for more than four years, leaving to open the office for himself. During these years Mr. Casey specialized in the sale of homes and other residential property. His experience in this field qualifies him as an expert of values and real estate activities.

Mr. Casey came to Atlanta about six or seven years ago from his native home in Birmingham. Except for the shoe business, in which he showed his skill as a salesman and store manager with the same adeptness that was to mark his activities in the real estate field, Mr. Casey has devoted his business efforts entirely to property selling.

He is now in the process of organizing an adequate sales staff, which will be increased with enlargement of the business. Mr. Casey handled a large volume or real estate business last year and looks forward to a highly prosperous year for 1928.

American Girl, Ex-Rajah's Fiancee, On Way to Ceylon

Madras, India, January 14.—(AP)—Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, Wash., fiancee of the former Maharajah, of Indore, is expected here Monday morning from Colombo, Ceylon, it is understood that she will leave Monday night for Bombay.

DECLINES TO DISCUSS COMING MARRIAGE.

Nuwara Eliya, Ceylon, January 14. (AP)—The former Maharajah of Indore today declined to discuss his coming marriage with Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seatttle, Wash. The former ruler of Indore, who is now at a hotel here where Miss Miller also is staying, received the correspondent today in Miss Miller's presence.

"I have made it a practice throughout life never to give newspaper interviews and I don't propose to deviate from that practice now," said the former Maharajah. Miss Miller also declined to say anything.

THOMPSON CITES EXPANSION NEED

Atlanta's need of annexation of new territory if the development of medium-priced residential properties is to continue was stressed yesterday by John J. Thompson, of the John J. Thompson company, who has made a study of local conditions.

Virtually all subdivisions within the corporate limits have been sold out and improved, Mr. Thompson said, with the result that residence development had to go to the suburban localities. There, however, it was hampered by the lack of city improvements, with the exception of a few higher-priced developments.

"A great deal of medium-priced vacant property in the suburbs lies idle because it lacks city improvements," Mr. Thompson said. "Even where the communities are incorporated the improvements are incomplete. School facilities, fire protection and the like could be improved.

"The benefit of annexation is shown in Kirkwood, where lots which had been idle for years were made available when, as a part of Atlanta, they could be improved with the aid of baby bond issues. The same condition is becoming apparent in East Lake.

"Other localities would show similar development if they could be made a part of Atlanta. Nobody will buy a home in a section however desirable where the street improvements are incomplete."

Motor Cars Seen To Effect Trend Of Apartments

Apartment houses, like other residential developments, are reacting to the popularity of the automobile. At lease 20 important buildings have been erected in suburban territory, at distances from four to six miles from the center of town.

The striking feature of this development is that all the buildings are less than five years old, most of them not over two years old. Interesting facts about this condition are brought out in a recent survey of the rental situation by Weyman & Connors.

More than 15 of these buildings have been erected in the Peachtree road section from the outskirts of Brookwood nearly to Buckhead. Decatur has three such buildings, either completed or in course of construction.

Tenants in such buildings have all the winter comforts, such as steam heat in the winter, while in the summer they enjoy the advantages of being in the country. Parents of young children also like the advantages of the suburban apartment.

It will be seen from the location of such buildings tht they have followed closely in the wake of the residential development, which of recent years, because of the automobile, is active in what used to be considered strictly farm territory.

MASSELLS REPORT THREE NEW LEASES

Three commercial leases aggregating $41,850, were closed during the past week by the Massell Realty company on property owned by that concern, according to announcement Saturday by S. A. Massell, secretary.

The Massell company leased the filling station on the northwest corner of Forrest avenue and Glen Iris drive to the Texas company for a term of 10 years. The aggregate rental for the period is $15,000.

Another deal made on the Massell properties was the lease of a building at 604 Whitehall street, on the corner of Murphy avenue, to the Atlanta Cotton Felt company, for a term of five years at the aggregate rental of $18,000.

In the third lease announced the Massell company let the structure at 736 Stewart avenue, S. W., to the Atlanta Ornamental Plaster company for a term of five years at an aggregate rentl of $8,850.

WOMAN IS CHOKED BY MASKED THIEVES

Stuart, Fla., January 14.—(AP)—After choking Mrs. J. F. Anderson, of Philadelphia, into insensibility, two masked burglars last night robbed the Anderson winter home here of $5,300 in currency and jewelry and escaped.

Mrs. Anderson screamed on seeing the burglars, but her cries were stifled. the state, war and navy departments —will discuss "The Contribution of the United States to World Peace." Those who are on the program are: Secretary of War Davis, Assistant Secretary Castle, of the state department, and Rear Admiral Schofield, representing the navy.

Educators to Speak.

Eight colleges and universities are represented on the list of speakers for the conference, which includes Professor Nicholas Spykman, of Yale; Dr. John Holladay Latane, of Johns Hopkins; Professor Rexford Tugwell and Professor Philip Jessup, of Columbia; Professor Harry Barnes, of Smith; Dr. Leighton Stuart, president of Yenching university, Pekin; Professor M. Ernest Patterson, of the Wharton school, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Philip Marshal Brown, of Princeton, and Dr. Mary E. Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke.

CRIMINAL CHARGES MADE IN HAITIAN BUSINESS FAILURE

Port Au Prince, Haiti, January 14. (AP)—What is asserted to be the worst business failure in the history of Haiti, involving American firms, has been disclosed by the disappearance of Walter Oloffson, senior member of Oloffson, Lucas & Co., the second largest German firm in Haiti.

The main store of the firm in Port Au Prince and several branches in the island have been seized and sealed by the courts, and civil and criminal charges have been instituted and bankruptcy proceedings entered. The Berlin office of the Hamburg-American steamship line, for which the firm was the agent, has informed the authorities of fictitious bills of lading, aggregating $100,000.

REALTOR BANQUET SET FOR FRIDAY

The annual banquet of the Atlanta Real Estate board will be held at 6:30 o'clock Friday night, January 20, in the Atlanta Athletic club, it was announced Saturday by Frank C. Owens, president.

The banquet committee, consisting of John O. Chiles, chairman; John O. DuPress, E. M. Chapman, Jr., Jesse Draper, H. H. Robinson and Allan Crain, met at the office of the board Friday morning for the purpose of discussing and outlining plans for the occasion.

President Owens stated that, in his opinion, the board banquet this year will be one of the most constructive ever held. Many important matters pertaining to the work of the organization for the year will be discussed and every member will be acquainted with all facts pertaining to the real estate board and given an opportunity to acquaint himself thoroughly with what the organization intends to do for its membership during the year, he said.

The fourteen standing committees with the personnel of each will be announced and each committee's operation will be discussed by the chairman. A pleasing program of entertainment will be arranged that will assure members of an enjoyable evening and every one attending will have a good time, the president stated.

President Owens further urged all members of the board to look forward to the banquet this year with view of attending. All members are asked to send in reservations to the office of the board so that preparations can be made for each member attending.

John O. Chiles, chairman of the banquet committee, states that the banquet will start promptly at 6:30 o'clock and he assures those attending of a pleasing evening and a little fun besides the board business that will be attended to. Firm members of the board are requested to see that every salesman in their organization attends the banquet and that each member is privileged to invite any clients or friends that they might desire to bring.

Telephone, Tech Projects Boost Building Trades

Plans for constructing an addition to the dining hall at Georgia Tech and indications that the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company may soon build a Buckhead exchange following purchase of a lot in that section, were seen to add impetus to the local building market this past week.

The telephone company purchased a lot on Peachtree road, just south of the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church, from Mrs. C. A. Ross for a consideration of $15,000. It is indicated that the company will build an exchange there to handle the rapidly increasing telephone traffic in the Buckhead section due to the enlarged number of subscribers.

The Georgia Tech dining hall construction job was one of three important local contracts let recently on which work is to start soon, according to F. M. Noland, secretary of the Atlanta Builders' exchange, where the contracts were posted. The other two are the Rhodes-Haverty building on Peachtree and James street and the Bass Junior High school.

LIGHTING FIXTURES ARE SELECTED FOR SECOND MODEL HOME

Foster Colonial Design With Crystal Chandeliers

Beauty of Constitution's Demonstration Dwelling in Haynes Manor To Be Enhanced by Electrical Decorations; Construction Progress Increases.

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

Selection of lighting fixtures for The Constitution's second model home, being erected by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, well known builders, on the beautiful Peachtree-Battle avenue lot in Haynes Manor, was made last week.

The architect, representatives of decorative electrical equipment, in order that the individual needs of the residence could be perfectly suited. It will be recalled, that The Constitution is sponsoring the residential construction program in cooperation with the Home Owners institute to encourage the building of homes in Atlanta that can be enjoyed by their owners for a lifetime. The key to this lies in use of standard building materials to provide durability of construction and, of permanent equipment of well-tested merit to insure durability of beauty and household convenience.

Fixtures to Last.

In the selection of permanent equipment there is perhaps no item of more importance than lighting fixtures. Few major elements of a home contribute as much to interior beauty as do the lighting fixtures. Here, as in the choice of building materials, your first selection plays an important part in the ultimate cost of the dwelling. You have seen in following the earlier phases of construction that the ultimate cost of the dwelling is held to a minimum when standard materials are used through the elimination of repair and replacement costs. The same rule is applicable in the case of lighting fixtures. Where the fixtures are not of proven merit they must be quickly replaced, adding considerably to the cost of living. A wide selection of fixtures manufactured by nationally-known concerns was made available for The Constitution's second model home from the stock of the Capital Electric company. At the same time valuable assistance was obtained from the company's home lighting experts.

A visit to the model home in Haynes Manor last week revealed that notable progress was again being made with the return of mild weather. This should result before long in completion of the residence, after which it will be furnished throughout and formally opened for four weeks of public inspection. In the meatime Atlantans interested in building or buying a new home will be provided with an object lesson in the most approved building methods by following the progress of construction at the second model the buildings and fixture experts from the Capital Electric company made a thorough study of the model home preparatory to choosing the home as it is now being carried through decorative phases.

Add Color.

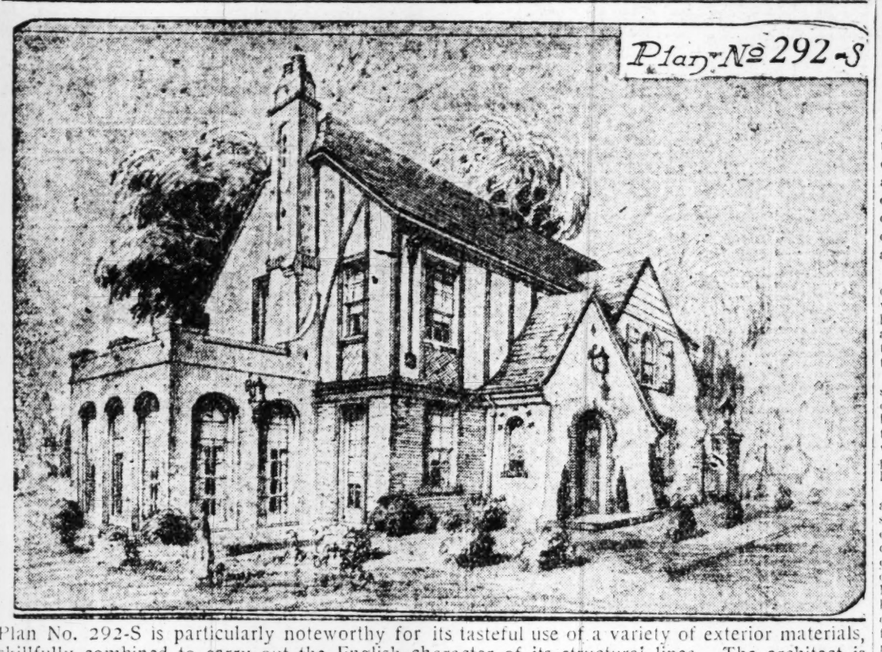

In a few weeks the newly selected lighting fixtures will be installed in The Constitution home. When you approach the dwelling then, you will see hanging from the attractive formal colonial entrance a colonial lantern modeled, to carry out the scheme of architecture, after the old colonial lanterns, and finished in Swedish iron to harmonize with the exterior hardware.

Entering the living room, you are met by the vision of a colonial crystal chandelier that carries you to the heights of decorative ecstasy. Its rows of hanging crystal prisms glitter with reflected light. Four wall brackets of brass finish and crystal appendages match the center piece. Carrying out the room plan of the first floor which has the dining room and music room leading from the living room through wide, open portals to give the effect and convenience of an expansive room in what is actually a small compact house, the lighting fixtures of dining and music rooms are also of crystal prism style. In the dining room the large center piece is finished in silver, as are the two wall brackets. The center ceiling piece, and two wall brackets in the music room are also finished in color to match the walls.

In the snug breakfast room you will see a lantern of apple green enamel dropped from the ceiling. On its glass shade is a parrot painted in colors to match those of the room. The kitchen nearby will have the single day-light unit, neat and efficient.

For the bedrooms upstairs lighting fixtures were selected with an ivory base touched in colors to match decoration schemes of the rooms. The master bedroom will have a center piece and two wall brackets, while the other two bedrooms will have just one center fixture. Electric fixtures in the two bathrooms will be in solid colors to harmonize with the walls and colored bath fixtures. All hall passages will be lighted through rosette receptacles, and all closets will be equipped with pull-chain receptacles.

Brick and Stucco Interestingly Combined in English Design

Plan No. 292-S is particularly noteworthy for its tasteful use of a variety of exterior materials, skillfully combined to carry out the English character of its structural lines. The architect is Harold E. Paddon, registered architect in New York, Pennsylvania and California. Complete blueprints of our plans and specifications, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost.

Chimneys of Brick Susceptible to Many Decorative Schemes

Chimneys, to judge from appearances, are regarded as little more than smoke vents. Seldom do we see one that enhances the architecture of a small home. Take notice of the chimney in the perspective drawing of Plan No. 292-S shown elsewhere on this page; it is a feature that adds character to the design.

Practically all chimneys are built of common brick, but in this article we are not considering construction, but rather the factor of appearance, and how, with a little forethought, this element of the house can be made to contribute something of interest.

Let us assume we have a wood or stucco exterior, with the chimney occupying a conspicuous location. The brick of which it is made, with contrasting mortar lines and perhaps a wrought iron ornament near a gable peak, looks well, but can be made to look much better.

If lammie or clinker brick, which are overburned common brick possessing even greater strength than the ordinary brick, are used, varying color tones will result. Lammie and clinker may be bought for the price of common brick. Most chimneys are laid up in the common or American bond; this should be avoided. Dutch cross, Flemish bond or a skintled effect may well be used; these bonds may increase laying time slightly, but the gain will justify the cost. The popular garden wall bond is not recommended, for there is not sufficient expanse on a chimney for this bond to show to advantage.

Raked mortar joints are another worthy addition giving light and shadow a chance to play in an attractive manner. Coloring mortar offers another possibility for distinction, but the natural color mortar is considered best. A white cement paint may be used over the entire chimney; this if often done when efflorescence appears or when the exterior color scheme demands it. From an architectural viewpoint, the flush joint in the common brick chimney is not especially good.

Contrasting Material Blended Gives Individuality to House

English Plan Features Tasteful Combination of Brick and Stucco; Variety Also the Keynote of Its Unusual Detail Treatment.

BY L. PORTER MOORE
President Home Owners Institute, Inc.

Strong individuality in home design is evident in this plan, No. 292-S, which economically but effectively incorporates many features of English design usually confined to higher priced homes because of the expense for masonry work. The English masonry effect is gained in this case by the use of common brick veneer and Portland cement stucco on metal lath, over a structure framed conventionally in wood. The architect is Harold E. Paddon, of New York, registered architect in New York, Pennsylvania and California. The actual space content of this design is 26,688 cubic feet.

Mr. Paddon has designed homes built in 38 states of this country and is the architect who created the plans for the famous "House We Built for a Bride" and "Livable, Lovable Bungalow," featured by "Good Housekeeping Magazine" in 1921 and 1922. These home designs were built in dozens of cities of this country and even in Japan.

The individuality of the home shown today is largely a product of the use of differing and contrasting materials, with their variations in color, form and texture. This quality would make this home an outstanding one in any community, and at the same time would largely obviate the possibility of its close duplication in a neighborhood house, a condition to be avoided where possible.

Artistry Gained Economically.

The artistic effect for which the home is noteworthy is gained in the variance in character shown in the work—the avoidance of sameness—and is made possible by careful detailing to avoid expense.

Entering the home, its keynote of individuality is made manifest at once. The chapel entrance has a tiled floor with a depression for a mat, marked at 2 on the block plans shown under the picture of the house, while a leaded window marked 3 at the left side transmits a softly colored transfused light.

The living room is large and well arranged for furniture, with the fireplace as a central feature at the left. A glazed doorway gives onto a large inclosed porch with graceful round-head French windows which open to a terrace of cement marked out to resemble tiles. This is marked 1 in the plan.

The tradesmen's gate at the right of the house is a convenient and decorative feature. It is supported by a brick pier, on which is mounted a large wrought iron lantern. This is marked 4 in the plans.

Bays Increase Room Size.

Two overhanging bays on the upper story, one in the smaller front bedroom and one in the rear bedroom, increase the room size without a consequent increase in the foundation size, and help to carry out the English effect.

The kitchen is equipped with the latest devices turned out by manufacturers of domestic science equipment, including a built-in ironing board. The automatic electric refrigerator in the entry and the package receiver at the rear terrace are marked 6 and 5 respectively.

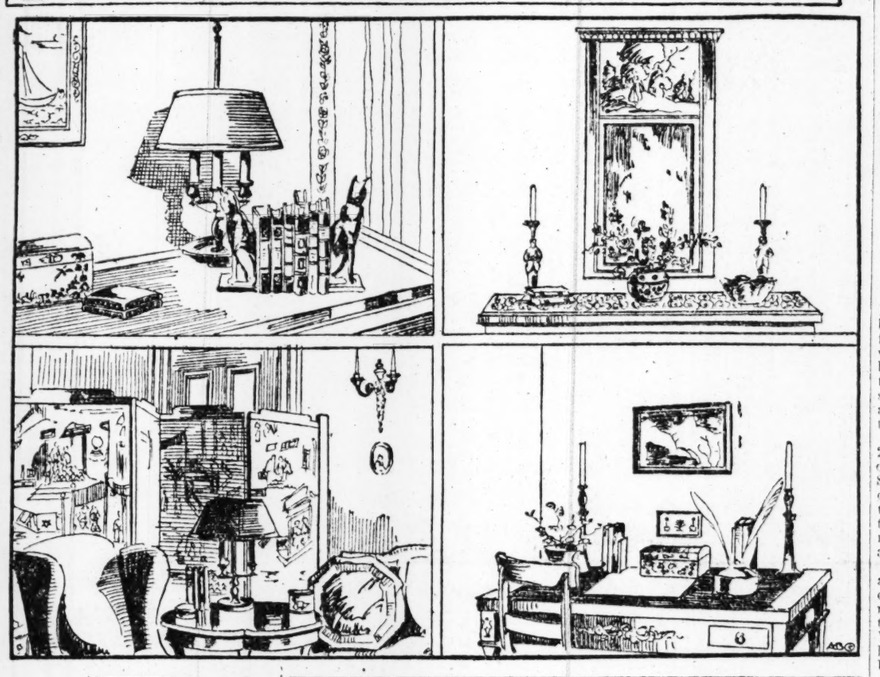

The wall thermostat unit for the automatic heat regulator is marked 7 in the dining room. A completely equipped lavatory is situated at the rear of the entry.

Upstairs the master bedroom is equipped with a cedar-lined closet for protection of clothing from moths, marked 8. The flat room of the inclosed porch, opening off this room, is covered with corrosion-resisting copper, assuring permanent freedom from trouble at this point. This is marked 9.

A completely equipped laundry is located in the cellar, where the combustion chamber of the built-in incinerator burns all garbage and trash, making disposal an easy matter.

The exterior detail ornamentation gracefully accentuates the lines and planes of the design. This is well exemplified in the chimney, which serves architectural as well as utilitarian effects.

FURNISHING THE HOME — MARIAN MOORE

THE FINISHING TOUCHES OF THE ROOM.

Accessories are the finishing touches which give a room character, sparkle, uniqueness. The greatest difficulty in selecting accessories is to eschew the commonplace. Certain objects are in every home: pillows, pottery, books and book-ends, small boxes, etc., and it is with such objects that we propose to stamp our own personality, our own taste upon our rooms. How can it be done?

You will find this a good rule to follow: The more commonplace an object is in itself, the more attention you should give to its coloring, design, workmanship and to the relative value which it acquires through location, contrast and symmetry. Herein lies the difference between refinement and vulgarity. It is also important to observe moderation in the use of accessories; a few well-chosen objects should suffice; too many trinkets are tiresome, confusing and cheap.

Pillows are meant first for comfort and should be designed accordingly; fragile perishable cushions are for the boudoir where they merely suggest femininess; for the living room, however, buy cushions that will give service; the material should harmonize in texture with the upholstery fabrics; cretonne, silk poplin and mercerized sunfast weaves in plain colors or stripes are suitable for use with cretonne; the same may accompany denim covered furniture, while velour pillows also harmonize and enrich the appearance of denim; with mohair, select cushions in velour, satin, damask or brocatelle. Avoid fancy shapes: square, round or rectangular cushions are best for ease, and if filled with down, they fluff out after use and remain beautifully decorative in spite of their utilitarian purpose. Color is supremely important: If a sharp contrast is desired to liven up a room, pillows offer an opportunity for the introduction of a complimentary color; thus, a gold or yellow cushion on a plum-colored couch or chair; burnt-orange on blue; jade green on mulberry, etc.; or colorful pillows, either plain, figured or striped, may break the monotony of a large upholstered piece in a neutral shade; thus coral rose on grey or black; turquoise-blue on taupe; jade green on black or dull maroon; lastly, the cushions may unify the color scheme by summing up the different hues in the room; supposing the colors to be rose, green, yellow and orchid, one pillow may contain all these colors in a pattern and another yellow and orchid. Do not heap all the pillows on the couch; place them in different parts of the room, so as to balance the colors. Avoid trimmings of flowers, fruit and gold lace which look cheap and make the pillows unfit for use.

Screens are intended to shut off drafts, conceal doorways (kitchen or dining room) or to delineate certain groups, especially near the fireplace. They are desirable insofar as they help to develop the color scheme, introduce pattern, give height to the decoration and convey a sense of intimacy and coziness. They may be hung with wallpaper, toile de Jouy, chintz or even some of the more characteristic cretonnes.

Pottery pieces have been called the jewels or the room, because they provide artistic color touches. Imagine a room done in dull green and mulberry with two or three pottery pieces in Chinese red? Or one in which yellow and rose are dominant touched up with jars of lapis-lazzuli? Lamp bases of pottery are quite as decorative as pottery vases; it is always preferable to let the base, rather than the shade, provide the color accent.

When buying book ends, you may either select them in the colors of the room, or take this opportunity to introduce a bit of statuary. Don't be too unsophisticated, for the presence of books is an evidence of culture which an error of taste might render ludicrous.

Why do some people buy old-fashioned maps? Because they are imaginative; because they cherish memories and traditions; because, once in a while, for a rest, they like to forget modern times; to them, there is romance in the past and the map on the wall above their writing table or on the parchment shade of their lamp is the key to a wonderful realm of make-believe. Much the same magic lies in those silhouette portraits which sometimes flank the fireplace in slender vertical arrangement or in plain black oval frames, adorn small tables and shelves. One should take care, however, to place such accessories among early American furnishings which constitute their natural setting.

The occasional box on table or chest of drawers should not be picked at random, for nothing is more impersonal than a mere box, and to give it character we need to relate it to the room. The tooled leather box accompanies Spanish furniture or reproductions of famous Italian paintings; it is also at home in the room that contains many books; a brass-box echoes the gleam of brass in the fireplace furnishings, the wall brackets, the candlesticks on the mantle, or the gold of picture frames; the painted and decorated box is particularly suited to interiors adorned with cretonne, hand-blocked linen or toile, and as in the case of pottery its hue should provide an accent or high light.

There should be flowers, but artificial ones mostly suggest dust and cost too much to be frequently renewed. Why not buy potted plants? Ivy and Wandering Jew thrive under the most adverse conditions and make charming mantle accessories, while flowering plants provide color and the element of livableness which is one of the main constituents of that rare quality called homelikeness.

Marian Moore's Answers to Questions.

Question: I have a breakfast set consisting of table and four chairs, painted gray; I realize this is too dull, but cannot buy another one; how can I brighten the room?

Answer: Introduce orange and black into the color scheme: the wallpaper will have gold, white and black patterns on orange background; woodwork gray with orange and black stripes; touch up the furniture with orange and black; place orange colored glass bowl and black glass candlesticks with orange candles on the table; curtains of orange voile edged with black; paint floor black.

Question: Our breakfast nook is just off the kitchen. Should the same color scheme apply to both? What scheme of colors would you suggest that would incorporate the white and black of my range, sink and kitchen table top?

Answer: Here is one in black, white, cafe-au-lait and red. Walls and cupboards and woodwork except baseboard, black. Flour, linoleum in red tile pattern, with black joints. Inside of cupboards, Chinese red. Kitchen chair and breakfast nook furniture, Chinese red; table top and chair seats, black. Kitchen table except top, cafe-au-lait,

VAST THRONGS VISIT NEW YORK AUTO SHOW

New York, January 14.—(AP)—A million and a quarter persons attended this week's national automobile show and the separate Ford industrial exhibit, ending tonight.

New cars worth at least $2,000,000 were ordered.

More than $850,000 was spend for newspaper and magazine advertising.

These estimates were made by various officials for the Associated Press.

A million persons were clocked at the gates of Madison Square Garden, where the Ford company exhibited its products without charge. An average of more than 35,000 persons daily attended the national show at the Grand Central palace, where there was an admission fee.

Advertising authorities said the week's advertising in nine New York papers and four trade journals alone would perhaps total $800,000. No estimates were obtainable for other advertising mediums.

The nine newspapers printed 794,056 agate lines. One leading trade journal carried 264 pages of advertising at $500 a page.

Newspapers and trade journals reported that the volume of advertising was heavier than ever before. Officials of the shows said they were the most successful in the history of the industry. The Ford company is planning to tour other cities, with Chicago the first stop.

EMORY DEBATERS FACE 24 TILTS

Emory University, Ga., January 15. Emory's varsity debate squad will break all its previous records for forensic engagements this season when it meets a dozen colleges in debate on the home campus and at least that many away from Emory. The season's engagements have just been announced by Wallace Alston, secretary of the debate council.

Emory will meet Wofford January 20, supporting the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That the United States should cease to protect its foreign investments by armed force." In this debate, which is the first encounter of the new year, Emory will be represented by David A. Lockmiller and Robert Elliott.

Later in the season, beginning around the middle of February and continuing through April, Emory will meet West Virginia university, Gettysbury university, of Pennsylvania; Wake Forest college, Davidson college, Southern Methodist university, University of North Carolina, Baylor university, Birmingham-Southern college, Northwestern university and Duke university. These will be held at home.

Several debate tours will be made by students, the longest of which will be a northern tour, including about six or eight engagements with some of the largest northern universities, among them the University of New York at New York City.

Emory will again meet Wesleyan College of Women at Macon. A western tour will include Louisiana State and others. Emory's debate record for 1926-27 was 19 victories out of 21 debates. Emory has had four debates already this season, winning three and losing one.

CONVICTED BAILIFF GETS 5-YEAR TERM

Sentence of five years on the chain gang was imposed Saturday morning on Thomas W. Bulfin, former baliff in the court of Justice of Peace L. W. James, of College Park, following Bulfin's conviction Friday night by a Fulton superior court jury on the charges of blackmail.

Bulfin, indicted jointly with Bob Clay, now a fugitive and another former bailiff of the court, was an alleged leader of a blackmail ring which operated with the College Park court as headquarters, and fleeced its victims by threat of jail sentences under false warrants, the prosecution contended.

Lois Beasley, who was jointly indicted with Bulfin on one count, was given an 18-month suspended sentence on charges of having participated in the blackmail scheme by swearing a false warrant against one of the victims.

Lee Young alias Roy Young, was given a 12-month suspended sentence on a similar charge. The case, which occupied two days with the introduction of 50 state witnesses, was tried before Judge E. D. Thomas.

Bulfin's attorneys gave notice that they would file motion for a new trial, and Bulfin's bond was fixed by Judge Thomas at $7,500, which had not been made Saturday night.

WORKMEN BUILD VAULT IN ABBEY FOR HARDY'S ASHES

London, January 14.—(AP)—Westminster Abbey echoed tonight to the unwonted sounds of a dozen masons and other workers preparing by dim lamps, according to ancient custom in secrecy, a narrow vault in the floor of the poet's corner for the reception of the ashes of Thomas Hardy. The body of the noted novelist was cremated this afternoon at Woking with brief and simple ceremony.

There will be three simultaneous services on Monday afternoon—one at the abbey, another at the interment of the novelist's heart at Stinsford and a memorial service at St. Peters, Dorchester.

AUTO LICENSE JAM LOOMING

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Long lines of annoyed and irritated people, muttering and mumbling, curses and maledictions, waiting, waiting, waiting; now the line moves a foot of two forward, more waits, more curses and more mutterings.

That's a sketchy picture of those last few days every year of the automobile tag sale at the state capitol and it is a situation that easily can be avoided if old man John W. Public will only do what's good for him.

Every year the state automobile license bureau must sell the people of Georgia a certain amount of automobile license tags and each year the number grows greater. The time limit expires February 1, 1928, after which penalties are inflicted. It is reasonable to assume that no human agency can do in three or four days something that requires four or five weeks' time, yet that's what the public seems to expect of the license bureau.

In the next two weeks there will be plenty of machinery available to supply the tags. This machinery can take care of a certain amount of business and when this business is not forthcoming it simply means that this machinery will have to handle the last few days a load which it cannot carry.

If every automobile owner would make it a point to get the license tag in the next few days such owner will be given prompt service and with no long wait or inconvenience. If the owners postpone until the last minute the purchase of their tag, then the inevitable congestion will follow.

This year the licenses are sold on a basis of the weight of the machine instead of on its horsepower as in the past, and this change will confuse the motor owner unless the owner is supplied with the model number of his car. If he has the model number there are clerks on duty who will rate the car promptly, but without this model number additional inconvenience will follow.

Secretary of State S. G. McLendon, Arthur T. Harris, chief clerk; J. Threatt Moore, cashier of the window department, and Dr. Royall J. Miller, head of the mail order department, have clerical forces which are ready to serve and the quicker the tag is bought the less trouble and annoyance to the owner.

"If we can get the people to get their tags now we can render much better service and give much more satisfaction," Secretary McLendon said. "The tags must be bought, anyway. There is nothing gained by delay, hence it is to the best interests of all automobile owners that the tags be purchased early."

IRATE MERCHANTS FIGHT CITY TAXES BY USING CANDLES

Paris, January 14.—(AP)—Angry merchants of Boulogne Sur Mer have stopped using electric lights in their shops, to spite the city government for imposing a long string of new taxes on them.

For two nights now—and night falls at 4:30 o'clock these days—the places of business of butchers, bakers and candlestick makers have had the somber air they knew 100 years ago with flickering candles and dim coal oil lamps supplying the illumination.

Price Prediction Cost Ten Million, Says Alabaman

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—Cotton growers lost $10,000,000 in "one fell swoop" when the department of agriculture issued a report last September predicting "a low trend in prices," Representative McDuffie, democrat, Alabama, testified today before the house agricultural committee.

McDuffie urged the committee to approve his bill which would prohibit expression of opinions by any government official, "as to the future market prices of cotton, wheat or other crops."

The bureau has gone far enough in its work of gathering information "to forecast the trend of agricultural prices," Lloyd S. Tenny, chief of the bureau of agricultural statistics, declared to the committee. He said the forecasts were based on data gathered by the bureau on supply and demand produce on hand, and other information which justifies predictions as to future production.

Mr. Tenny contended that the rise and fall of cotton prices was based on the law of supply and demand, with the exception of differences caused by market manipulation and the farmers did not interpret material furnished by the department in terms of price unless it was done for them.

"Speculators make use of such facts in guiding their own activities," he said. "The farmer seems to have neither the time for inclination to do so and the importance of our facts reach him most forcefully when given as price forecasts."

In speaking of the September price forecast, Mr. Tenny told the committee that a similar forecast on August 15, had caused "not a ripple," he declared that after the August prediction cotton had gone up to about 24 cents and that it had already dropped to 21 cents when the price reported of September 15 was issued. Cotton was due to come down, he said, because excessive speculation had put it too high.

Emory University Bank Is Formed To End Thievery

Emory University, Ga., January 15.—In order to stop the thievery in the dormitories at Emory university, George H. Mew, treasurer of the university has established a student bank. Garland Radford, student, has been named cashier.

The new bank came largely as a result of numerous raids on the dormitories in which students have lost considerable money. The most recent robbery was committed in Alabama hall when Freshman DeWitt was relieved of $55 in cash.

The bank was open to students following the opening of school and received a number of deposits. The policy of the bank is to carry the money free of charge and permit money to be drawn only through person. Emory students have been needing a depository for funds since the establishment of the school.

SOUTHERN COTTON MILLS HAVE BEST YEAR SINCE 1923

Spartanburg, S. C., January 14.—(AP)—On the basis of a recently completed survey of semi-annual dividend disbursements by 97 representative concerns, A. M. Law & Co., local bankers, announced today that southern cotton mills had just rounded out the most profitable year since 1923.

A direct indication of the excellent condition of the textile industry in the south was seen by the company in the total of $11,485,703 paid by the 97 mills to stockholders for the six months ending December 31, as shown by its compilation.

This, however, it was pointed out, does not begin to represent the amount of earnings for the year. Scores of smaller mills and many large ones, whose stock is so closely held that the rate would not have been of general interest, not being included in the survey.

The semi-annual dividend for the 97 listed mills ranged from 1 1-2 per cent to 15 per cent.

Although the price of cotton made it difficult for the mills to realize a margin of profit after September, the brokerage concern said, careful merchandising and general curtailment greatly relieved the situation and led to the prosperous year.

MAYOR OF CHICAGO MEETS BRITISHER; NO BLOOD SHED

Chicago, January 14.—(United News.)—A representative of the British empire and this country's leading exponent of "America first" met today and all was well. The Rt. Rev. A. F. Deane, lord bishop of Aberdeen, Scotland, and Mayor William Hale Thompson had nothing but pleasantries for each other at a conference in the mayor's office.

"We hear much about your anti-British talk," said the bishop, "but we take it with the greatest of good humor."

"Thanks, bishop, thanks," said "Big Bill" laconically.

Electric Motors are like a movie play

THERE'S only a shade of difference between comedy and pathos. You chuckle at Charlie Chaplin; an instant later you dab at a suspicious glint in your eyes. Every movie has funny episodes that might with a slight twist in emphasis leave you with a heartache. It's the way the director balances his materials that makes the difference between humor and pathos, comedy and tragedy.

Building motors is like making a movie in that certain electrical and mechanical qualities must be balanced. You can vary the proportions any way you wish and get a different result. But there's one right combination for every job. Finding it is a matter of the skill, equipment, resources, and experience of the motor manufacturer.

Westinghouse has all these — especially experience. The life and service which you get from any motor depend on the skill and understanding with which these thirteen qualities have been balanced by the manufacturer:

1. Temperature
2. Torques
3. Efficiency
4. Power Factor (in alternating-current motors)
5. Speed Characteristics
6. Insulation
7. Commutation (in direct-current motors)
8. Air Gap
9. Bearings
10. Shafts
11. Steel
12. Assembly
13. Rotating Smoothness

Put one responsibility back of the entire motor application by using Westinghouse control apparatus as well as Westinghouse motors.

New York, January 14.—(AP)—Early declines influenced by relatively easy Liverpool cables and continued talk of domestic mill curtailment, were followed by partial recoveries on trade buying and covering in the cotton market today. May contracts sold up from 18.91 to 19.02 and closed at 18.96 the general market closing steady, at net declines of 7 to 12 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 5 to 10 points under liquidation combined with commission house and local selling, active months showing net losses of 10 to 13 points in early trading. Offerings were not heavy or particularly aggressive, however, and appeared to be readily absorbed by a renewal of trade buying below the 19-cent level for May. After easing off to 18.80 for March, and 18.69 for July, prices stiffened up on covering.

Rallies carried March up to 18.91 and July 18.78, or within a point or two of Friday's closing quotations. This bulge met a little further weekend liquidation, and last prices were several points off from the best.

Reports that a movement to curtail mill production was under way in fine goods mills in New England came in for comment, and may have accounted for some of the early selling. There were also reports from parts of the south that holders of spot cotton were showing a disposition to sell a little more freely, which may have had a tendency to check buying, although there were also reports that the basis was holding steady. Trading was quiet, and the day's fluctuations were regarded by local brokers as reflecting the effect of small orders either way, rather than any particular change in the general situation.

Private cables from Liverpool said hedge selling there had been absorbed by covering and trade buying and that the market for cotton cloths and yarns in Manchester was steady.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 130,613 bales against 213,003 last year.

COTTON PRICES EASE OFF AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, January 14.—(AP)—The cotton market was decidedly quiet today even for a short Saturday session. Prices eased off moderately in early trading on rather unfavorable Liverpool cables but the loss was recovered on expectations of a bullish boll weevil hibernation report from Washington.

March contracts traded down to 18.67 but rallied later to 18.75 and closed at 18.74, 3 points net down. The general market closed steady at a net decline of 2 to 6 points.

Although cables were lower than due at the start first trades here were 2 points up to 5 down. The market turned easy soon after the start, however, on further consideration of the unfavorable cables and May contracts soon eased off to 18.62 and July 18.35, 15 points below the previous close.

Later in the session prices rallied on week-end covering and some buying based on Washington advices to the effect that a report on weevil hibernation would be issued during the day. The report, however, was made public after the market had closed. May rallied to 18.72 and July 18.45 or 10 points above the lows.

Prices held today in the final trading and May contracts closed at 18.71 and July 18.45, 5 to 6 points net down for the day.

Exports totaled 15,463 bales.

New York, January 14.—(AP)—Pronounced reactionary price tendencies developed in today's stock market. The opening was firm as pools resumed operations in a number of specialties which they marked behind, however, and when "bears" traders sensed that the recovery lacked momentum they started to hammer a wide assortment of issues. This short selling, combined with the usual week-end realizing, wiped out most of the early gains and sent a number of issues 1 to 7 points below yesterday's final quotations.

There was little in the day's news to influence the price movement. Radio corporation opened 1 3-4 points higher on buying presumably influenced by the showing of the new television radio device, but it lost the gain and closed 2 points net lower at 100 3-4. United States Steel common opened fractionally higher at 148 1-2 and then sold down to 146, off 2 1-4 points net.

Despite the optimistic utterances of trade executives, motors continued under selling pressure. General Motors closed 2 1-4 points lower at 132, and Hudson, Hupp, Dodge Brothers preferred and Studebaker yielded a point or more. Willys-Overland turned upward just before the close, but the net gain was fractional.

Violent fluctuations again characterized the trading in some of the high-priced industrial specialties. Greene Cananea Copper broke 7 points to 135 1-2 and rallied 1. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe dropped from an early high of 222 1-4 to 215 and rallied to 217. Case Threshing slumped 6 1-2 points to 238. Baldwin, Dupont, Equitable Office Building common and Midland Steel Products preferred all sold off 4 points or so.

Uneasiness over credit conditions and fears of an early increase in federal reserve rediscount rates have been factors in the liquidation of stocks during the week. Many of the conservative commission houses urged a lightening of long commitments until the future trend of the market becomes more clearly defined in their week-end market letters.

Except for a rally of 7 points in Spanish pesetas which wiped out yesterday's loss there was little interest in foreign exchange rates, which held steady. Sterling cables were quoted around $4.87 27-32.

The weekly clearing house statement showed a deficit in reserve of $30,707,340, as against a deficit of $62,374,630 last week. Aggregate reserve totaled $638,500,000. Except for a gain of $23,798,000 in the reserve in the federal reserve bank of member banks, the detailed statement of actual condition this day showed decreases in all of the principal items. Loans discounts and investments dropped $129,276,000; cash in own vaults, $6,100,000; net demand deposits, $78,020,000, and time deposits, $4,055,000.

Weekly Expert Review Of English Cotton Market

(By Mail.)

Manchester, England, January 5.—On the return to business after the Christmas holidays traders on the Manchester Royal exchange have been discussing the important developments during the last few days in the efforts of the Lancashire employers to devise means for the betterment of the industry.

In one sense there has been scarcely any fresh development since two or three weeks ago when the subcommittee of the Master Spinners' federation (which represents all the spinning section, including the American and Egyptian mills) that had been conducting an inquiry into production costs, submitted a report to the committee of the Cotton Manufacturers' association. It was then suggested that there were several means of reducing overhead charges and it was emphasized that if small concessions could be obtained in several directions, the ultimate result would be important. Since then this sub-committee of the federation has put the matter before the general committee and the larger body has granted the sub-committee powers to act.

Joint Meeting Will Be Held.

It may be taken for granted that early this year the federation officials will ask the trade union leaders to attend a joint conference to discuss various proposals. Although the federation considers that other matters, such as mill finance, charges for printing, bleaching, dyeing and local and imperial taxation require attention, the main discussion will be centered on the proposed reduction in the operatives' wages of 25 per cent on piece list rates which is equal to about 12 1-2 per cent on current rates, and the suggestion that the working week in the mills should be increased from 48 to 52 1-2.

It may be pointed out that if an agreement can be reached on these lines it will mean that the earnings of the operatives will be about the same as at present but that they will have to work longer time to make up their wages. With regard to working hours the question of cleaning time has not been satisfactory to the employers for several years.

Although the working week has been 48 hours there has not been production up to this limit. It remains to be seen what will happen during the next few weeks but the opinion is expressed that the trade union leaders may be willing to submit to a small wage reduction.

Want 48-hour Week to Stand.

It can be taken for granted with regard to hours there will be strong resistance against any interference with the 48-hour week. One unfortunate feature of the employers' proposal is that the scheme provides for a return to work before breakfast. It must be said on this point that it will be difficult for the masters to justify their action and yet if the hours are to be increased it is not possible to extend the morning and afternoon sessions as the periods under present law are too long without an interval. Probably the aim of the employers is to eliminate the time at present permitted for cleaning as it is understood that many of them will be quite satisfied if they could base costs on an actual production week of 48 hours.

The severe trade depression in Lancashire which has lasted for six years has caused much suffering. Employers and shareholders have lost vast sums of money and the workpeople have been under-employed and thus only able to earn small wages. The scheme now being put forward by the Spinners' federation is comprehensive and if anything is to be done in the way of reducing production costs then sacrifices will have to be made by all sections.

There is to be a special meeting of the central committee of the Cotton Manufacturers' association when the question of joining hands with the Master Spinners' federation will be considered. If this committee decides in favor it is likely that the officials of the two organizations will get in touch with the trade union officials early next week when arrangements will be made for a joint conference.

BIG INCREASE IN WEEVILS HID OUT

Washington, January 14.—(AP)—The department of agriculture today issued a report on the number of boll weevils entering hibernation in the fall of 1927, based on experiments to determine damage by the pests to this year's cotton crop.

The records were made by utilizing Spanish moss collected around cotton fields and examining it for weevils. The number of live weevils per ton then was computed and used as a numerical index of abundance.

A table for Tallulah, La., showed 21 weevils to the ton as against 242 last year, but the department said it should be remembered that the Tallulah area was included in the Mississippi overflow and only a few fields were planted in cotton. The records showed that when the examination was made close to one of these fields a fair number of weevils were found but when made some miles away from the nearest cotton it was negative. The average for northeastern Louisiana was 18 weevils against 242 last year; southern Louisiana 357 against 192; average South Carolina 1,525 against 48; average Georgia 220 against 359; average Alabama 148 and no figures for last year.

Extensive Survey Made.

"In addition to these numerical records made by entomologists of the bureau of entomology," the department said, "reports have been compiled from the various state entomologists, experiment station workers and extension workers of the southern states, which give a general picture of weevil conditions in their respective territories at the time the weevils were entering hibernation. The following is a digest of these reports:

"All states east of the Mississippi river have had mild fall weather conditions and a top crop of squares and bolls on cotton plants up to an unusually late date, providing abundant breeding and feeding material for weevils. The late crop of weevils was more abundant and in a better condition for successful hibernation than for several years.

"In the southeastern states the increase in weevil population late in the season was greater and more general than for a number of years, with North Carolina and South Carolina reporting a large weevil population entering hibernation, in some sections greater than ever in their weevil history.

"Southwestern Tennessee counties produced an abundance of weevils late in the fall, with Arkansas showing a more general infestation with greater numbers than since 1923. In Oklahoma, the weevil in its migration during the summer of 1927 advanced further in the northern and western sections than ever before. Large numbers of weevils were found in these northern and western areas, while the late fall infestation in the southeastern and central sections was considerably less.

Plenty of Weevils in Louisiana.

"In Louisiana, not including the overflowed areas, reports indicate that practically throughout the state a late growth of cotton was general; mild weather conditions prevailed all through the fall with killing frosts unusually late. Leaf worm stripping was exceedingly 'spotted' and not general enough to reduce materially the food supply or late breeding of the boll weevil. Practically all fields showed a heavy infestation up to the occurrence of killing frosts early in December. Weevils in abundance were reported from all important cotton parishes. In the overflowed parishes weevils were abundant wherever cotton was planted.

"In Texas late fall conditions were favorable for weevil multiplication. Growth of the cotton plants continued with the fairly mild weather and frost came much later than on the average. An increase in weevil population was noted late in the season.

"In Mississippi weevils were unusually abundant throughout the state except for local areas in the overflowed district where no cotton was planted.

"In Alabama weevils were very abundant throughout the southern half of the state.

"Except in extreme northern Georgia weevils were fairly abundant in that state with most districts showing considerably more than several years."

FINANCIAL REVIEW OF WEEK'S TRADING

New York January 14.—(AP)—Stiffening of the rates on time money and bankers' acceptance was the most significant development of the week's financial markets. It immediately aroused fears of a tightening of credit on securities collateral, which were reflected in a decline in stock prices and an easier undertone in the bond market.

Stability of the call money rate is expected to result, however, from the new federal reserve policy of adjusting the reserve position of the New York banks twice a week instead of once as heretofore. This is expected to result in banks maintaining their reserves at a uniformly high level instead of permitting them to run early in the week, and then build them up in the last few days by calling loans.

The large increase in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation last month, the continuing heavy inquiry for railroad equipment and the increased activity of the automotive industry all helped to offset the adverse money market developments.

While both the industrials and railroad averages lost ground during the week, a number of special issues showed independent strength, and prices generally moved within what Wall street describes as a "trading area." There were a few sweeping advances and a few sharp breaks, but the general list seemed to back and fill without making much headway in either direction.

Commodity prices also drifted lower, but the losses were small.

Heavy imports of gold from Canada, where the American dollar is at a premium, attracted attention in foreign exchange markets, which held fairly steady.

News, Views And Reviews

Cotton Letters.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, January 14.—The market lacks new influences, and the lull in trading for the past week continues. There are no surplus stocks of goods anywhere, and present curtailment may not be as bearish as first thought, as it is laying foundation for increased activities later on. On the other hand there is no scarcity of spot cotton, and reports from the interior indicate holders weakening in the basis. There is no outside buying, the trade buying fixing price on old call orders, holding the market at the present level.

Liverpool futures are due on Monday: January 10.12; March 10.11.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, January 14.—In today's cotton market prices were marked down slightly but the tone was quite steady with the customary policy of trade buying on easiness absorbing sales.

A report that curtailment of 20 per cent by manufacturers of fine cotton goods in New England and the south until October 1, 1928, or the claim that 125,000 to 150,000 looms will be affected, gave more color to curtailment plans which have been so continuously discussed for some time. Market rallies are likely to result more from an oversold condition than anything else. Rallies of this kind are quite likely at any time as a result of the trade's steady absorption of cotton of the sales.

We do not anticipate rapid price movement in the immediate future but we believe it is well to buy on easiness in the expectation of rallies developing which would afford profitable liquidation.

March Liverpool due 10.11.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, January 14.—The cotton market was disturbed at the start by a number of curtailment reports emanating from the textile institute or some of its connections and sold off 10 to 15 points during the first half hour.

The downward tendency was checked by a report from Washington that the bureau of entomology would issue a statement on weevil hibernation after the close of the market. Short selling and liquidation immediately let up and market rallied to specialties. Increased prices meant decreased activity, however, as has been the case almost since the new year started, and on a combination of profit-taking and professional selling the market hesitated and then weakened considerably, the severest declines being registered in the market leaders and active specialties.

Industrial averages were off 1¼ points on the day, while standard rails gave way only 1-5 of a point on the average. The technical position of the better rails has apparently not been weakened by sales at high prices to speculative holders as has been the case with a large proportion of the industrials.

The market continues to ignore persistently the favorable trade reviews which express confidence in the business outlook and point to the continuing recovery in iron and steel. Reports of an impending rise in the federal reserve rediscount rate, while they have become an accompaniment to every recession of a point or two, seemed to have more substantial foundation this time than usually.

The Day in Finance

Wall Street Still Wonders Why Steel Common Was Sold in Volume, Following the Splendid Report Made Tuesday.

New York, January 14.—Speculative Wall street is still seeking an explanation of what happened in the stock market last Tuesday. Many financial and industrial leaders frankly admitted in their year-end statements that 1928 started with the level of general trade considerably below that for the corresponding period of 1927. Despite conditions brought about by hand-to-mouth buying the steel trade is still considered a good barometer of general business. Throughout most of 1927 the steel corporation reported monthly decreases in unfilled orders compared with the previous month. This past Tuesday the company unexpectedly reported one of the largest monthly increases in unfilled orders in its history. With such an encouraging sign of improvement in general trade last Tuesday's unfilled orders statement of the steel corporation should have brought forth heavy buying of steel common in particular and stocks in general. Instead the reverse was true. The unexpectedly favorable steel corporation statement was immediately followed by a flood of selling in the stock market.

From the carloadings statements published this week for the whole of 1927 it is plain that in the early months of last year general trade began to drop below the corresponding period of 1926 and continued to do so until the end of the year. On the other hand the average price of 50 representative stocks advanced from the 1927 low of 135.82, made in January, to a new high for all time of 185.47, made in October, this gain for 1927 of $49.65 a share in the average price of 50 representative stocks coming on top of six years of advancing prices.

Trend of General Trade Ignored.

In brief it is now plain that the trend of general trade in 1927 was ignored by the stock market. From what happened in the stock market last Tuesday it is possible that 1928 may again see the stock market ignoring general trade.

In well-informed banking circles throughout the country it is no secret that the stock market ignored general trade conditions last year because stock marketwise the abundance of easy money outweighed the slowing down in general trade; that easy money was partly brought about by the reduction in federal reserve rediscount rate to help Secretary Mellon to refund over $5,000,000,000 Liberty bonds and also to help foreign countries to float loans here to be used partly in buying gold. Bankers here call what was done by the federal reserve to bring about a lower rediscount rate to make money easy to help along government refunding and gold exports good central banking, the kind the Bank of England was able to do before the war.

In well-informed banking circles here it is taken for granted that federal reserve officials knew that stock market speculation would be encouraged because of the reduction in the rediscount rate of the 12 federal reserve banks brought about to help along very heavy government refunding and gold exports. Bankers here, however, feel that the federal reserve officials ignored the harm that might be done in encouraging stock market speculation through easy money because of the overshadowing importance of the government refunding and gold exports.

Situation Could Be Handled.

In well-informed Wall street banking circles it was pointed out this week that in ignoring the encouragement that would be given to stock market speculation by helping to bring about easy money federal reserve officials probably reasoned that that situation could be handled after the heavy government refunding and desired gold exports had been completed.

There is no mistaking the fact that the speculation of the past year in the stock market helped along by easy money has been used for the purpose of distributing stocks.

The big outside public got out of the stock market in March of 1926 over the scare at the high level to which brokers' loans had then climbed and did not come back into the stock market until last year. The increase of $1,200,000,000 which occurred in brokers' loans last year, however, shows to what extent the public did come back into the stock market and to what extent demands of stocks was made possible through the passing of stocks from strong to comparatively weak hands.

Cause of 1926 Break.

It was the passing of stocks from strong to comparatively weak hands that brought about the high level of brokers' loans existing in March, of 1926, resulted in the violent break in the stock market with the brokers' loans situation becoming temporarily corrected. The level of brokers' loans at this week's new high makes the high of 1926 appear very low.

Within the past fortnight warnings have been sounded against the high level of bank credit being used in the investment market and in loans secured by stock exchange collateral by such recognized authorities as President Mitchell, of the National City bank; Benjamin Anderson, of the Chase National; Governor Seay, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and others. It is possible that brokers' loans may go higher before there is any sustained downward swing. On the other hand the heavy selling that occurred in the stock market last Tuesday on the unexpectedly favorable United States Steel corporation unfilled order tonnage statement with selling resumed the next day when call money dropped from 4 1-2 per cent to 4 per cent, indicates that some large holders of stocks at least are using good news for distribution of stocks.

A reduction in brokers' loans might be brought about by the federal reserve retracing the steps taken last year in lowering the rediscount rate to help along heavy government refunding and gold exports. Such results might be brought about by those who in the past year have displayed remarkable leadership in the stock market. Agitation by the farm bloc at Washington which made its appearance this week might lead to a readjustment of brokers' loans. Again readjustment may come through unexpected unfavorable news. It was the adverse Van Sweringen decision that brought about the readjustment of March, 1926.

Dr. Russell said that 30,000 ministers had applied to national and state league headquarters throughout the nation for material on which to base their Sunday sermons and for Sunday school use. On Monday, church bells will be rung for eight minutes, beginning at noon, one minute for each year the national dry amendment has been in force.

Denverite Asks Dancing Music At Burial Rite

Denver, Col., January 14.—(United News.)—A request that lively music be played in his funeral procession and that bronze figures of a dancing couple be placed on his tombstone was included in the will of Frank C. Cook, manufacturer of dance floor wax.

No cut flowers are to be used at the funeral, the will ordered, because they fade quickly. "Music on the march to the cemetery shall be handled by George Roy, musician, and shall not be of a solemn dirge nature," the will said. "At the grave, solemn music may be played during the burial services, but when the funeral party leaves the grave, I want lively airs to be played."

Cook left an estate of $50,000.

TWO BROTHERS BLAME LIQUOR FOR ROBBERY

Galway, Irish Free State, January 14.—(AP)—Two brothers, each condemned to a year imprisonment at hard labor for armed robbery, pleaded that they committed the crime under the influence of "bootleg" liquor.

It was stated in court that entire villages along the Galway coast had gone half mad recently from liquor washed ashore in drums from a wrecked rum-runner bound for America.

COTTON GOODS MEN TO CUT PRODUCTION

New Bedford, Mass., January 14.—(AP)—Radical curtailment of production was announced today as the definite policy of the fine goods section of the cotton industry and will be inaugurated at once by fine cotton cloth mills in New England and in the south, the announcement was made by Andrew Raeburn, newly chosen president of the Fine Cotton Goods Exchange, having its headquarters here.

It is expected that nearly every fine goods mill in the United States will be included in the movement which aims to eliminate the surplus production that has been glutting the fine goods market and demoralizing values throughout distributing channels. The plan adopted proposes to limit all fine goods plants to an output of not more than 80 per cent of normal for the period extending from the present to October 1, 1928.

Several New Bedford plants have been curtailing more than 20 per cent for weeks due to adverse market conditions.

The matter has been under consideration for some time, both producers and distributors of fine cotton goods urging substantial curtailment of output as the only hope of stabilizing market and employment conditions in the industry. Following a meeting of the fine cotton goods exchange today, Mr. Raeburn issued this statement:

"At a largely attended meeting of the fine cotton goods exchange, held in New Bedford today, the members concluded unanimously to adopt the policy of instituting in their individual establishments a curtailment of production; this curtailment to amount to not less than 20 per cent, to start immediately and to be continued until October 1, 1928."

"In the plan of curtailment," said Mr. Aeburn, "it is our intent to operate in accordance with law. The mills are satisfied that any action so far taken or that may be taken, will not be open to criticism from a legal standpoint.

"The conclusion reached follows along the lines of the program adopted by two groups of mills located both in the north and south, namely the narrow sheeting and print cloth groups, who have already put into effect a somewhat similar plan of balancing production with consumption.

"The fine goods mills, both in the north and south have felt the need for budgeting their production, also. The decision reached is the initial effort along these lines."

Voters' League Adopts Program For 1928 Work

Announcement of the 1928 program of the Georgia League of Women Voters is made in the current issue, published Saturday, of "The Pilgrim," official organ of the league. The announcement comes almost coincidental with the annual two-day meeting of the Atlanta League of Women Voters held Wednesday and Thursday.

Objective of the league, as contained in the announcement, is to advocate "informed, intelligent and reasonable citizenship, and to promote improved living conditions and higher political ideals."

The state organization offers to its local leagues and members-at-large the following:

1. Speakers for special occasions.
2. Citizenship schools.
3. A monthly publication covering subjects of political and social interest.
4. Programs for monthly league meetings.
5. Suggestions for solving special local problems of government.

In addition an outline of study is indicated under the following heads:

1. Advocacy of Health—(a), infancy and maternity aid; (b), public health nursing; (c), enforcement of the Ellis health law; (d), study of social hygiene.

2. Education—(a), compulsory education laws; (b), county library bill; (c), permissive kindergarten bill; (d), children's bills.

3. Community Improvement—(a), legal status of women; (b), women in industry; (c), living costs; (d), local laws and their administration.

Since the legislature does not meet during the current year, the league will ask its members to devote much time to a study of the foregoing subjects, so as to be prepared to sponsor a definite program next year.

The radio programs being broadcast by the national league from Washington each Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock, central time, are attracting much attention, it is said, and are serving as an additional educational medium.

Textile Mills.

Gastonia, N. C., January 14.—The common stocks of textile mills were unchanged in price during the past week and particularly in the North Carolina group. The shares of South Carolina mills were more active, but no material changes took place in the bid and asked price.

The average in the bid price of 25 most active common stocks closed for the week at 112.28 per share, according to the weekly review of R. S. Dickson & Co.

Practically the entire list of dividend preferred shares have been in strong demand for the past several weeks with offerings scarce and substantial advances recorded in the better grade issues.

Keely Company

Announces First Showing of Cheney Bros.' Celebrated Silk Prints for Spring

Every Design We Show Is Exclusive With Us in Atlanta, and a New 1928 Pattern

Printed Silks! That's the thing for the budding Spring season. No less important authority than Dame Fashion has decreed it! And, as if feeling called upon to support her claim for its charm and beauty in the manipulation of the mode, she calls attention to the vast scope of interesting and characteristic symbols employed. There are tiny florals in all-over composition; poster florals in bold relief on contrasting grounds; there are tiny checks and appealing plaids; there are conventional and conservative creations of modern conception.

A very special pattern of unusual design is featured in four distinct combinations of colors. Description is impossible. Ask to see it. The colors of the new prints are either gorgeously deep and rich or petal-like in appeal. And, speaking of colors, they surpass the range of the imagination.

Keely's first showing of Cheney's Printed Silks for Spring will be held in our silk section Monday. It is a display of the newest Crepes de Chine, Flat Crepes and Radiums from this, one of the foremost silk weavers and printers of the country. We cordially invite you to attend this showing, study the various designs, and note the great variety of color combinations. In each piece offered (an exclusive Keely pattern) you will find only enough yardage for four dresses, assuring you that any pattern you may select cannot be promiscuously duplicated.

A PRACTICAL PRAYER—Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man, preserve me from the violent man.—Psalm 140:1.

PRAYER—We rejoice to know, Lord, that Thou canst make even our enemies to be at peace with us.

THE MONEY SHARK EVIL.

There are few greater evils rampant in Atlanta today than the illegal loan shark, or salary buyer. His continued existence is a disgrace to the city and a direct violation of the laws of the state.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce cannot be too highly commended for its vigorous campaign to wipe out the cancer of the usurious salary buyer and loan shark.

The efforts of this civic body towards eliminating the damnable parasites who bleed white the struggling, necessitous small borrower should be strengthened by the full power of every organization, corporation and individual who feels the touch of civic pride, or even mere selfish interest in the well-being of the community.

The senior organization is likewise to be heartily praised for its wholehearted support of the junior chamber in this campaign.

It is only by taking advantage of ignorance as to the laws of the state, on the part both of the borrower and his employer, that the salary buyer is able to pursue his nefarious business in Georgia. It is only by the unwitting aid of his victims and their employers that he is able to continue his illegal operations, to contravene the direct purpose of the laws of the state and to commit, in every transaction, a crime which is punishable by fine and imprisonment, as well as by forfeiture of both interest and principal of the money involved.

The junior chamber has just given wide distribution to a pamphlet prepared by J. L. R. Boyd, general counsel of the Atlanta Legal Aid society, which will do much toward the permanent scotching of these financial vampires of the community. The publicity involved in this distribution should familiarize every employer with the law on the matter and should end forever the unwitting partnership with loan sharks which many employers have accepted.

"The arbitrary penalty by the employer of suspending employees on account of wage claims sustains rather than discourages the unlawful practice and defeats the new policy of the law," Mr. Boyd points out.

The pamphlet does not undertake to arouse sentiment or to retell individual tragedies caused by the heartless bleeding of the loan sharks' victims. It is not written in the phraseology of the emotionalist or couched in the language of the irresponsible "reformer."

It is a carefully prepared, analytical, legal summary of the laws of the state dealing with the situation and definitely expounds the legal methods which must be followed if the evil is to be scotched.

Most striking of all the information contained, perhaps, is the declaration that the employer of the salary buyer's victim may refuse to honor the assignment of wages and may enter a plea of usury against the holder of the paper. In fact, the booklet clearly shows that when employers do not follow this course, but discharge workers who are caught in the tentacles of the usurious loan agent, or otherwise aid in the enforced collection of illegal debts, they are working directly into the hands of the salary buyers and are violating the full spirit and intent of the law of the state.

Citing a recent decision by Judge Bell, of the Fulton superior court, the pamphlet says:

"It is always permissible to show that the paper is but a cover for usury, penalty, forfeiture or other illegal advantages, for if the law did not sedulously disregard forms and seek for substance, nothing would be easier than the evasion by giving innocent names to prohibit acts."

The pamphlet shows that it is, by means of constantly repeated transactions involving the same loan, common practice for these salary buyers to exact interest from their victims at the rate of 20 per cent per month, or 240 per cent per annum, whereas the law of the state expressly forbids, on any loan, interest greater than 3½ per cent per month.

Employers should refuse to honor usurious salary assignments when presented by professional salary buyers. By such refusal, and by entering a charge of usury if the case is taken to the courts, they can quickly and effectively end the ravages of the loan shark among the small borrowers of Atlanta.

For, with proper legal advice, it is easy, in almost every such case, to prove usury and the penalties prescribed under the law are such that the salary buyer will promptly be put out of business.

Those penalties include forfeiture not only of the interest involved, but of the principal also. They also carry the possibility of conviction of a misdemeanor, with possible fine of $500 and jail sentence of six months.

It is up to the larger employers of the city to decide whether or not the salary buyer, with his iniquitous usury practice, shall be estopped from prosecuting his nefarious trade among the wage earners of Atlanta.

VOTING IN THE SOUTH.

A few nights ago in a New York city assembly charts were shown to demonstrate how small a proportion of the adults of the national citizenship qualify and vote in our most vital elections.

There have been elections in which the president, vice president, a third of the senate and all of the house of representatives were to be chosen, and in which less than half of the possible voters went to the polls and 27 per cent of them returned a great majority for the presidential electors of one of the major parties.

The showing that was made of how small a percentage of adults vote in the southern states was amazing to those who do not understand the character of our populations and the qualifications required of voters, or the prevailing fact that there are few districts in the southern states where two-party politics is active. The consequence is that those uninformed people readily credit the charge that the southern people nullify the federal suffrage amendments of the constitution and intimidate millions of negro voters from going to the polls.

The obtrusive fact was shown, for instance, that in Georgia over 500,000 colored adults are "disfranchised" and over 700,000 white adults are not accounted for in any of our election returns. But our kind northern critics do not speak of them as "disfranchised," but simply as indifferent slackers.

In the face of those facts all of our "white supremacy" justifications lose their appealing force. We appear to be people who take little to heart our obligations as electors, charged with the conduct of our public affairs and the personnel of our administrators. And few of our best leaders do not seem to sense how much of moral and civic influence we southern people lose by our indifference to our electoral privileges and duties.

It is probably too late to stir up the lazy patriotism of the present-day generation, but there is a high and strong appeal to our educators to bring forth the next generation fully instructed in and devoted to its civic obligations.

TO CENTRALIZE EDUCATION.

Four bills have been submitted in congress thus early in its session to provide for the centralization of education in this country. The purposes to be accomplished are stated succinctly in the title of one of them, to wit:

"To create a department of education, to authorize appropriations for the conduct of said department, to authorize the appropriation of mney to encourage the states in the promotion and support of education, and for other purposes," including a secretary of education to sit in the cabinet of the president.

Strangely enough two of the bills are sponsored by southern democrats. The general assumption has always been that democrats, and especially southern democrats, are the natural born enemies of federal centralization and bureaucracy. Yet these proposals that they are god-fathering are directly aimed at just those effects.

One of the swelling complaints of the era is against the usurpations of power by federal departments and independent commissions. As one of the interstate commerce commissioners confessed before a congress committee recently, that body assumes to exercise the functions of all three departments of our government—legislative, judicial and executive. That was an amazing and vividly illuminating statement of how far bureaucracy is capturing power over the people.

It is not our concern here to argue for or against the wisdom and practicality of a federal department of education with a cabinet secretary at its head.

Our concern is to argue that when the proposal comes to issue that the congress shall carefully consider all its implications and thoroughly protect the rights of the states and the people over this great field of popular education.

The recent event where an unidentified subordinate of the agriculture department, by a dozen words, caused the cotton producers of the south to lose hundreds of millions of dollars within four market hours of a single day, should warn all wise statesmen to beware of too much bureaucracy in government.

PLAYING TARIFF TAG.

The spectators in the gallery of the federal senate recently enjoyed a game of playing tag with the tariff on the floor of that chamber.

The chase, peculiarly enough, was not started by "those pesky free trade democrats," but the view-halloo was sounded in a resolution sponsored by a republican senator from South Dakota. However, Senator McMaster is classified by his colleagues as one of the "republican reds," which means that he is an insurgent against the inherent right of the industrial east to sweat and starve the agricultural west through the operations of a "turkey and buzzard" tariff.

The McMaster resolution that opened the "you're it" rodeo reads—

"Resolved, that the United States senate favors an immediate lowering of tariff schedules, and tariff legislation embodying lowered schedules should be considered and enacted during the present session of congress."

In advocacy of his proposition the South Dakota senator proceeded to demonstrate, by examples and effects, how the tariff-armored "trusts" are gouging the farmers of the nation by reason of the outrageous protective tariff rates girding them, and by their ability in consequence to fix the prices for manufactured goods "in secret and behind closed doors."

For his sharp charges against the special privileges, bounties and extortions of the tariff-clad industrial barons, he drew the backing of leading democrats, of course, and some leading republicans. It was made evident that should the resolution receive the practically solid support of the democratic senators, plus the western farm bloc republican senators, it will be adopted.

But it also became evident that the main issue involved—"an immediate lowering of tariff schedules"—will not receive the support of either house of congress.

Nothing is plainer today in politics and business than that the tariff is no longer a partisan issue.

All democrats are not for "free trade," or even for an open competitive system of tariff schedules; and all the republicans are not in favor of trust-breeding protective schedules, such as were embodied in the McKinley, Dingley, Payne-Aldrich and present Fordney-McCumber acts.

The vastness of our country, the heterogeneity of its population, and the interdependence of regional industries, are forcing tariff legislation into the channels of non-partisan and scientific adjustments.

What the people at large want, and the only legislation that will satisfy them, is that which will equalize protection and burdens, whether the tariff rates be high or low. If congress will adopt that course it will dehorn the tariff as a political issue and constant irritation.

GIVE THEM THE BOOT.

Last week there was a lively and timely debate in the house of congress in which the subject of aliens unlawfully in the United States was discussed.

That is a matter of vital importance to the welfare of our lawful population and to the stability of our institutions, social and political.

No alien who is unlawfully in this country should be permitted to remain longer than he can be captured and deported. The very fact that he has sneaked or bribed his way in is prima facie proof of his lawless character. And it is amazing to hear it officially stated in open congress that there are 1,200,000 such characters now here who are subject to deportation to the countries from which they came; and that at the present rate 250,000 such illegal entries are made annually.

It has been officially established by immigration investigations and by court records, that a great number of those in-sneaked aliens are communists, anarchists, syndicalists, recruits for the I. W. W., and often are professional gun men, rum-runners and bootleggers.

The average cost of deporting one of these outlaws is $87 and it often costs more than that to keep one of them in jail thirty days awaiting trial for some crime. One of them with a dynamite bomb has more than once caused more losses of property than the cost of deporting a regiment of them.

Congressman Oliver, of Alabama, declared the truth when he said that the true remedy for the affliction is to require the registration of all aliens and the prompt deportation of every one of them who is not lawfully here.

Congressman Johnson, of Washington state, who is chairman of the house committee on immigration, agrees to that proposition and demands that the department of labor be given sufficient money to apply the remedy. He cogently cited the recent circus case here in Atlanta, when the immigration officers rounded up 20 or 25 disreputable aliens, including shell and card gamblers, procurers, pimps and prostitutes, and to get them out of the city had to use up all their transportation fund for the balance of the year.

At least a part of the surplus in the treasury could be advantageously used to promptly and effectually sweep the nation clean of these furtive fugitives from foreign lands.

AN ACADEMIC ARMY.

Major General Johnson Hagood, too well known and esteemed in this army corps area to need an introduction, has just revealed some of the most cogent reasons why the United States should enter heartily into some workable agreement to maintain world peace.

He has written a vivid book about his experiences in the world war, in which conflict he bore an active and highly distinguished part. In his intriguing narrative he describes the scandalous unpreparedness of the country, and especially its regular army establishment, for the war operations into which we were eventually forced.

The essentially serious feature of General Hagood's book is his exposure of the academic aberrations of the general staff of the army for all the years between the Spanish-American war and our hotly provoked plunge into the world war. The plan of a general staff that was worked up after the fracas with Spain was intended to give the nation a central body of military experts, with the genius and efficiency to keep the country well fitted for any war emergency arising from any quarter.

The plan was eminently practicable, but the personnel to which it was entrusted became priggish, punkish and Pandora-plagued by brawling and backcapping theorists.

Having the chivalry and courtesy of his South Carolina breed, General Hagood does not, with naked brutality, charge that the general staff was lacking in brains, but says "perhaps it would be fairer to say lack of genius." But at that the result was the same, for he shows that when the call came for us to enter the war, "all the plans of the general staff, which had cost the nations tens of millions, fell to pieces like a house of cards."

This competent and candid soldier-critic shows how we spent a billion dollars on airplanes "without getting a single combat plane to the front."

Another billion went for artillery that never fired a hostile shot.

With five times as much motor transportation as all the rest of the world, we did not get a wheel of it over to France.

Our boys were rushed into the trenches without the slightest knowledge how to handle rifles or gas masks.

And, with keen and scarifying sarcasm, General Hagood remarks: "They had been taught how to sing, but not how to shoot!"

Are those not trumpeting arguments why we should hunt the bomb-proof refuge of a world peace pact?

Ordinarily we would look to see General Hagood court-martialed and cashiered for such scalding criticisms of general staff incompetencies. But no such publicity is to be accorded to him. The army academicians are content to have him go away off and sit down in his new billet in the Philippines!

About three weeks after Christmas the elevator man and the janitor and office boy begin to sport new ties. Wonder where they come from?

The Oxford dictionary is being marketed and is claimed to be the final dictionary of the English language. Just for that we will coin an anti-English word: Billthompson.

We may as well be prepared to understand that the noise you will hear over the radio when the politicians take the air will not be a lack of party harmony but static.

Abraham Walkerwitz could not prevail upon a judge in New York city to drop the last syllable of his name, so the Rumanian will continue to have his witz about him.

Philadelphia has just "thrown open to the public" a $1,500,000 jail. We used to put people in jail for a debt and now we go in debt for a jail.

Democratic woman voters assembled at Washington make it plain that the party should discard the grand old jackass as a party emblem and adopt the camel.

If the pedestrians who were knocked down by autos last year were laid end to end it would have been easier to run over them.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Big Guns and High Lights of the Jackson Day Dinner in Washington.

Washington, January 14.—(Special.)—The Jackson day dinner of the national democrats was the largest and most enthusiastic of any of the like functions that I have attended here in the capital in the half century past. During the speaking hours I sat immediately above the toastmaster and speakers in order to look into the listeners' faces and gather as much as possible their visible reactions to what was being said to them.

One thing was distinctly in evidence. That was the wish and will to harmony and eagerness to go vigorously into battle for a national democratic victory. The disposition was dominant to "throw out" any one who sounded a discord or tried to start any old sores or wounds to running again.

Chairman Clem Shaver acted with canny diplomacy in insisting upon holding the dinner and assembling the outstanding democrats of all the states for an interchange of sentiments and to receive a common inspiration. Those who doubted the wisdom of his plan and dreaded what might happen are now praising Shaver's strategy and are greatly heartened by what they saw and heard on the critical and momentous occasion.

Hon. John W. Davis, our presidential candidate four years ago and thereby yet the titular head of the party, presided over the function with that rare grace, tact and savoir faire of which he is a past-master.

The fifteen hundred auditors presented an impressive assembly of the militant spirits of the party. The spirit of cordinlity and comradeship ruled the array and not a "rough house" word was spoken or gesture made. If the harmony of the night can prevail in the ranks during the days of battle, then the souls of Jefferson and Jackson are leading us toward a great victory.

* * * *

A Jam of Presidential Logs.

The salient feature of the affair was the jam of presidential logs on the bosom of the party current. In that gathering there was no room for talk about the democrats lacking timber for the highest offices in the nation. With Reed, Ritchie, Walsh, Woollen, Robinson, George, Barkley, Dan Moody, McAdoo, and, foremost of all, Governor Al Smith by proxy and letter bearing a "special delivery" stamp, there could be no suggestion of candidatorial poverty.

The main question with all present was that of availability—of ability to administer the presidency and winning appeal to the admiration and trust of the voters.

On that line, of course, there was ample opportunity for differences of opinion and the discussions took in the personal, political and popular points of every possible candidate who had a booster on the field. And, of course, no one man had the field all to himself.

Smith Is Out in Front.

It would misrepresent the situation to say that any man in the party now shows ahead of Governor Smith. His candidacy is so conspicuous that talk about his not having yet announced it personally is a joke. The fact is that right now it is "Smith against the field." If, in the field, there is any horse that can outgame him on the nomination track, no one is able now to identify him. But there are many seasoned race track judges who believe there is such a horse and that he will rush out of the ruck at the opportune moment.

The Conspicuous Credal Speech.

The most conspicuous and captivating speech of the occasion was made by Claude Bowers, editor of the New York Evening World. Bowers is a Hoosier-born and Hoosier-trained democrat. He is only 49 years old, but he was brought up in the atmosphere that was heavily charged with the democracy of Hendricks, McDonald, Voorhees, Turpie and Claude Matthews. He worked on leading democratic newspapers in Indianapolis, Terre Haute and Fort Wayne and served as secretary to Senator John W. Kern, one of the ablest democrats of his generation. He is historian of the antagonistic political philosophies of Jefferson and Hamilton and of the political battles of the Jacksonian period.

The speech by Bowers was rich in content, clear as spring water in its democratic philosophies and electric in its suggestions of party opportunity and forthcoming strategy. It was a speech that attained the dignity of a keynote and might well be used in every state as a convincing and converting campaign document.

* * * *

Ritchie Hurled a Hand Grenade.

The nearest the occasion came to being disrupted was when Governor Ritchie transgressed the etiquette of the entente cordiale by hurling his hand grenade, loaded with anti-prohibition brass tacks and broken glass!

Everyone seemingly straightened up and drew in their breaths as he vehemently proclaimed the doctrine of local option as the righteous American and democratic one to govern in dealing with the liquor problem.

The instant reaction from the audience demonstrated that the vast room held many men and some women who were in accord with his views. They made a strong applauding noise. But from my observation post I could easily see that the majority of his hearers withheld their hands. The moment seemed charged with peril to the spirit of harmony.

Toastmaster John W. Davis, at the conclusion of the governor's speech, with superb tactfulness cleared the atmosphere and deftly turned the current of the proceedings back into the channel of concord and non-controversial oratory.

* * * *

Senator Reed Reaches High C.

Although it was nearing 2 o'clock in the morning before the appeals of the banqueters could induce the toastmaster to turn Senator Reed loose upon them, the doughty Missourian came to the front with his battleax ground to a razor edge. He had been kept in reserve to hold the audience in their seats while lesser actors did their small stuff and sputtered out of the scene.

Senator Reed at once swung at the responsible heads of the republican party and arraigned them for the monumental malfeasances against the people with which their records reek and stink. As he threw his spotlight upon their salient political offenses and personal crimes the heaven-appealing need for governmental reform at the hands of an honest party of the people became the meteor-flame of the night.

The verdict all around was that the indictment was matchless and unanswerable, and regret was general that Senator Reed, by his very independence of views and actions, has made himself persona non grata to such large and powerful elements of the party.

The Party Trek to the South.

The energy and liberality with which the Texans bid for the convention and won it excited surprise and admiration. Many of the committee members who really wanted the convention to sit somewhere in the midwest, or at San Francisco, eventually voted for Houston because of its strong financial bid and because they can now claim that they ardently desired to reward the south for all its past political loyalties.

So far, so good; but the southern democrats are going to demand more justice and a larger reward.

The action of the Georgians in presenting Senator George to the democrats of the nation as a fit and opportune, and honest-to-the-finish, candidate for the presidential nomination, is stirring more than casual concern to the advocates of Smith, Reed, Ritchie and others outside the south. It is commonly and freely agreed that if Georgia can line up the southern states solidly behind Senator George they can put him over, for the whole central west would finally block to him to a man!

NEW YORK SKYLINES

The Best and the Wost About Manhattan; Chat About Notable New Yorkers; The New Flavors In Lipstick.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Copyright, 1928, for the Constitution.)

New York, January 14.—An acquaintance who recently added himself to the population was philosophizing about New York's size as being accountable for the worst and the best things about the city.

In his opinion the worst thing is the complete disregard for the great mass of people about him natural to the resident of New York. Physical progress is a matter of pushing through crowds. A man stands in line to buy tickets, make a telephone call, enter a car. He stands helpless in the crowd, whether traveling vertically in elevators or horizontally afoot, in bus or train. When fresh and happy he tolerates his fellow men. When weary he falls into a mood for massacre.

"But the best thing about the town," said this observer, "is the mental freedom due to the disregard of the mass. In the small town I came from nobody is his own master. If a man is caught reading a book he is almost sure to be placed on the library board. If he is a good substantial citizen he runs the risk of being placed on the board of sinking fund trustees. If he is solidly on the way to business prosperity his progress is impeded by envious neighbors, who draft him into the chairmanship of a drive for the community chest.

"The small city pressure is terrific, and there is no sure way of getting out from under. If a man declines to surrender a free evening he is wanting in public spirit. If he resigns from a couple of clubs he is suspected of being unable to afford the money and his business suffers."

MAJOR PUTNAM CARRIES ON.

A figure compact and distinguished, stepping along Fifth avenue in a manner suggesting military experience, although the war he fought in ended more than 60 years ago.

It's Major George Haven Putnam, the publisher, moving south on foot from his home in patrician Sutton place to his office about a mile away. The hour is only 8:30 o'clock in the morning, and Fifth avenue has not yet begun to hum, for the day is bitter cold and the youngsters are late in rising.

Sixty-four years ago Major Putnam, now 71, was a military prisoner in Libby prison. Since then he has published thousands of books, including his own books of memories of war, youth and publishing. He has contributed to three encyclopedias, founded the English-speaking league in America and upheld the tradition of his early American ancestry.

And the major, schooled at The Sorbonne and the University of Gottingen, has already booked passage on the Homeric for April 14, when he will set out on his 62d voyage across the Atlantic ocean.

RUINED BY CONFORMITY.

The old houses with tearoom basements, open fireplaces which sometimes worked and studio and attic for residence and art are being razed in groups. In their place are rising apartment houses without attraction for such individualists as made the old Greenwich Village the most individual of all communities composing this metropolis.

These new apartment houses with their fancy, pretentious entrances, their cramped rooms made to look as bright and elegant as possible, all stand for a standard of respectability—not moral, but moneyed.

Nobody moving in here will brag as did old-time villagers, because his material possessions are so meagre that he simply borrowed the grocer's push-cart and moved his entire household in it.

* * * *

A TAMMANY ARISTOCRAT.

Recently there was talk of Tammany Hall moving uptown. This started sarcastic remarks that Tammany was getting high-hat. Quickly it was announced that Tammany had no intention of forsaking Fourteenth street, and was only going to sell the old building there and erect a new one near by.

Widespread and fixed is the popular impression of Tammany as a political organization of the common people. Comparatively few know that the origin of this municipal bulwark of the democratic party was aristocratic, and that in its councils today there remain a few men who inherit the old tradition.

One of these is Supreme Court Justice Thomas C. T. Crain. His father was in the legislature, his grandfather was speaker in the assembly. Judge Crain was schooled in Milan, where his father was then United States consul. The judge is a vestryman in old Trinity church. He has a sensitive, almost delicate face. Four nights a week he is addressing civic associations and societies in graceful, idealistic sentences. On the way to the court, almost every morning he visits a public school and smiles on the children, who will grow up with the memory of this benignant figure of sixty-eight years as their conception of a judge.

LIPSTICK? WHAT FLAVOR, PLEASE.

Speaking of one's taste in girls, that may become more than a figure of speech. It's said that lipsticks in cherry, strawberry, pomegranate and peach flavors are subjects of experiment in New York laboratories, where chemists concoct, in a state of perpetual fragrance, the myriad powders, perfumes and pastes that make girlhood even more alluring than it naturally is.

The thing is easy, sensible and not to be whiffed at, say the chemists. They propose a literal interpretation for poets' whimsies. Why not cherry ripe lips, lips like crimson berries, and what Austin Dobson called "the red pomegranate of thy perfect mouth." Thus a youth's characterization of a girl as a "peach" may have subtle implications.

Flavors now proposed do not include lemon, ginger, lime, cinnamon or chocolate. These, it is believed, would not be popular. And raspberry is not contemplated.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

Wanted! A Foreign Policy

One can only imagine what an absurd picture the United States must present to the other nations today in its attitude toward the outside world. After refusing to enter the League of Nations, and, by impossible conditions which we made for entrance, practically refusing to enter the world court, we called a conference for the purpose of disarmament. To this conference we sent professional naval representatives, which made it a foregone conclusion that there would be no agreements for a reduction of our navy. Our administration followed this peaceful gesture by presenting to congress a billion-dollar naval program. With this program as a background we have now made overtures to France and the rest of the European nations to sign a new year's resolution never to make any more war. On the front page of the same paper which carried this dove-like message is a report of the casualties in our war with Nicaragua. In the meantime, President Coolidge is packing his trunk for a trip to Havana to meet the representatives of the pan-American congress, where he is to explain to the Latin Americans the benevolent attitude of this country toward all our neighbors.

A Peaceful War.

Years ago Theodore Roosevelt, that mixed metaphor of charm and irritation, peace and pugnacity, laid down a foreign policy for this government in the sentence, "walk softly and carry a big stick." It reminds one of the current story of the old darky whose physician prescribed a diet of fried chicken, and the warning that he must keep out of the night air. "How I gwine do dat?" Nothing ought to be more apparent to thoughtful people today than that it is impossible for a nation "to walk softly and carry a big stick." What the administration seems to be attempting in reality is to talk softly while it carries on a war in Central America and prepares a billion-dollar naval program for the future.

Of course it is vehemently denied by friends of the administration that there is any war in Nicaragua. They explain that a few bandits have attacked our peaceful marines who are there for the purpose of protecting American rights. Nevertheless, you cannot explain away the fact that American marines are killing people in a foreign country with whom we are supposed to be at peace and you cannot explain away the fact to the mothers and fathers of those marines who have been killed that their sons are dead. If it is any consolation to the friends of the administration it will be readily acknowledged that it is a small war. Yes, it is a small business—an infinitely small business—for a great big nation to be engaged in.

The administration is taking pains to prove that Sandino is a terribly bad man and is an enemy to the righteous and just government of Nicaragua. Suppose that is true and he turns out to be just as bad as the administration paints him. We might just as well attempt to police the streets of London because an American citizen was held up by bandits. If there are so few of these Nicaraguan bandits and the government is so stable and righteous, why not leave the government to deal with its own bandits? General LeJeune, of the marine corps, said contemptuously, "Sandino is a little Caesar." If this be true it looks as if Uncle Sam is attempting to play the role of a little Brutus.

It will be an almost impossible task to convince the world that we did not interfere in a most unjustifiable way with the internal affairs of an independent nation. Mr. Stimson, as the personal representative of the president, posed as an arbitrator between two contending factions. He claims that both sides voluntarily agreed to the terms of peace. But Mr. Stimson was entirely too much like the gentleman who meets you in the dark and says, "Will you please help a poor fellow who has nothing but a revolver in his hand?" Mr. Stimson arranged this peace with war vessels and the marines by his side. Then he gave notice that after a certain date all who had not laid down their arms would be forcibly disarmed. Then he came home and the war continued.

Then and Now.

How vividly there comes to mind the picture of this same party which is now in power desperately fighting the proposal that we enter the League of Nations on the ground that it might necessitate the sending of some of our American boys to die in a foreign war. How sensitive some of these gentlemen were about the possibility of our boys being killed in Hedjaz. One cannot but wonder if it is any easier for an American boy to die in Nicaragua than in Hedjaz. Then as to the cause for which he dies, would it not be better to die in Hedjaz in an effort to make a peaceful world than to die in Nicaragua to preserve the investments of American bankers?

We are about to plunge into another presidential campaign with all of its political cowardice and petty ambitions for the spoils of office. Already the records of prospective candidates are being scrutinized as to their party loyalty and their views as to what per cent of alcohol should be allowed in the drinks of the nation. When one remembers that our president is to be our representative before the entire world—that his views will determine our attitude toward all the rest of the nations—that to a great extent the peace of the world in the next generation will depend upon the personality of our next president—is it not amazing that we are searching for, and demanding, a big man with big principles? The weakness of our nation today is and has been since Woodrow Wilson went out of office that we have no foreign policy. Thus we have drifted into a position where we are distrusted and even feared by the other nations of the world.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Knoxville, Tenn.

What do you think of the consistency of certain intellectuals who are always denouncing the institutions under which we all live and the religious to which the majority subscribe?

They haven't any consistency and most of them would scorn its imputation. G. K. Chesterton hits them off in "Orthodoxy." "The typical modern," he says, "will cry out that war is a waste of life and then that life is a waste of time. A Russian pessimist will denounce a policeman for killing a peasant and then prove by the highest philosophical principles that the peasant ought to have killed himself. A man denounces marriage as a lie and then denounces profligates for treating it as a lie."

Revolution is the native air of these misguided spirits. They are always busy in undermining their own mines and blowing up themselves. They attack religion and morality for trampling on human rights and then attack men for trampling on religion and morality. Meanwhile the believing world plods on its weary way, carrying them and similar social liabilities as a part of its load.

New York City.

The Bible says, if I remember the verse correctly, "If thine eye offend thee pluck it out."

I am a carnally minded man and have developed a violent temper, which I have struggled to overcome in accordance with Biblical injunctions.

Added to my difficulty is the fact that a few years ago I lost a devoted wife and shortly thereafter a most beautiful mother, and now my internal struggle is intensified by the knowledge that I was guilty of causing both of them considerable unhappiness because of my selfish temper, though I was not ungenerous in the giving of material things to either. Surely my extremity appeals to your sympathy, and I shall appreciate anything you suggest to help me with this problem.

You appear to have carried out both the letter and the spirit of your faith, therefore you are entitled to some measure of self-respect on that account. Self-villification is always more or less hazardous and its moral benefits are exceedingly doubtful. So why call yourself a "carnally minded man," especially as your reasons for doing so are by no means clear.

The point you raise about regrettable outbreaks of temper frequently crops up in my correspondence. Many who write as you do feel the sting of their remembered words the more keenly because those from whom they crave forgiveness are no longer on earth.

Yet it is well that you meditate these atonements of love. Unfulfilled ideals, still-born benevolent purposes and the will to act nobly if only the opportunity were given are not altogether lost elements in life's development.

On the contrary, they have specific values in themselves. They refine and purify the spirit which entertains them. They prepare it for a fellowship unstained by misunderstanding, petulance or infirmity.

I suggest for you a course of reading of the reconciling kind: Thackeray, for choice, and, after that greatest of Victorians, Scott's serene and comprehensive works, perused in the light of what he endured both in youth and age.

Choose a few cheerful companions whose talk is not of graves nor dusty death. Practice the religion, not of mutilation, but of consecration. Two eyes are better far than one for counsel or for fight. Jesus did not advise the plucking out of either except to avoid a still worse fate. His religion does not consist in surgical operations on the soul, but in the upbuilding of the whole man after the pattern He presents.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

What advice would you give a motherless girl who has not the right kind of a home? Her father and brother continually nag her and call her terrible names. Occasionally the father gets drunk, and unfortunately the mother is dead.

There is a professional man who loves this girl because she is good, clean and honest, and he has asked her to marry him.

Should she marry him or remain in an environment where she has to endure such evils?

Do not become this man's wife in order to escape from a demoralizing home, nor allow your gratitude to him to take the place of that love without which marriage is a mockery.

But if your heart indorses his offer accept it, then go to work and build your own home in the light of your bitter experience. The most successful marriages have often been made by couples whose prenuptial difficulties forewarned them of the necessity of good habits and mutual forbearance in behalf of domestic peace.

I express the desire of many who read this column in wishing you as a motherless girl a safe deliverance from your degrading circumstances and a wedded life of congenial service and blessedness.

The Hermitage: Home of Andrew Jackson

BY JANE SCOTT WOODRUFF

To many, the military and political aspects of Andrew Jackson, great general and president of the United States, are familiar; but it was in the domestic sphere that the true force of his character was best expressed.

In the log house which was the original Hermitage, and a part of which remains intact today, Andrew Jackson and Rachel Donelson, his wife, laid the foundations of home, and of them it may be said:

"Home is not merely four square walls
Hung with pictures bright and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Hung with shrines the heart has builded."

And it was to this same log house that the "conquering hero" returned in 1815 from his victories at New Orleans. Here, too, Aaron Burr had come in 1805 to make his famous visit.

Selected By Wife.

The present Hermitage site was selected by his wife, Rachel, in 1819, and built upon with brick made on the place, but it was only for a few years that she reigned there as mistress of the mansion.

Through a long avenue of majestic cedars whose stateliness lends a dignity not easy to describe, one gets his first impression of the Hermitage, which, thanks to the untiring efforts of those who compose the Hermitage association, stands in all its traditional and present beauty.

From the splendid Greek portico may be gathered a hint of treasures that await one within, and on entering the great hall one all but expects to see coming down the colonial stairway the beautiful Sarah Yorke Jackson, holding by the hand her little daughter, Rachel, idol of her grandfather's latter years.

Jackson's Great Loss.

It was just on the eve of his inauguration to the presidency that Andrew Jackson suffered the irreparable loss of his wife, and it is recorded that on his return from Washington it was pathetic to see this lonely man as he went first to visit his wife's tomb in the flower-decked garden, then returning to the house, he entered the front parlor where Mrs. Jackson's portrait hung and stood gazing at it long with tear-dimmed eyes. The portrait hangs there today, and is an object of reverent interest to the visitor.

With true gentleness and tact Sarah Yorke Jackson, the wife of Andrew Jackson, Jr., assumed the duties as mistress of the Hermitage, having already discharged those at the white house as the first lady of the land. We find it said of her that of all who stood close to Andrew Jackson during the remainder of his life he loved Sarah Yorke Jackson the most, for had she been his own daughter she could not have shown a more loving consideration. And of the several children born at the Hermitage the one on whom its master lavished the most affection was the little Rachel, namesake of his wife. She, in turn, felt for him a rare devotion, and nothing made her so happy as to sit near while he read or wrote, or with her tiny hand in his, to walk at his side about the house or in the grounds.

Bible-Reading Custom.

Of the various pictures penned of the intimate family life of the Hermitage, none is more beautiful than this: "Before the good-night were spoken the big Bible was laid across the general's knee as he sat in the wide hall and from it passages were read aloud, as had been his custom for many years, both in the white house and in the Hermitage. After the faithful body servant had made him comfortable for the night the family came in one by one to give him wishes of good rest. The little Rachel was the last to receive his kiss, as she was the last upon whom his dying eyes rested in recognition as he likened her to the dead love he was so soon to greet."

Such was the Hermitage of the past, and very like it was then, almost identically so, is the Hermitage of today, except there is a strange silence everywhere save for the hushed voices of many visitors who come and go.

On one side of the hall, in the same position it had occupied in Jackson's time, is a mahogany sofa of unusual beauty, and it is easy to imagine that it was here the general sat of evenings with the open Bible on his knee. Several pieces of massive furniture and some fine old portraits are in the hall. Among them are those of the master of the Hermitage, of Andrew Jackson, Jr., of Sarah Yorke Jackson, his wife, and of Rachel Jackson Lawrence. This portrait of Jackson, by Earl, is considered one of the artist's best.

Two Spacious Parlors.

The two spacious parlors are very charming with their resplendent chandeliers of sparkling crystal, many treasures in rare pieces of furniture and objects of art. Notable among these are two vases of silver luster sent to General Jackson from Russia. Of the rich old mahogany, and pier inlaid with pearl and ivory, the massive mirrors, the vases from the royal factories in Europe, the soft curtains of silken damask, the sculptured marbles and the numerous portraits from the hands of master painters, it would be impossible to give an adequate description within reasonable limits.

It would indeed be a pleasure to take our readers through many of the charming rooms, but let us content ourselves with only two or three which seem to command our interest most. Of these let us visit the one which had been the bed chamber of General Jackson and there will immediately come to mind the apartment of General Washington at Mount Vernon.

This room is just as it was the day Jackson died, the bed on which he lay, the big armchair he sat in, the silken dressing gown thrown across one of the chairs just as he had left it, on the bureau the two quaint Chinese mandarin scent bottles which had belonged to Mrs. Jackson, a curious tall leather hat box on one of the tables, a linen shirt with ruffles down the front, several pictures, one of which bears the inscription "No great government can endure without virtue in its people." Over the mantel is the portrait of his wife, on which his dying gaze rested as he clasped to his heart the little Rachel.

LaFayette's Room.

Among the most attractive of the upper rooms, the one occupied by General LaFayette during his visit to the Hermitage, is one of especial interest. Quaint beyond almost any other is the apartment in its furnishings of old mahogany, the high-canopied bed, so tall that steps were needed to get up into it; a shaving stand and mirror, and quaintest of all was the little black haircloth trunk of apparently many journeys.

But, so far as a variety of historic associations is concerned, there is no room more full of this than the great dining room, which is an apartment of state, occupying as it does one of the wings of the building. Here you may see the original dining table at which a succession of presidents were in turn entertained. There is the same massive sideboard of solid mahogany, side tables, pier table, tall clock, brasses, a large case for the preservation of the valuable Jackson-Decatur silver purchased by Andrew Jackson from the widow of Commodore Stephen Decatur and used for many years at the Hermitage. Among the portraits is the celebrated "Healy portrait," only two of which are in existence, the other being in the Louvre at Paris, this distinguished artist having been sent by Louis Phillipe to paint certain prominent Americans.

Our last visit was to the tomb in the garden where rest all that is mortal of those two who had been so closely knit in the bonds of affection, Andrew Jackson and Rachel Donelson, his dear companion and wife; while around them in death, as in life, are gathered those of their loved one to whom the Hermitage meant home.

RED CROSS MAKES A VITAL BLUNDER.

I called attention here, a short time ago, to a valuable handbook on "Swimming and Water Safety," published by the Boy Scouts of America, and particularly to the serious error that occurs in the pictures and description of Schafer's prone pressure method of resuscitation, as given in this otherwise excellent compendium. It seems to me, that as this is a vital life saving matter, it is our duty to see to it that only the correct maneuver shall be taught the public. In this Boy Scout handbook the directions and the pictures illustrating the maneuver are both wrong, for they teach the reader to place one of the subject's hands under his head. When I cited this serious mistake here I urged all Boy Scout readers of this column to make the necessary correction in their technic if they have been improperly instructed in prone-pressure resuscitation. The subject's hands should rest palms down on the ground on either side of or just above the subject's head and nothing whatever should be placed under the subject's head. The reason for this detail I explained in the former article. It gives the subject a better chance to revive, for it places the subject in a position to gain the advantage of gravity to remove any water from the breathing passages.

Now in some advertising matter of the American Red Cross is a photograph of a class of young men and young women being taught prone-pressure resuscitation by a Red Cross instructor, five teams in action, and the beautiful picture shows very clearly that the instructor has no knowledge of the vital physiological principle on which Schafer's method is based, for all five demonstrators have placed their subjects in the wrong position, with an arm under the subject's cheek. Besides this fatal error in the technic, there is another error clearly indicated in all five cases, but this second error is of minor importance and we'll waive it in view of the indictment we now bring against the American Red Cross for giving false instruction and, who dare estimate? Perhaps sacrificing many a precious life.

In thus calling public attention to the very grave blunder made by this gigantic organization I hope to inspire a few more readers to learn the simple truth about Schafer's prone-pressure method of artificial respiration—which, indeed, every boy or girl six years old should be prepared to apply in an emergency.

Once more I beg leave to print Schafer's own description of his method, and it is not impertinent to say that no Boy Scout or Red Cross officer or instructor is competent or has authority to change Schafer's technic.

Schafer's (Prone-Pressure) Artificial Respiration.

"It consists in laying the subject in the prone posture, preferably on the ground, with a thick folded garment underneath the chest and epigastrium.

"The operator puts himself athwart or at the side of the subject, facing his head and places his hands on either side over the lower part of the back (lowest ribs).

"He then slowly throws the weight of his body forward to bear upon his own arms, and thus presses upon the thorax of the subject and forces air out of the lungs.

"This being effected, he gradually relaxes the pressure by bringing his own body up again to a more erect position, but without moving the hands."

Forty Thousand Errors.

The error is the placing of the subject's hand under his face or head when the operator is attempting artificial respiration. This error has crept into the Red Cross technic just as it has crept into the technic used by Boy Scout instructors, through misunderstanding of the scientific principles involved in Schafer's prone pressure.

H. W. Gentles, chairman of the first aid and life saving instruction for the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross, tells me he has supervised the teaching of artificial respiration for several years and in that time 40,000 persons have been certified as qualified to render this emergency service. That means that this mistake I point out has been multiplied 40,000 times in Chicago alone, and when we consider that the same error has occurred in Red Cross teaching throughout the country, the enormity of it begins to be apparent.

Mr. Gentles explains that the subject's arm or hand is placed under his head or face in order to keep the nose and mouth out of the sand or wet ground. But that may be effected by simply turning the subject's face to one side, as Schafer teaches.

This error is vital because, as I explained when calling attention to it, the slight elevation of the nose and mouth tends to prevent the natural drainage of any water there may be in the "lungs" or breathing passages. Right here is where the scientific principles comes in, and the Red Cross instructors have apparently not grasped this principle. Schafer worked out his method only through scientific study, and no one is warranted in making any modification of the technic unless he can bring forward very sound scientific reasons for doing so. When the Red Cross instructors make this modification, they are hard put to it to justify the change. But Mr. Gentles maintains that large experience in teaching justifies such a modification, for, he says, the Red Cross modification is the sum total of experience of a large number of men who have been working in this field teaching students. I question this, and maintain that a teacher, no matter how great his experience, is never justified in changing a scientific practice without good scientific ground under him.

Some swimming and life saving instructors—not necessarily Red Cross instructors—have already shown the bad effects of this error in their own work. They teach that the victim rescued from submersion should first be inverted "to empty the water from his lungs," and afterward given Schafer's artificial respiration. Obviously they do not know that Schafer's posture takes care of any water there may be in the victim's chest. But they ought to know that the few seconds wasted in this foolish inverting of the victim may be the straw that turns the scales against recovery.

For these reasons I hope the American Red Cross will immediately correct this vital, fatal error.

To Charles W. Hubner

By Ernest Neal.

I've seen thy face but once; and when
Thy youth was gone, thy prime of manhood past.
But still into the hearts of men
Try courtly grace a pleasing radiance cast.
Thy frame-like stately ship approaching shore.
Rich-laden, proud, serene and old—
Seemed conscious of the spirit-wealth it bore,
More precious than Alaska's gold.

I've seen thy face but once; and yet,
No stranger thou; for many years ago
I felt thy touch—ne'er to forget—
In songs that thrilled and filled me so
No circumstance can e'er contrive
Thine image in my soul to mar.
Can time or space of light deprive
The lake that's mirror to a star?

Of Harris, Ryan, Hayne, Lanier
In classic sonnets hast thou sung—
Within each note a sigh, a tear,
For harps upon the willow hung.
Thy soul, akin to theirs, why should I wait
To find its last and loftiest dream?
My wreath accept this side the heavenly gate—
An humble bard's love and esteem.

"Repentance Is Initial Step in Man's Salvation," Says Rev. Davis

"There is joy in the presence of the angels and God, over one sinner that repenteth."

These are wonderful words. They were spoken by a wonderful man, even by one who spoke as never man spoke.

They are as wonderful today as they were when they fell from his lips.

Why are they so wonderful? Why do the angels always rejoice when one sinner repents?

The answer is simple. Many times a sinner repents a sinner is saved. Before he repents, he is a servant of sin and is under condemnation. The moment he repents his sins are all forgiven and his pardon is written in heaven.

Repentance is the inital step in salvation.

Before this step is taken he is dead in trespasses and sins and is on the danger side of the dead line.

Being without God he is without hope. The moment he repents he is on the safety side of the dead line. He has passed from darkness to light; from the kingdom of Satan into the kingdom of God's dear Son. He is a new creature in Christ Jesus, born again, born of the Spirit, born from above.

You say you have repented a thousand times. I doubt that. If you have you have caused joy in heaven a thousand times.

Do you know what repentance is? We may have many strong impulses to lead better lives; may have formed many resolutions to this effect.

Our motives may be stirred by the recital of beautiful and touching incidents in scorching sermons, or by sympathetic stories describing the horrible effects of sin, yet we may not repent.

We may have felt penitence, contrition and sorrow for sin, and may have confessed our sins, but repentance means more than all of these.

It is true there can be no repentance without sorrow for sin, but there may be sorrow for sin without repentance.

Genuine repentance includes a decision to forsake sin.

"He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whosoever confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." The moment of decision is the moment of repentance.

However wicked, however steeped in crime we may be, when we make oud unconditional surrender to God, without limitation or reservation, then and there, our repentance is complete. In that moment God accepts us and blots out all our transgressions.

Repentance means a change of mind, or to have another mind. It may not be amiss to use a business illustration to get this thought deeply rooted in our minds. A man, many years engaged in a certain business, is very fond of it. He is so wedded to his special line, that he hates to change.

Though attentive and diligent in business, he finds that he is losing money, but he continues in the same line, year after year, in spite of his losses. Finally his eyes are opened. Just ahead of him is bankruptcy and financial ruin. He decides that his only hope is to change his business and engage in something that will bring in dividends. His decision is evidence of a change of mind. He regrets his misfortunes and has not the remotest idea of returning to his losing game.

A wise man does not change his mind unless he has a good reason for doing so. In the business world it is a business reason; in social life it is a social reason; in religion it is a religious reason. The Holy Spirit speaks to the sinner; he comes to himself; he finds that sin will be his ruin, he realizes that he displeases God and grieves the Spirit. He is without hope and sees no way of deliverance, except through Christ. Godly sorrow fills his heart. The great apostle tells us that Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation. It is not coercion, but as we yield to the wooings of the Holy Spirit, He leads us into the light and gives us victory over sin. The moment we repent we obey and we hear the comforting words: "Know ye not that ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are whom ye obey."

As we do this the gates of heaven stand ajar and the angelic host rejoice in the presence of God. Let us not forget the words of the Master to Zacchaeus: "This day is salvation come to this house, for the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Remember also the woman at the well to whom Christ said: "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." She replied: "Sir, give me this water that I thirst not." As she drank of this water a new light and a new life came into her soul—and immediately she went into the city and told the people that she had found the Messiah. Many others came to hear her voice and were saved.

The prodigal son left his father's house and went into a far country where he spent his substance in riotous living. He soon came to want. For a while his pride kept him from writing home—but when he came to himself, he said: "How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, 'Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me as one of thy hired servants.' And he arose and came to his father. But when he was a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran and fell on his neck, and kissed him." This is the way God treats the penitent sinner.

When Jesus sat at meat in a Pharisee's house, a woman of the city who was a sinner, entered and stood at his feet behind him weeping. She washed his feet with her tears and wiped them with the hair of her head and kissed his feet and anointed them with ointment.

Jesus said to the Parisee: "Her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much." And he said to the woman, "Thy sins are forgiven; thy faith hast saved thee: go in peace."

Him that cometh to Christ, he will in nowise cast out. These precious invitations are extended to every sinner today. He says: "Whosoever committeth sin is a servant of sin."

"Let the wicked forsake his ways, and the righteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

"The Spirit and the bride say, come. let him that heareth say, come. Let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely."

116th Birthday Of Alex Stephens To Be Observed

A great demonstration of Georgia's loyalty to a favorite son will be staged at the city auditorium Saturday, February 11, the 116th anniversary of the birth of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy and a distinguished Georgian, it was announced Saturday by Dr. Garnett W. Quillian, chairman of the governor's committee on arrangements.

Primarily, in order to give all students of the state and citizens generally equal opportunity to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. Stephens, Governor Hardman has secured the model of his statue which stands in the Hall of Fame in Washington. The model, both in size and appearance, is an exact duplicate, and will be formally presented to the state at the celebration.

All military schools of the state have been asked to participate in a gigantic parade and the senior classes of the several colleges and universities have been requested to be present. To this end, the committee said, it expected to secure from every point in Georgia a special rate of one fare plus 25 cents for a round-trip ticket on all railroads.

Complimentary to all cadets who attend, an adequate lunch will be served between the hours of 11 and 1 o'clock.

Letters to all educational institutions in the state have been sent out and plans are under way to make the event a great success. Other members of the committee are Mrs. J. M. High, Mrs. Frank T. Mason, Mrs. C. P. Byrd and Colonel J. C. Woodward.

Other details of the entertainment program for the celebration will be announced later.

Atlanta's Public Schools

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do.

This is the eleventh of a series of articles on the Atlanta public schools, prepared under the direction of the Personnel association of Atlanta. They are published with a view of informing parents and the public about the schools and their work. The entire system will be discussed.

Boys' High School.

"Ancient and Honorable" among Atlanta's educational institutions is the Boys' High school, whose early graduates are among many of the outstanding business and professional men of the city. Organized in 1872, it has graduated thousands of boys who have attained success in many lines of endeavor, and who are proud to attend its reunions. Many of them have gone far afield. They have made splendid records at Harvard and Princeton and Yale, at our own University of Georgia and other colleges; they have reached high places in business and professional life.

The Boys' High school is the strictly academic "preparatory school" of the Atlanta system, more especially since the establishment of the other senior high schools. While these do prepare pupils for college, they have developed features which make them high schools of the comprehensive type, while Boys' High looks rather to preparing its students for future years in college. Its courses of study are more academic than in its sister high schools.

The term "preparatory school" signifies, in the eyes of the board of education, the faculty and the public, that the institution shall provide the intermediate training and liberal process of general development in the pursuit of systematic and organized study which shall prepare him to enter upon the advanced study he will meet in the college or university of his choice. The traditional academic subjects of study constitute a training in general adaptability, the practical function is to render the students readily adaptable to any situation in which they may find themselves. Or, the high school may select, through an extension of the try-out" process, those endowed with the intellectual and moral stamina to survive the severe discipline that such studies, by their very nature, impose upon a youth. The academic high school is not designed to provide the finishing stage in the student's formal education; it does not attempt to render the student fully trained for some specific vocation.

Looking to the Fueure.

Courses of study in the Boys' High school are determined by college admission requirements which the students must meet upon high school graduation. In Atlanta, these courses are organized under six departments, according to general subject matter. These are: English, history and social science, mathematics, ancient languages, modern foreign languages and science.

The teachers in Boys' High are specialists, each teaching in some one department. The students' programs of study are organized into curriculums—general, academic and scientific. The general curriculum may consist of any assemblage of subjects and it does not contemplate preparing the student for college; the academic curriculum is designed for students intending entrance in the liberal arts colleges. The scientific course prepares students for the higher technological schools. The academic curriculum emphasizes foreign languages; the science curriculum science and mathematics.

Students are carefully advised and directed in their selection of curriculums and in their choice of courses in the curriculum, according to their announced intentions subsequent to graduation. Students who are undecided as to their future intentions are kept upon a course of study that will enable them to meet whatsoever requirements their ultimate decision may call for.

School Requirement.

Boys' High school requirements for graduation are English, three years; some one other subject, three years; two other subjects, two years each; elective, four years; total, 14 units. Students, when they enter senior high school, have already accomplished four units of college preparatory work in the ninth year of the junior high school. The three-year subjects are called majors, the two-year subjects are called minors. In the administration of this system of graduation requirements a great variety of study combinations is possible. The Boys' High school, therefore, has a surprisingly flexible organization, so that practically any combination of requirements may be arranged. Graduation in either the academic or the scientific course guarantees adequate preparation for admission to the freshman class of any college, or technical school of college rank.

The courses are so constructed that the standard requirements for admission to any college are fulfilled in the requirements for graduation from the Boys' High school. Colleges everywhere from Florida to Massachusetts, from New York to Los Angeles can testify to the adequacy and efficiency of this preparation. Boys' high school of Atlanta is regarded with favor and respect throughout the United States as a public municipal secondary school of distinction. This reputation has been sustained throughout the entire history of the school.

Until 1909 the Boys' High school was the only high school for boys in Atlanta. It had a business department for training in commercial subjects and a technical department for training in manual arts. In 1909 the enrollment of the school having been adjudged to have outgrown the housing facilities in the old Boys' High school building, the technical department was removed to other quarters to form the Technological High school. In 1916 the business department was removed to be merged with the English Commercial High school for girls to the present Commercial High school. Subsequent to these amputations, the Boys' High school was conducted as an academic high school in the old Boys' High building with an enrollment about 200 larger than it had ever been before any departmental "amputations" were carried out. In 1922-1923 Boys' High school had an enrollment of 800, accommodated in the Boys' High school building at Courtland and Gilmer streets. In the year before the removal of the technological department the enrollment was not in excess of about 500.

Its Student Activities.

No description of a high school of today is complete without the presentation of those features, supported and supervised by the school, but not an integral part of the organization. These features are the "activities." Activities in the senior high schools are organized, supported and conducted as adjuncts to the school proper, but constitute an increasingly important part of the school machinery for the discovery and development and exercise of valuable traits and abilities.

In the Boys' High school, the most venerable of these organized adjuncts is the Alciphronian Literary and Debating society, established in 1874. This is a parliamentary organization of the entire student body for public speaking. Each class room is organized for weekly public speaking exercises. The student body as a whole is organized for an assembly of the whole with the special monthly program. Not only does this society provide systematic training in public speaking, but it also furnishes the stimulus for much study and research upon civic, political and social problems. Old graduates always think of Boys' High school primarily in terms of the Alciphronian.

Next in point of numbers enrolled is the military training (Atlanta High Schools' R. O. T. C.). This is now a cadet regimental organization with a voluntary enrollment of nearly 300. This provides a wholesome daily outdoor exercise of infantry drill and inculcates the ideals of cooperation in large groups and instills the principles of good citizenship. Promotion in military rank is determined by merit. Organization and personnel and equipment for military training is furnished by the United States war department.

The Tatler is the Boys' High school newspaper. In this the boys with interest in newswriting and publicity, including advertising, have opportunity to exercise and train themselves in a practical way. The annual publication of the senior class, called the "Alciphronian," provides a similar opportunity in a more ambitious form.

The Boys' High School Concert orchestra is a full symphony organization, usually of about 40 to 50 instruments. The orchestra provides a unique opportunity for the development of musical ability and musical appreciation.

The Boys' High School Dramatic club is an organization of students for the public presentation, at intervals, of wholesome modern drama.

The Boys' High School Athletic association supports and manages all forms of athletics. This organization has, as affiliated and advisory members, representatives from the P.-T. A. and from the Boys' High School Alumni association.

Some of these organized activities are practically the same as carried on in other high schools; some of them are peculiar to Boys' High. In most cases the management has some unique features.

H. O. Smith is principal of Boys' High school. The faculty consists of 20 instructors, each of whom is a specialist in his department. The enrollment of the school has been growing during the past few years, and is now 642.

DOUG FAIRBANKS FILM ON HOWARD SCREEN

In Douglas Fairbanks' new picture, "Douglas Fairbanks as The Gauche," at the Howard this week, he has the most dashing part he ever played. A gauche is a picturesque nineteenth century character little known to the United States and apparently destined to attract more than ordinary attention here as well as in South America.

The scenes of Doug's plays have been veering southward—France, England, Arabia, Spain, the Antilles—and now the Pampas. The story has no definite locality, but is laid in the Pampas regions at large, making no pretense at historical accuracy, but using the picturesque environment as a background for romance.

"Douglas Fairbanks as The Gauche" is a tale of treasure, combat, intrigue and love, concerning the adventure of a bandit who crosses the Cordilleras with his riders to seize a city grown rich from the offerings of pilgrims to its sacred shrine. For the first time the star has two leading women, one a wild madcap, the other a saintly character. The production has a conflict of love interests, said to be much stronger than in any previous Fairbanks picture.

Under the instruction of real gauchos from Argentina Fairbanks has become an adept with the boleodoras, which he uses in the picture as one of his many striking feats of prowess.

No brief resume of the play can do justice to the skillfully constructed action. Enough to say that the imagination is captured at the beginning of the prologue and held to the close of the story. The whimsical humor of Fairbanks and his newly intriguing stunts are a seasoning for the vital movement of the play, whose flavor combines that of some rare old Spanish legend and the romantic moods of the borderland. Doug's adventures are of the sort that delight the young and old. In Sherwood forest or in the shadow of the Andes he remains the gallant adventurer, ever with a surprise for his audience.

Alamo No. 2.

"My Official Wife," the melodramatic picture, which comes to the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday and Tuesday, is the first American production to be made by Paul Stein, the Austrian director, who was imported to this country by Warner Bros. and who has been hailed as a second Lubitsch.

The story he has handled deals with Petrograd and Vienna before the war. Helene, Countess Orloff, is affianced to Ivan, a Russian nobleman, and they have an engagement to go to a masquerade ball together. Ivan, however, has mixed his dates, and he finds it more important to his happiness to keep an engagement for that evening with a notorious demi-mondaine. As a result, Helene, who is wearing a pleasant costume, decides to go to the ball alone.

Her pleasant disguise and her distinguished beauty take the eye of six roystering young nobles, who force her to accompany them to a wayside inn. There is a riotious orgy, they cast lots for her, and she is won by a grand duke's son, named Alexander.

'STUDENT PRINCE' SEEN ON GRAND SCREEN

The long awaited picture "The Student Prince" with Ramon Novarro, Norma Shearer and an all-star cast will be the offering at Loew's Grand theater this week. This great picture is one of the most beautiful ever filmed and contains some of the most elaborate settings ever built. It will be offered with James J. Corbett and Bobby Barry heading the vaudeville end of the program at Loew's Grand.

The visit of Max Reinhardt, famous creator of stage spectacles, to America during his presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," marked an interesting reunion when, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, he found a boy whom he had taken from a clerk's desk in Berlin to make an actor of, directing one of the hugest screen spectacles in history.

The boy was Ernst Lubitsch—who started as a minor player in a Reinhardt spectacle in Berlin, and has since become one of the greatest directors of all times on the screne. Lubitsch was directing "The Student Prince," the spectacular romance with Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer.

Reinhardt's visit cast some interesting sidelights on Lubitsch's career. The director was the son of a Berlin merchant, and his father set him at work at a clerk's desk. He studied drama at night against his father's wishes; finally Reinhardt gave him a chance.

When German studios arose Lubitsch became a screen comedian—and was hailed as the chaplin of Germany, and this led to his directing his own comedies. Direction seemed to be his field, and he reached out for more important work. Finally he startled the world with "Passion" in which Pola Negri rose to fame, and followed it with "Deception," "One Arabian Night" and others. He came to America to direct Mary Pickford in "Rosita" and since then has made such outstanding successes as "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Marriage Circle" and others.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spectacle is a lavish filmization of the famous romance Richard Mansfield immortalized on the stage. Novarro and Miss Shearer play the roles of Karl Heinrich and Kathie with a huge cast. Several thousand people appear in the spectacular court ceremonies, coronation and other massive detail, and entire towns were built to reproduce the quaint scenes of the romance. Jean Hersholt, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Edward Connelly, George K. Arthur, Lionel Belmore, Otis Harlan and many others of note are in the huge supporting cast.

'THE HAUNTED SHIP' NEW PICTURE AT MET

Brimming with suspense and color is "The Haunted Ship," playing at the Metropolitan next week. The mystery of the sea is suggested by one of Jack London's tales, "White and Yellow."

Highly gripping, the unusually interesting story weaves around two men, a captain of a five-masted schooner and his first mate, both loving the same girl for many years and who finally marries the captain. After more than five years of married life, during which time a son had been born, the husband becomes suspicious of his first mate and accuses him of being the father of the boy.

A terrific fight follows and the mate, overpowered, is made prisoner in the hold of the boat by the captain, while the wife and her son are set adrift on the sea in an open boat. Dramatic situations ensue as the plot unfolds, depicting the return of the son with his sweetheart to the boat seeking revenge for the death of his mother, his hardships and finally finding happiness.

The cruel captain is admirably portrayed by Montague Love, while Ray Hallor enacts the son well. Pretty Dorothy Sebastain plays the role of the show girl whose love for the son saves him from death at his father's hands. Others in the well supporting cast include Alice Lake, Tom Santchi and Pat Harmon.

Moonlight nights on the wide open seas; brutal fights aboard ship; stalking ghosts to send thrills and delight to the audience. "The Haunted Ship" is filled with such moments and stands out as a splendid sea story.

Popular Harry Langdon in "Fiddlesticks," and a Grantland Rice sportlife, "Versatility," and Metropolitan news and views will be added attractions.

Enrico Leide has chosen as musical theme to accompany the picture, "Sweetheart Memories." "When Day Is Done," being featured now by Paul Whiteman and his band, will be the overture.

An air route between London and Australia is being considered.

Current Screen Attractions

'FASHION MADNESS' ON RIALTO SCREEN

Claire Windsor is the star in "Fashion Madness," feature picture which has been moved up for showing at the Rialto theater as headliner for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at "Atlanta's family theater."

With it will go the Christie comedy, "Mad Scrambles," and Paramount News.

The new Fred Thompson starring vehicle, "The Pioneer Scout," another thriller in the series which began with "Jesse James," will be at the Rialto through Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"Boys Will Be Girls" is the title of the fourth episode of the Beauty Parlor series of comedies, which will be screened with "The Pioneer Scout." So will the new Paramount News Reel.

Silver, the famous horse which is an important member of the cast of Fred Thompson pictures, is in "The Pioneer Scout," but there are several of the best character actors in the movies to provide comedy and more drama. The picture is said to be loaded with action.

"Fashion Madness" tells of the adventures of a girl, whose whole life was wrapped up in clothes. This mania for dress made her inconsiderate of the feelings of others and the source of many sensational stories. Her sweetheart, to teach her a lesson, spirits the girl away to his camp in the north woods. Here exciting and tragic experiences befall her, which change the girl's outlook on life.

VARIED FILM BILL SEEN CURRENTLY AT PONCE DE LEON

The Ponce de Leon has a program of entertainment that is varied to suit all. A story of the sea, of the mountains, the modern married life and the college comedy all come in for their bit.

The film Monday, "Captain Salvation," a love romance is told in a volcano of human emotions; with characters that represent the brutal, the fearless, the godless; the man who sailed the old clipper ships and looked death and worse in the face with a grin. The lure of the sea and its adventures in every detail.

Tuesday, beautiful Virginia Valli in "Judgment of the Hills," a story of the Kentucky mountains. Wednesday, Conway Tearle in "Isle of Forgotten Women." Thursday and Friday, Manager Davis will show "The Marriage Clause," a Lois Weber production, with Billie Dove as the woman and Francis Bushman the male star. It is a vivid human document of a girl's rise from obscurity to stardom on the stage, of her mental and psychological changes.

It is an intimate glimpse into stage life, revealing not the gawdy chorus girl and night life scenes so common to pictures of this type, but of the actual humans who spend their lives in the theater.

Saturday, Richard Dix in "The Quarterback."

Prehistoric men in Europe believed that coral had medical value.

Before the sixteenth century the banana was known as the "apple of paradise" and "Adam's fig."

ROMANTIC FILM STORY FEATURED AT GEORGIA

"Rose of the Golden West" sounds romantic and stirs up the imagination. It is the story of early days in California and is one of the latest releases. It will be shown all week at Keith's Georgia theater as the feature screen attraction.

Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland are cast as the principals in this fighting film of the Spanish-ruled part of America now called California and is built around incidents which occurred before the days of the famous "gold rush" to the west coast.

Gilbert Roland, as the son of a famous Spanish family, falls in love with the beautiful and attractive Mary Astor, who in her character of daughter of the governor of California in the olden, golden days, has the leading role and is more marvelous than ever.

Many of the scenes of "Rose of the Golden West" were made on the spot of their original happening, at Monterey, Calif., at that time the center of Spanish culture and the home of many who had been granted, by Spanish rule, large grants of land. How this was wrested from the Spanish and California made a part of America is shown vividly and thrillingly in this interesting feature of early life on the far western coast.

Santa Fe, New Mexico, lies farther south than Algiers, in Africa.

Automobiles use about half the plate glass made in this country.

Tudor.

The most outstanding attraction on the Tudor's program this week is James Oliver Curwood's "The Golden Snare," a drama of the north, made several years ago and, because of popular demand, reissued for the vast audiences who prefer the late author's works. "The Golden Snare" is the story of a man, half-mad, whose exploits were the talk of the northland, who was known because of his snares, made from the silken strands of a woman's hair, which brought men to blows and worse and caused events which are still the talk of the country. Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery, Ruth Renick and Francis McDonald star in the picture.

On Monday and Tuesday the Tudor offers Leo Maloney in "The Devil's Twin." It is a story of intrigue, in which a group of gamblers seek to secure control of a ranch through forgery, but are thwarted by the daring of a man whom they try to put out of the way; who takes the "identity" of a twin brother and puts terror in the hearts of his enemies.

Friday and Saturday brings Jack Hoxie to the Tudor in "Grinning Guns," the story of a man who entered a hostile country and became well known because of his ability in action, and because of an ever present grin which meant no good for those who sought to stop him.

West End.

What makes an airplane wild?

A pair of drivers who have never been in one before. It is demonstrated in "Now We're in the Air," the Paramount comedy, starring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton at the West End Monday and Tuesday.

Indian attacks, prairie fires, fording of swollen rivers, a great buffalo hunt, dramatic situations galore—all go to make "The Covered Wagon" the greatest picture ever filmed. It will be shown Wednesday only.

China, its internal warfare and strife, gunfire mingling with heartthrobs and sensationalism—that's the locale of Richard Dix's latest Paramount picture, "Shanghai Bound," showing Thursday and Friday.

In "Running Wild," which shows Saturday only, W. C. Fields turns from a timid soul to a roaring lion.

OohLa!La!Oi!Oi! Begosh! Begorra! ---At the Capitol

"Cohens and Kellys in Paris" Comes This Week to Capitol.

If you're a member of the ninety-nine and forty-four hundreds per cent of the people, who like to laugh better than anything else, then the place for you this week is at the Capitol theater, where "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" will be shown all week.

"The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" is life jammed with wholesome human touches of pathos and comedy. It is a beautiful painting from the delicate brush of the great artist, William Beaudine, director of "Little Annie Rooney," "Sparrows" and "Hold that Lion."

Each member of the all-star cast is admirably chosen.

It is not a farce-comedy, but it is drama of the relations between the Irishman and the Jew told with an eye always on the comic possibilities of the tale.

George Sidney, who was featured in the role of Cohen in the first "Cohens and Kellys," headlines in the screamingly funny adventures of the Irish and Jewish families in Paris. J. Farrell MacDonald is cofeatured as Kelly and gives an inimitable portrayal. Vera Gordon and Kate Price are back again in their original roles of Mrs. Cohen and Mrs. Kelly, louder and funnier than ever.

Gertrude Astor furnishes 50 per cent of the good looks and many of the laughs in this hysterical production. Sue Carol represents the remaining 50 per cent of beauty and charm, while Charles Delaney is appealing as young Mr. Kelly who marries the pretty Cohen girl and thereby engages the two families in a mad rush to Paris to break up the racial mistake, so that the Cohen grandchildren will not be little Kellys.

Everything that can happen in Paris happens to the Cohens and Kellys, including an apache dance and a duel. The whole things ends with one of the most exciting an hysterical sequences ever screened.

JAPANESE CAST SEEN IN HOWARD STAGE SHOW

Ray Teal, new orchestra leader at the Howard will be seen for the first time Monday when he and the Howard stage orchestra will appear in connection with "Tokio Blues."

Probably the most talented group of oriental entertainers that has ever been assembled on one stage is that which appears in John Murray Anderson's elaborate Publix production, "Tokio Blues," which will be the featured stage attraction at the Howard theater this week.

With the exception of Willie Solar, the international comedian, the entire cast of "Tokio Blues" is composed of Japanese. Practically all of them had at one time or another scored successes in musical comedy productions. Foremost among them are the three Meyakos, who for five years were featured by Ed Wynn in his "Perfect Fool," "Ed Wynn's Carnival" and "Grab Bag."

Willie Solar can entertain in seven different languages. Frequently he does. Last year he had a long run in Berlin, followed by a lengthy engagement in Paris, and when he decided to return to America he was enjoying popularity in Italy. The season before he made Russians laugh in Moscow, while several seasons ago he was toplined in Madrid.

Naoe Kondo might have been said to have glorified the Japanese girl in such famous Broadway productions as "A Night in Paris," "Artists and Models," "Big Boy" and "Arabesque." While appearing in those shows Miss Kondo was hailed by many artists as the most lovely Japanese maiden that had ever appeared on the American stage.

Helen Kim, another lovely type of oriental beauty, scored her first big success in "The Shanghai Gesture," starring Florence Reed. Hatsu Kuma, prima donna in the production has been on the stage since she was four years of age. She had a prominent part in the Broadway production of "Aloma of the South Seas." Aida Kawakami, who has been in this country only a few months, has achieved a marked success throughout the Orient as a dancer. George Hirose, tenor, has had signal successes on the concert stage.

"Alaska Jack" and "Bill" Brade, veteran character actors, actually went through the gold rush back in '98, described in "Burning Daylight," the Milton Sills starring picture now being produced at First National studios, in which they are now working.

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

JAMES J. CORBETT HEADS LOEW BILL

One of the notable events of the season in theatrical and sporting circles will be the appearance this week of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, with his partner, the inimitable comedian, Bobby Barry, at Loew's Grand theater as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill.

The famous "Gentleman Jim" will bring with Bobby Barry a real up-to-the-minute comedy sketch chock full of laughs and which is a real attraction, notwithstanding the fame of Corbett. In the skit there is a wealth of comedy offered, while the famous conqueror of John L. Sullivan does just a bit of boxing to show the people that he can still handle his mitts skillfully.

James J. Corbett is one fighter who battled all the best men in the world during his career. He fought and whipped the redoubtable John L. Sullivan. He fought such hard punching fighters as Bob Fitzsimmons, Peter Maher, Peter Jackson, James J. Jeffries and Tom Sharley.

In one fight, that with Peter Jackson, Corbett went 61 rounds. This fight lasted for more than four hours and should make the modern fight fan sit up and take notice in these days of 10-round championship affairs.

After his ring career ended Corbett went on the stage and turned out to be a real artist. He has appeared for many years in vaudeville, was interlocutor of the famous Cohan and Harris minstrels and has starred in several successful plays.

Bobby Barry is a comedian whose work is well-known in Atlanta. He is a whole show in himself and, working with Corbett, he provides a comedy scream.

On the same bill will appear George Frederick and company in "The Conductor," a comedy skit of the Broadway Limited. In this act also are Evelyn Patterson, George Duthies and J. E. Curtiss, well-known musical comedy artists. Other acts are Elsie and Paulson, assisted by Ben Gill, "Supreme Artists of the Ice," in an ice skating novelty; Kanosan, famous Nipponese flapper, in a song program, and Violet, Ray and Norman, hand-balancers, in a novelty turn. The great bill headed by Corbett will be featured in conjunction with "The Student Prince" as the feature picture attraction.

Alamo No. 1.

"The Fighting Edge," showing Monday and Tuesday, is a blood-stirring story of banditry, beauty and a bad man on the Mexican border, where anything can happen and most everything does. Kenneth Harlen and Patsy Ruth Miller take the leading roles.

For the picture fans who want to see some real fights that leave marks that came from hard fists, and at the same time laugh themselves into hysterics, see Fred Church in "Hoo doo Ranch." The new serial, "Heroes of the Wild," is starred by Jack Hoxie.

Three men, a girl and a bunch of crooks in a gold-mine western thriller that will leave you open-mouthed at its startling novelty. And, boy, how these babies strut their saddles!

Katydids and crickets hear with their front legs, an entomologist reports.

Current Stage Attractions on Peachtree

In the upper left corner, ladeez and gentulmen, we have James J. Corbett, famous fisticuff expert, who headlines the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater this week. All of the little girls are from the Harry Carroll revue at Keith's Georgia. On the lower left is the House of David Band, a remarkable musical organization which comes all the way from Benton Harbor, Mich. The oriental maid is Miss Hatsu Kimo, one of the headliners in "Tokio Blues" at the Howard theater this week.

German School Customs Differ From American

Student customs at romantic old Heidelberg, unearthed during the filming of "The Student Prince in Old Heidelberg," coming to Loew's Grand theater the week of January 16 were found to differ greatly from the student customs of our own universities. The John Held collegiates and co-eds of our own colleges were found to be not half so democratic as the more serious minded students of Heidelberg in the days of the German empire.

At Heidelberg the students are organized in a true democracy. Unlike the American colleges, the students are not allowed to band themselves in secret fraternities, and clubs which tend toward exclusive ness and snobbery. Princes and the sons of peasants mingle without any distinction, all the students being on a plane of equality which does not tolerate any snobbery. But when the students leave Heidelberg they revert to type, and go back to their old class distinctions.

Bosom companions at the university sometimes never speak to one another after graduation because of their different ranks. Thus it is seen that where the American college builds up a caste system in the universities themselves, Heidelberg abolishes any attempt to bring class distinctions into the student body. It is interesting to note, that at even the height of German militarism the utmost in democracy prevailed within the confines of Old Heidelberg—that is a great deal more than one can say for many a college in this democratic country.

Not only are the Heidelberg students, it was discovered by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer research department, a more democratic lot than our own collegians, but they are also allowed a great deal more liberty.

House of David Band Features Capitol Bill

Front page headlines have heralded the activities of the famous House of David far and near. In the public eye for the last two years, there has been no more prominent organization than the House of David.

And this week the chosen musical organization of that body comes as the headliner on a great bill of vaudeville to the Capitol theater.

Not in many moons has Manager "Marty" Semon offered such a splendid bill to patrons of the Capitol. The House of David band is a thoroughly trained and completely up-to-the-minute jazz band in addition to being one of the most picturesque organizations on the stage.

Every member of the band has long hair and the majority of them have flowing beards, which adornments have earned for them the sobriquet of "Long Haired Sheiks of Jazz." The famous "Cookie" Hannaford is director of the orchestra, and, besides the jazz which is featured in the act, songs and dances of exceptional merit will be seen.

The band has met with sensational success in the larger metropolitan cities of the east and this is the first tour south of this organization, and from the short length of time they have been playing south it begins to look like they would hang up some sort of record. It is a pretty safe bet that early comers at the Capitol theater this week will be the only ones sure of seats.

Supporting the House of David band will be one of the most famous characters on the stage, "Noodles" Fagan, who has earned for himself the appellation, "the perfect jester," and cyclone comedy is the outstanding feature of "Noodles'" act.

Other acts will be Harry Berry and Miss in "Vodvil Encyclopedia;" "Youth," a rollicking revue of song, dance and fun, and Fred Morton. On the screen will be featured "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," a comedy which is a sequel to that great laugh success, "The Cohens and Kellys."

Whiskers Demanded.

One hundred and sixty-five actors are said to have retired to the seclusion of the hills and other inaccessable places around Hollywood to grow beards for their roles in "The Red Dancer of Moscow."

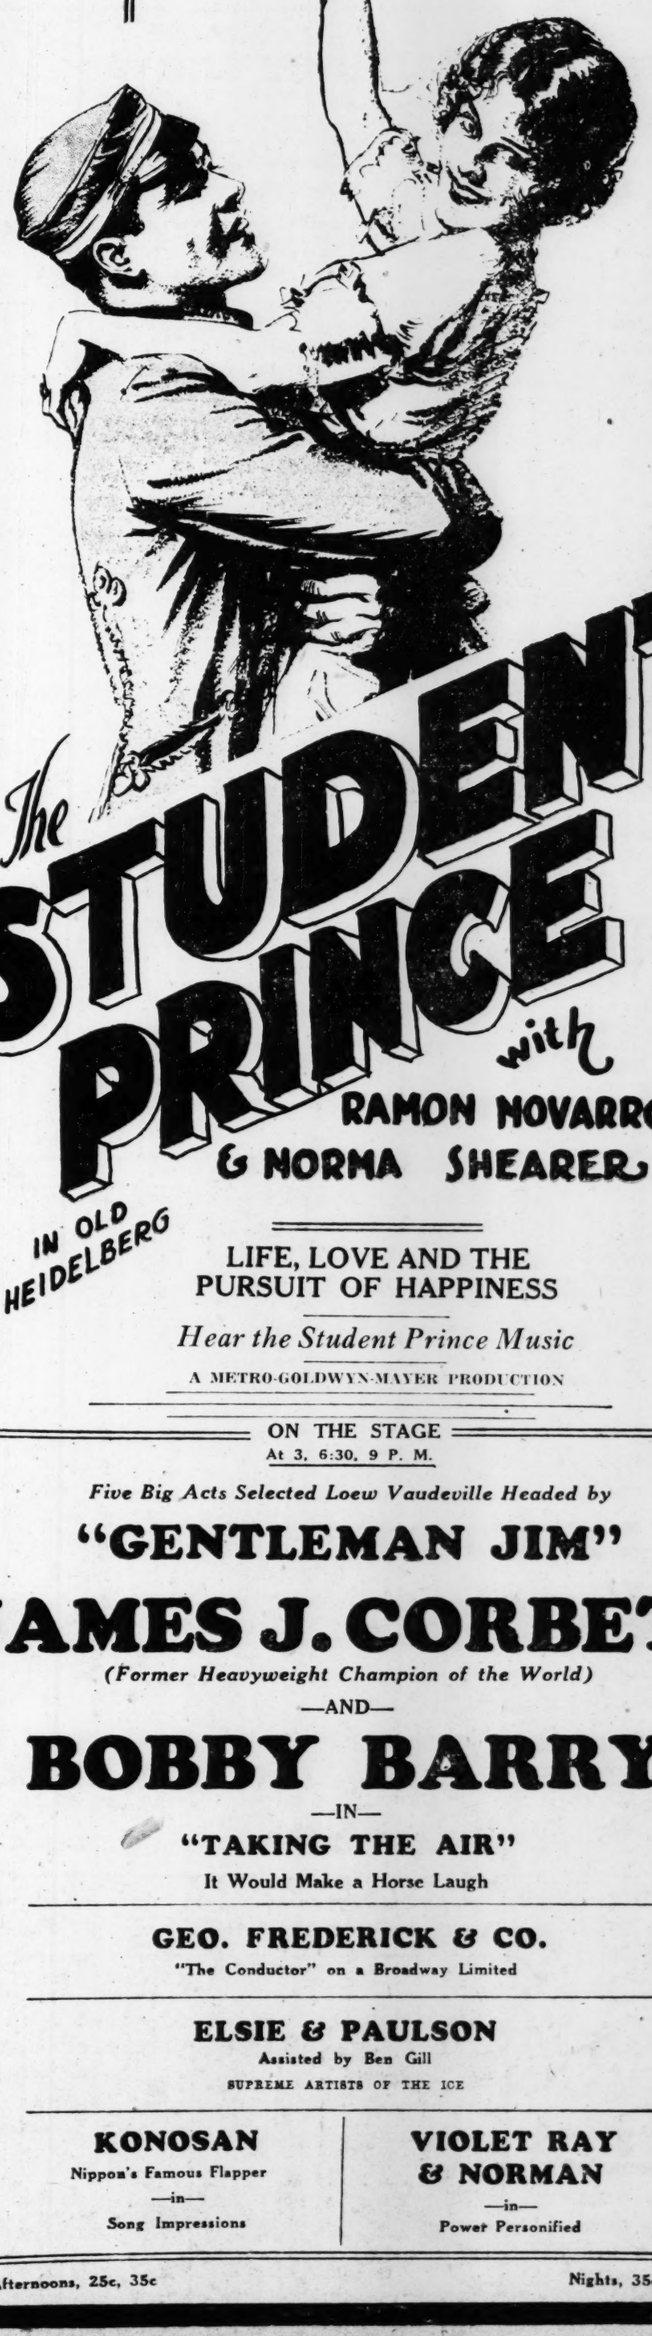

Raoul Walsh, who hopes to start production on the film soon, says the great difficulty lies in getting all the beards to grow together, for while some of the extras chosen for the parts have guaranteed to have a full and flowing crop of whiskers, some others can hope for nothing better than a scraggly stubble, the like of which never was seen on the face of any self-respecting Russian.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS AND MOVIES

NOTABLE BILL SLATED FOR GEORGIA STAGE

Harry Carroll and his big 1928 revue and unit show opens Monday at Keith's Georgia theater and is undoubtedly the biggest show of the season and possibly one of the best that the Georgia has thus far shown. Harry Carroll is a producer of prominence, a pianist and composer and knows how to select talent and entertainers. His present company is said to be all stars in singing, dancing, music and comedy.

"Glorifying American Youth" is the title of the Unit and is more like a big revue than a series of vaudeville acts. The individual artists have blended their material into one big production without taking the charm from the separate acts.

Ann Greenway, well known as a singer and comedienne, has one of the star positions with the show. Miss Greenway will present a program of clever songs, while Harry Carroll entertains at the piano.

The "California Collegians" is the title of the boys who have worked up a very popular jazz band and orchestra and interspersed plenty of comedy into the action and program.

A chorus of Broadway beauties is seen in the various scenes and add plenty of pep to the combination.

It is to Ken Murray, appointed as "spokesman" and specialist, that we look to for the plain and fancy comedy bits with the show. Ken Murray has an inimitable manner and a pleasing personality. He is well known as "master of ceremonies" in several other productions and easily holds a position close to the top of the best "spokesmen." You will like his comedy and his infectious mannerisms. It's a big show all the way and will be received here as elsewhere, by all the populace.

Fans Overjoyed.

Eighty thousand motion picture fans are rejoicing that Richard Barthelmess is filming "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

This estimate is represented by 20 per cent of the fan mail the First National star has received within the last six years, asking him to "please make another 'Tol'able David.'" After considerable negotiation, John Fox, Jr's, story was purchased for Barthelmess and he is once again the barefoot, mountain boy who made "Tol'able David," one of the outstanding pictures of all time.

Sills in Alaska.

Milton Sills for the second time plays a colorful Alaskan character in "Burning Daylight," the Jack London story now being filmed by First National Pictures.

Sills, some years ago, played the role of Glemister in "The Spoilers," Rex Beach's widely read novel of the Alaskan gold rush, the picture becoming one of the greatest successes of several seasons.

Freshman Stars.

Jack Stone, 19 years of age, a freshman athlete of the Colorado School of Mines, has been awarded an important role in "Lilac Time," Colleen Moore's special production.

More than a hundred young leading men had screen tests for this part in the picture, when George Fitzmaurice will direct for First National Pictures. Stone was the fortunate choice for the role.

Oglethorpe Players To Give 'Petrel Follies' To Aid Fund

BY EVELYN C. SILVERMAN.

"The Petrel Follies," of Oglethorpe university, declared by critics to be "the finest amateur show ever given in Atlanta," will, in answer to repeated requests, give performances at the Forsyth theater on the evenings of January 26 and 27. The show appeared previously at the Woman's club and met with notable success. The proceeds of these performances will go toward speeding to a successful conclusion the Oglethorpe university campaign to raise $250,000 to match a contribution offered by J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga.

"The Petrel Follies" will present to Atlanta theatergoers a show of about twenty acts and a cast of over fifty people. "Harlem Bound," one of the new acts written especially for this performance, will undoubtedly prove delightful to southern people, who understand and appreciate better than anyone, the rich subtlety and humorous characteristics of the negro race.

Earl Blackwell, who devised the show; George Holloway, musical director, and Cody Laird, president of the Players' club, are at present working on a scene in which the drop curtain, shipped from Philadelphia, and valued at nearly $600, will be used. Through the courtesy of a St. Louis music house, songs that have probably never been heard before in any theater in the country will be presented. Robert Harbour and Sarah Sharp, of the Spiker Players, will lend their services in several dance numbers.

Interesting Features.

Interesting features of this performance will include "A Spanish Fiesta," "The Backward Number," "A Ride on a Desert," "It Was Only a Sunshower," "An Old-Fashioned Garden," "Shame on the City," and "On With the Dance." In this last number Miss Angel Allen, together with Charles Willis, dances the tango with all the grace and skill of finished artists. There are comedy skits featuring Dwight Horton and Jake Sutton that are as witty and clever as collegians dare to be. The Muse fashion parade will display correct dress for both men and women. But that part of the Follies that required the greatest piece of constructive work is probably "Petrel Pep," a dance which members of the cast originated.

Those who will appear before the footlights are Angel Allen, Mary X Gunter, Ruth Brock, Evelyn Branch Theodosia Hunnicutt, Mary Harris, Gertrude Murray, Betty Stribling, Louise Madden, La France Moncrief, Helen and Olive Parish, Mary Buchanan, Kitty Park, Marion Wolff, Helena Calloway, Carol Thompson, Mary Louise Harvey, Harriett Hasson, Virginia Riske, Eugenia Buchanan and Bill Perkins, Puss Alleman, Alan Watkins, Bob Shepherd, Dwight Horton, Jake Sutton, Murphy Judd, Stuart Gould, Fred Griffin, Paul Madden, Charles Willis, Frank Inman, Fred Boynton and Major Guthrie.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

The Other Tomorrow. By Octavus Roy Cohen. The location is down south in the summertime. The little town near which the principal characters lived was called Weaverville. It is perhaps not unknown to the writer. For instance, "The first hot wave of summer rolled in from the wastes of Five Holes swamp and prostrated the inhabitants of Weaverville."

Heretofore Mr. Cohen has devoted his time and talents to weaving stories around the old-time darkey of the south—sometimes giving him a modern setting. But this is an all absorbing story of romance, the three leading characters being large land owners in the county of which Weaverville is the leading town.

Edith Conover, a young and lovely girl, much to the astonishment of friends and the community, marries a proud and egotistical young man whose jealous disposition had made him not only unpopular but disagreeable. And then there's another—a young man, slow of speech, good natured, determined, and whose opinion of the man who won from him the girl had never been expressed in words.

In this story all the way through the reader will have an understanding sympathy. There's an absorbing conflict. It ends like most fiction stories but there are a number of exciting incidents and a chapter of tragedy before the curtain falls. It is a most interesting story, cleverly written and with a plot that is well rounded out. A story that is "masterly in its convincingness." (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Wonder Tales of Architecture. By L. Lamprey, author of "The Days of the Guild." The story of architecture and building is a very old one, dating back from the very beginning—it is also a very fascinating study of man's needs and aspirations as well as his achievements.

Miss Lamprey has collected eighteen stories of architecture, the conditions of racial, social and religious life which gave each type of building its characteristic features. There are four illustrations in color and fifteen in black and white. (Frederick Stokes Co., New York.)

Move Over. By E. Petlit (Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche. "A smart story of our 'better classes' with whom money simultaneously plays the part of a villain of the piece and is the angel of the show, written with a whip-lash satire, and with a velvety sophisticated humor—not too seriously—but cleverly." These are the written lines of one of the author's admirers. (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

The Cannoneers Have Hairy Ears. A diary of the front lines. This is another anonymous book, though it is not by the author of "Wine, Woman and War," the publishers say, but that it is the work of a well-known newspaperman who was a captain of artillery and saw active service at the front.

It is filled with plenty of excitement, gripping human scenes. It keeps the reader in the highest stage of suspense to the last page. (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

The Wandering Among Forgotten Isles. By Jesse Metcalf. With a report on the scientific results of the cruise of the R. C. Murphy. There are thirty-two half-tone illustrations. The author of this book is retired business man who had all his life longed to see the out-of-way places of the world. He invited a number of his best friends to join him and sailed away on his yacht. That they did is written down here and it will be a pleasure for some other tired man to enjoy even if it does not encourage him to make a similar trip of adventure. (J. H. Sears & Co.)

Morrow's Word Finder. A new kind of reference book which combines the most important elements of the dictionary, the saurus and synonym book. By Paul D. Hugon. This is a most valuable volume, for you can find quickly the word you want, you have exactly the exact synonym for the word. There are rules of grammar and punctuation, principles of rhetoric and the use of English, and the pronunciation of difficult words to give you the assistance you want. (William Morrow & Co., New York. Price $2.50.)

Prohibition, Its Industrial and Economic Aspects. By Herman Feldman, assistant professor of industrial relations, Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance, Dartmouth college. (Appleton's Book, New York.)

Boston and the Parker House—1630-1927. A chronicle of those who have lived on that historic spot where the new Parker house stands in Boston. By James W. Spring, LL.B., Harvard. This history of Boston is filled with human interest. There are intimate glimpses of people who played important and constructive parts in its development—a Boston hostelry that became internationally known (J. R. Whipple corporation. McGrath-Sherrill Press, Boston.)

A SMALL TOWN STORY.

Fancy Lady. When Homer Croy left the corn fields near a little town in the state of Missouri, it was the full intention of making money. In some way he landed a place as a reporter on the county newspaper. His work met with favor from the very first and then he began writing verses with the usual result—the editor threw them in the waste basket and much to his indignation. He had a habit of digging them out and wailing them to different magazines. His final persistence caused several to be accepted.

This was too much personal glory to be hidden in the small town, so all dressed up in a suit of brown corduroy, an old straw suit case, and with a smile of confidence he made his entrance into the great American metropolis. The many experiences of this over-zealous young man are not unknown in newspaperdom—there were more downs than ups. He had not lost his enthusiasm, however, and finally wrote "West of the Water Tower," selecting the plot and the characters from his old home town. The book immediately became a best seller on the profits of which he took his family to Europe—his next book being "They Had to See Paris."

His new book is the story of a woman who lost her faith. Her real possessions were a small-brain husband and a son for whom she was willing to make any sacrifice to put him through college. This is the beginning of the story of the college boy's struggle between belief and unbelief—this is followed by the son's influence over his mother who up to this time had been devoutly religious. The reader will find the book simply a small-town story and as the lives of the different characters are slowly drawn to the finale the reader will understand something of the writer and his work. AMERICAN ARTISTS' WORK.

Albert Sterner—His Life and His Art. By Ralph Flint. This handsome book of less than one hundred pages contains many reproductions of the work of this famous artist. Mr Sterner is well known in Atlanta, having spent some time here while painting portraits of some of Atlanta's prominent citizens.

This volume is the first of a series

Octavus Roy Cohen, whose "Detours" (Little Brown), illustrates his skill as a writer of thrilling short stories, and shows that he does not have to write about Bummin'ham darkies to be entertaining.

to be called Contemporary American Artists. It will fill a long felt want among American art lovers, who have never before had offered to them collected reproductions of the works of our foremost artists in convenient book form.

No more suitable or auspicious subject for the first of such a series could have been found than Albert Sterner, whose career offers in itself the nucleus of the history of modern American art and illustration. Mr. Sterner was one of the now famous group of pioneers of American illustration, who found the craft far below the European standard of that day, and has succeeded in raising it to a plane as high as that of any country That Mr. Sterner did not confine himself to illustration alone, but achieved a large measure of his success in painting, lithography, dry point and monotype, only makes his achievement the greater.

The biographical and critical text by Ralph Flint is full of the coloquial color of the studios of that rich and formative period.

Altogether, "Contemporary American Artists," if the series is as good as the first book it should prove a useful, instructive and beautiful set of books, whose individual volumes will become a habit with lovers of art throughout the country. (Payson & Clark, Ltd., New York.)

BIOGRAPHY AND AUTOGIOGRAPHY.

The Making of a State. Memories and observations — 1914-1918. By Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, the first president of the Czecho-Slovakia republic, with introduction by Henry Wickham Steed. Emil Ludwig, biographer of Napoleon, Bismarck and William II, in the New York Times, says:

"If I were to ask him to name him who, among living men, deserves the highest rank, I should say Masaryk, the Czech . . . No statesman in the whole world today has so great a moral right to live in his palace as the wise, brave old man in the Hradshin at Prague."

President Masaryk makes a monumental contribution for the benefit of the whole country of the world war, its causes and its consequences, as well as the essentials of democratic freedom.

It should not be called a war book but the work of a philosopher—a statesman. A man of broad learning and a first-class historian. Emery Derl said in the New York Times "he has lived long enough to see most of his bold political dreams come true." (Frederick A. Stokes & Co., New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

Anchor's Aweigh. By Fitzhugh Green, commander U. S. N., author of "Hold 'Em Navy," "Midshipmen All." The foreword is by Charles P. Plunket, rear admiral U. S. N. This story is taken from the most thrilling moment in the life of the young men at Annapolis, and there are many thrills experienced there from the first day to the last. But this was in June and graduation time had come, the band strikes up "Anchor's Aweigh" as the newly made officers prepare to leave for their new assignments.

Tom Armstrong, a fine young fellow, has been made captain of a company of midshipmen of the naval academy as a reward for this three years' of good work. He is well worth meeting and the story is woven around his last year at the academy. (A. Appleton & Co., New York.)

MAGAZINES FOR JANUARY.

The American Review of Reviews has a most interesting table of contents for this month—the frontispiece is a picture of President Machado, of Cuba. Under "The Progress of the World," are fifteen or twenty of the livest subjects for discussion at the present time. The leading articles in this issue are all interesting, among them being "America Reenters the Battle for Peace," "How About Germany's Finances?" "What Could a Wet President Do?" "Aviation's Big Year," "Movies Must Move," "The Future of Christianity," "Railroads at Bay," "Heralds of Prosperity and Keeping the Wolf From Millions of Doors."

The Red Book, as usual has a most attractive front cover and it carries article by some of the most distinguished writers of the day, Booth Tarkington, Arthur Stringer, Michael Arlen, Rupert Hughes, Coningsby Dawson and others. Under the head, "The Spirit of Our Day," is the title, "The Harvest Pause," by Angelo Patri, who writes that a gentle philosopher shares his thoughts with you, with decorations by Franklin Booth; Dr. Bruce Barton discusses the subject, "When's the Time to Marry?" Both Tarkington discusses, "What You Want in Life," illustrated with photographs; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair writes on the subject of "The Magnificent Adventure, Marriage," and there are many other subjects which the reader will enjoy reading.

The Cosmopolitan for this month carries four serials by Meredith Nicholson, Adela Rogers St. John, Peter B. Kyne, E. M. Hull, Irvin Cobb, H. C. Witwer, W. Somerset Maugham and E. Phillips Oppenheim. There are eleven short stories by such writers as Edner Ferber, Montague Glass, Wiliam J. Locke, etc., and features by O. O. McIntyre, Charles Dana Gibson, Arnold Bennett, Will Durant and others. The cover design is by Harrison Fisher—This is a most attractive number of Hearst's International combined with the Cosmopolitan.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

"For the third time A. A. Milne has demonstrated that a book for children can outsell all other books in the country," says Frederick W. Childe, in the December Retail Book seller. "'Now We Are Six,' says John Macrae, Jr., has been selling at the rate of 3,000 copies a week."

"Happiness," says Ben Ray Redman in The Spur, "is a delightful little volume for the guest room. It will please all, for it has an inspiring message from William Lyon Phelps for all."

Christopher Morley selects Blake's "Marriage of Heaven and Hell," in the facsimile edition recently issued by Dutton, as one of his "personal choices" for gifts this year.

"One of the reasons we like 'Splendor,' by Ben Ames Williams," writes Frank Sullivan in the New York World, "is because so far as we have gone the cub reporter has not astounded the staff by scooping the town on the 'Biggest Story in Years.' We have yet to meet the cub reporter who did, except in fiction."

James Melvin Lee says in his story on Ben Ames Williams' new novel in the Editor and Publisher: "The life of many a newspaper man is mirrored in 'Splendor,' a fine piece of realistic writing. Unlike most newspaper novels the leading character does not end his days sitting in the swivel chair of the editor-in-chief nor does he become a great molder of public opinion and fighter for civic righteousness through newspaper campaigns. To be sure Henry goes up but comes down again through the copy desk back to the morgue where he first began his newspaper career. The absence of the flamboyant happy ending is what takes 'Splendor' out of the r. o. p. newspaper novels and puts it in a class by itself. It is a tale that members of the working press will put down but not put out of mind. P. S.—The wife will also enjoy 'Splendor'—mine did."

Meredith Nicholson comments on Ben Ames Williams' "Splendor":

"I can't recall any other American novel of recent date that bears as undeniably as this the stamp of authenticity. As an old newspaperman the fragrance of ink and benzine bites into my nostrils most poignantly. Boston hasn't been so well served in fiction since Howells' 'A Modern Instance.'"

Urban League Weekly Bulletin

The civic and religious organizations among colored people have joined with the mayor and city government with the white group to secure a new terminal station to replace the old dilapidated Union station through the Georgia public service commission. The following communications were sent by the committee on church cooperation, representing the Protestant churches in the city of Atlanta and the Atlanta branch of the negro business league:

"Georgia Public Service Commission,
"Atlanta, Ga.

"Gentlemen: We, the members of the committee on church cooperation, representing the Protestant churches among the negroes in the city of Atlanta, have read with a great deal of interest the newspaper accounts of the discussion that has gone on with regard to the building of a new terminal station to replace the old dilapidated Union station. As bad as the conditions are at the present station for the accommodation of white passengers they are infinitely worse for the colored. There is no rest room for colored women, nor smoking room for colored men, restaurant nor lunch counter, where colored passengers might eat.

"We, therefore, wish to join with the mayor, the city government and the various civic and labor organizations, in petitioning your honorable body to exercise all of the influence of your executive position in causing the railroad companies involved to build an adequate station in keeping with the demands of the age, the needs of the traveling public and on apparitive with the other improvements, now under construction in that part of the city.

"Very truly yours,
"OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH COOPERATION COMMITTEE."

"Georgia Public Service Commission,
"Atlanta, Georgia.

"Gentlemen: At a regular meeting of the Negro Business league held last night at the Butler Street branch of the Y. M. C. A., our attention was called to the effort on the part of the mayor and city government and a number of civic organizations, including the labor unions, to have the railroad officials replace the dilapidated Union station with a modern building, adequate to accommodate the traveling public.

"After the matter had been thoroughly discussed the following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, the accommodations for colored people were very much poorer than those provided for other race elements, and

"Whereas, there is no rest room provided for colored women, nor a smoking room for colored men, and

"Whereas, there are no provisions made for colored passengers to be served meals at the old Union station, and

"Whereas, the improvement that is under way in that immediate vicinity would be greatly marred, because of the proximity of the old dilapidated station.

"Be It Resolved, that we, the members of the Negro Business league, a branch of the National Negro Business league, representing all the business and commercial interests of the negro in this community do join with all of the organizations and influences above referred to in petitioning the members of your organization to use the influence of your executive office in causing the railroads involved to erect a terminal station, adequate for the accommodation of passengers who may go out and come in the city from this depot and in keeping with the building program of our progressive city.

"Signed,
"OFFICERS OF THE NEGRO BUSINESS LEAGUE OF ATLANTA."

Field Secretary Jesse O. Thomas left the city Friday night for St. Petersburg, Fla., at the invitation of the citizens of that city, requesting the organization of a local branch of the Urban league there.

Executive John W. Crawford, of the Atlanta Urban league, will deliver the address before the Sunday afternoon meeting at the Y. M. C. A. this afternoon at 4 o'clock. He will speak from the subject, "The Significance of Uncontrolled Social Problems."

Billy Dove's Next.

According to announcement by First National Pictures, Billie Dove's starring picture following "The Heart of a Follies Girl," will be an original called "The Yellow Lily," written by Lajos Biro, noted European dramatist, who is now preparing treatment for the film.

Alexander Korda, director of the tremendously successful First National picture, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," will direct "The Yellow Lily," which, it is said, will afford Miss Dove one of the most compelling vehicles in her experience.

Frances Hamilton, young society debutante of Pasadena, Calif., recently signed for First National pictures' stock company, has traveled widely despite her youth. Thus far she has visited Australia, New Zealand, the Orient and the Arctic circle!

You Can Win $2,000.00

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION'S "COW" FIGURE GAME

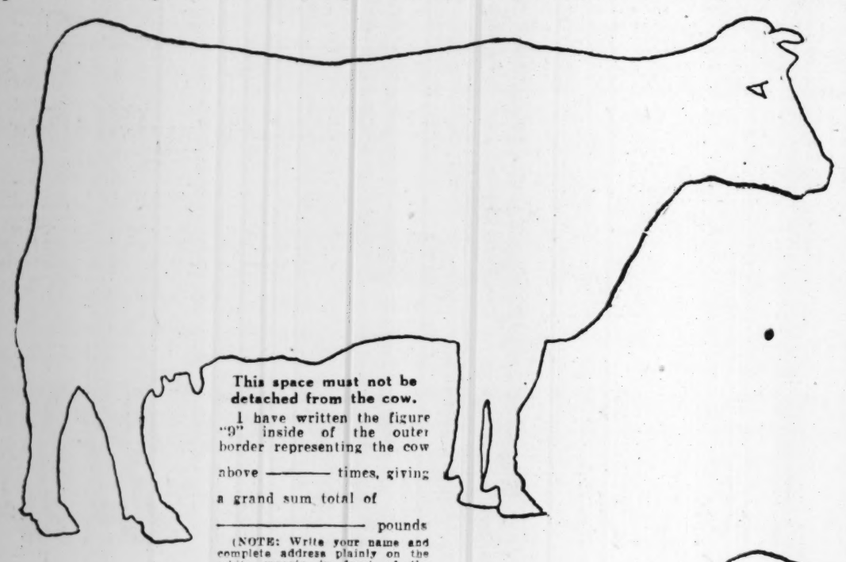

$2,000.00 First Prize — $1,000.00 Second Prize — $500.00 Third Prize

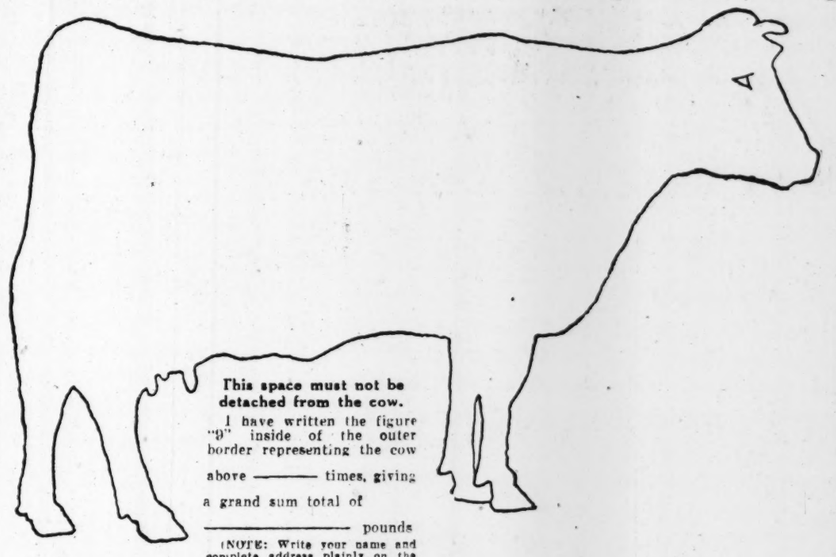

Twenty-five Cash Prizes in All---Amounting to $4,515.00

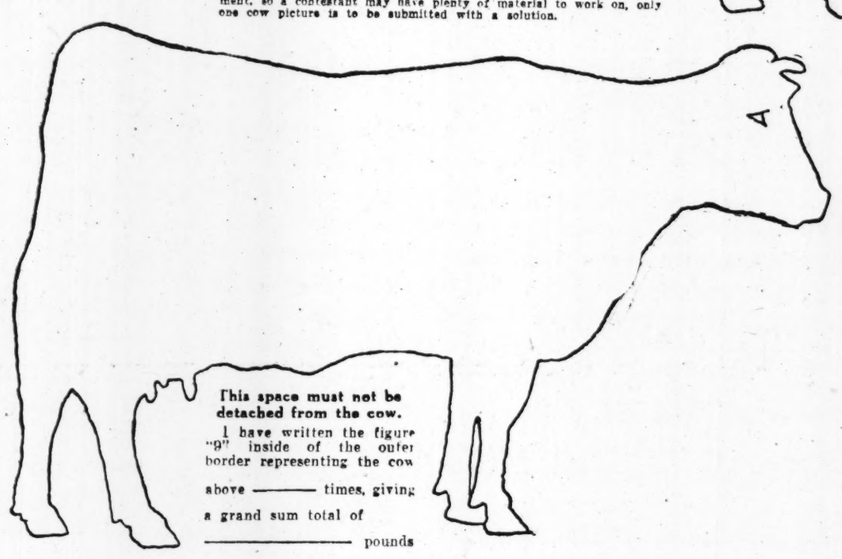

$500.00 Extra First Prize for Promptness

This is your opportunity to use your spare time to advantage. These big cash prizes are going to be given away to the lucky winners, and no one has a better chance than you if you will only make the proper effort. The object of the game is to see how much you can make the "COW" weigh by filling inside of the border representing the cow with figures "9." Now isn't that simple? How many times can you write by hand, using a lead pencil, the figure "9" inside the border forming the cow outline? The sum total of the number of the "9's" that you put in the cow picture will represent your answer or what you give as the weight of the cow. For example twenty "9's" will be 180 pounds; one hundred "9's" would be 900 pounds, etc. Can you write in one hundred "9's," two hundred, or how many? The person having the greatest number of "9's," that is, the largest sum total, will win first prize, second largest second prize, etc.

NOTE: While there are three cow pictures given in this announcement, so a contestant may have plenty of material to work on, only one cow picture is to be submitted with a solution.

How Much Can You Make the "Cow" Weigh?

THAT'S THE PROBLEM!

TRY YOUR HAND AT IT BY WRITING THE FIGURE "9" AS MANY TIMES AS YOU CAN INSIDE THE BORDERLINE OF THE "COW."

When you have them all written in, add them. That will give you your answer to "How Much Can You Make the Cow Weigh." Every "9" stnads for 9 pounds, and the total of "9's" you have written in the cow space is your weight record.

Begin now on the game by clipping out the "cow" picture and start with lead pencil to filling in with the figure "9." You will find it absorbing fun, and every "9" that you write in the "cow" figure takes you further on your way to the big cash prizes that are to be given.

Be sure that the "9's" do not touch each other, nor touch the border of the cow. You may have additional copies of the "cow" pitcure by writing to the Cow Contest Dept., inclosing a stamped return envelope. The extra copies, however, will be on the same grade of paper as this is printed on.

You have a chance to earn $35.00, $250.00, $1,000.00 or $2,000.00, as explained and shown in the Prize List, and $500.00 extra for promptness.

issued to annual subscribers and immediate members of a subscriber's family of ages from 15 to 70 at $1.25 per policy each per year. This fee is in addition to the subscription price. Applicants should give name in full, state age and occupation, and when a beneficiary is given be sure to state full Christian name and relationship to the insured.

Observe These General Rules of the Contest:

1. All bona fide residents of Georgia and adjoining states may take part in this contest, except employees of The Atlanta Constitution and members of their families.
2. Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they desire, provided payment of one of the three amounts designated in the prize list shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one award. Once registered, a solution cannot be changed.
3. The first prize will be awarded to the person having the greatest sum total, which is to be determined by the sum of the figures "9" written in the space designated inside of the border forming the picture representing the cow; to the second greatest total second prize, third greatest total third prize, etc.
4. Any lead pencil may be used. All writing or drawing pens of artists or engineers or their like are barred, as ink cannot be used on this grade of paper without blurring. The figures "9" need not be perfect in shape, but must be complete. Write as small as you like with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make—just so each "9" is fully shaped. Figures cannot touch each other, nor are they permitted to touch any part of the borderline forming the shape of the cow.
5. Copperplate type, shorthand, reproductions or reductions are barred, also duplicates of the original. Every "9" must actually be made by hand with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make, and must be discernible to the naked eye, meaning clear and distinct to a person of average good eyesight or equivalent. The natural eye by those who do not wear glasses, and ordinary reading glasses by those who wear glasses only guide allowed in filling in the figure "9." A "9" with either straight or curved tail is permissible.
6. Every contestant must give the correct total of the weight of the cow in the answer submitted by him. Incorrect statement disqualifies the solution. This weight of course is the sum total of the "9's" he has written in the figure representing the cow. This is important! Your name and complete address must be plainly written on margin of sheet on which your answer is given, or blank printed for that purpose, or a blank of your own selection attached hereto.
7. In case of ties, while there is hardly a chance in 10,000 of a tie, as many awards will be reserved as there are people tied. Before any awards are awarded for less correct solutions, another puzzle will be submitted to those tied on the same order of this one, except a smaller "cow" picture, after which should ties still result each contestant will receive the full amount of the prize tied for.
8. Only one prize will be awarded to a person, household, or group of persons. Any person or household or group of persons submitting duplicates are barred
9. The decision of The Atlanta Constitution must be accepted as final and conclusive in all matters, and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decision of the contest manager of The Atlanta Constitution as conclusive and final.
10. The Atlanta Constitution reserves the right to reject at any time any contestant whom it believes has violated the rules. The solution of the winner of first prize will be reproduced in The Constitution, together with the published result which will be published as soon as possible after the closing date of the contest.
11. All answers will receive the same consideration, regardless as to whether or not a subscription for the daily and Sunday Constitution be sent in.
12. The contest is open to new and old subscribers alike. The regular subscription rate of $5.00 for six months' subscription or $9.50 for 12 months' subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution will prevail. Daily only subscriptions or Tri-Weekly subscriptions not acceptable in this contest. Full amount of subscription must be remitted in every instance. When sent through an agent, postmaster, or otherwise no commission can be deducted. In column 2 of prize list, six months' subscription there referred to can be either new or renewal; column 3, 12 months' subscription $9.50, can be either new or renewal. Column 4, requiring two annual subscriptions, one can be a renewal, but one must be new. A new subscription means one who is not now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, directly or indirectly through any source, and has not within the past 60 days.
13. Subscriptions secured by the means of this contest in Atlanta and suburbs will be delivered by carrier service. In towns outside of Atlanta, where The Constitution has carrier delivery service, the paper may be delivered by carrier, upon request of the subscriber or contestant; otherwise the paper will be sent by mail.
14. A person who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, and paying the carrier or agent by the week or month, or otherwise, may send or bring directly to The Constitution a six or twelve months' payment to qualify a solution. Whatever is due such carrier, dealer or agent at that time must be paid to him as the remittance sent us will date from the date it is received. The carrier or agent will be notified by The Constitution of such advance payments. If all arrearages are not paid the solution may not be considered valid. Renewals on mail subscriptions will be extended for the length of time paid for from present paid date of expiration. All qualifying subscriptions in this contest must be paid in advance.
15. Contest closes Wednesday, February 8th, 1928. All solutions delivered in person must be at The Constitution office by 9:00 p. m. of that date, but may be mailed any time before midnight. Solutions mailed at any post office in Georgia and adjoining states bearing postmark of no later date than midnight February 8th, 1928, will be accepted if rules governing same are complied with. The contest extends from Wednesday, January 4th, 1928, to and including Wednesday, February 8th, 1928. Five days will be given thereafter for those who have not fully qualified for the larger prizes to do so, after which no urther qualification remittances will be accepted.

The above rules are simple, easy to understand, and is all the information that can be given on the contest except that which appears in the announcement of which this is a part.

(Copyrighted, 1928, by The Atlanta Constitution).

Closing Date

THE "HOW MUCH CAN YOU MAKE THE COW WEIGH" GAME CLOSES WEDNESDAY, FEB. 8TH, 1928.

NO SOLUTION CAN BE CHANGED AFTER IT HAS ONCE BEEN REGISTERED.

If you find that you can make the cow weigh more than the first solution which you sent, the only thing you can do is to send in another solution, which must be qualified independent of the first solution submitted. In other words, the qualification of one solution already submitted cannot be transferred to a later solution.

IMPORTANT FACTS TO REMEMBER!

While the amount you pay with the solution does not have any effect on your winning an award, it does affect the amount you will receive should you win one of the awards, as the value of these awards is determined by what the winners pay. This is explained in the prize list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

Address your solution, remittances, etc., to the Contest Manager, Daily Circulation Dept., The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

National Credit Men's Head Will Speak Here Wednesday

Dr. Stephen I. Miller, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, who will address the Atlanta Association of Credit Men at a meeting Wednesday night at the Atlanta Athletic club, finds general business conditions pointing to continued prosperity in 1928, according to a statement from him received Saturday by C. L. Williamson, secretary of the Atlanta Association of Credit Men.

Dr. Miller said he found the middle west more prosperous than it has been in years; the far west as prosperous as it has been in several years, and prosperity maintaining itself in the south and east.

Speaking of the "business cycle," which, according to some economists, is due to swing around again in 1928 and bring with it a business depression, Dr. Miller said:

Years Since Depression.

"It has been seven years since the depression of 1921. The fact that depressions had preceded that of 1921 at intervals of about seven years has caused some economists to say 'Beware the seventh year,' and to prophesy bad times in 1928. I am not afraid of the seventh year for several reasons. In the first place, the United States has the world's finest transportation system, which makes it possible for our merchants and producers to keep their inventories very low.

"There has never been a depression preceded by a period of low inventories. Small, regular orders characterize modern business; and they have made impossible the accumulation of heavy, slow-moving stocks. A business depression is brought about by oversupply; and just as long as producers and distributors carefully observe their inventories, just so long is business likely to be stable.

"The United States has an abundant supply of capital and credit. And nothwithstanding this fact, both capital and credit have been so conservatively used that inflation of general prices has been avoided. This fact is most important, for heretofore business has never entered a period of depression when capital and credit have been sanely used.

Agricultural Outlook Good.

"The outlook in our agricultural regions from Montana to Texas and throughout the entire Mississippi valley is better than it has been for several years. This means increased buying power on the part of the farmer, which is essential as a basis for continued prosperity.

"The outlook for an increased foreign market for American commodities is brighter than ever before. This hopeful condition is in part the result of the rehabilitation of Europe and in part the result of vast loans to foreign countries and foreign corporations.

"In the past it has often been said that 'trade follows the flag,' but it can be said now with even greater certainty that trade follows the placement of capital in foreign countries. The United States has taken the place of England in supplying capital to the industrial world."

Fashionable Store To Open

:: MRS. J. CARROLL PAYNE TO TURN GOLDEN KEY ::

On Famous Old Home Site

BY RALPH T. JONES.

The inexorable chisel in the moving hand of Time works strange mutations in the material world with which man has surrounded himself. Creations of master craftsmen of one age fade into the limbo of memory to make way for new realizations of the craftman's dream. Triumphs of architecture of a few short years ago crumble to provide a site for the steel and stone of the new builders.

Today, on a site which we now consider within the very heart of the pulsing city area, but which, when this story of progress began, was "way outside town," a magnificent edifice, the newest temple to the gods of retail merchandising, lifts its imposing front to an admiring city.

Less than 50 years ago, on that same site, a red-brick mansion, considered then the ultimate in residential luxury, rose to awe our fathers with its comfort and grandeur.

Was Rhode Hill Site.

Today J. P. Allen and company, one of Atlanta's great retail establishments, are ready to open their new building at the corner of Peachtree and Cain streets. The site, which has a frontage of 104 feet, is valued in round figures at $7,000 the front foot.

In 1877, when Rhode Hill, one of the leading citizens of the Atlanta of our fathers, bought the same piece of earth from William W. Simpson, prominent realtor of the day, the price paid was $7,000 for the entire 104 feet front. A price, by the way, considered almost exorbitant, but paid because Mr. Hill was determined to secure the property and Mr. Simpson calmly told him to "take it or leave it at that price."

On that site Mr. Hill built his home. For the red brick he sent to Baltimore and for other materials he sent far and wide, determined that nothing but the finest should go into his residence.

The home was finished just in time for the Cotton States exposition, held on the present site of the Exposition Cotton mills, in 1881. And it was a home that drew wondering chorus of praise from all Atlantans and visitors of that day.

Rites by Only Child.

It is fitting that, on Monday morning, when the new store of J. P. Allen and company is opened for the first time, the golden key in the main entrance shall be turned by Mrs. J. Carroll Payne, one of the best loved women of the Atlanta of 1928, who is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Rhode Hill, who first made the plot of land a famous place.

For it was a famous home in its day. A home famous for its hospitality and its culture in an age which made of home entertainment a delightful rite and whose hospitality won fame that still lingers pleasantly in an age of clubs and automobiles.

Across the street, in 1881, on the diagonal corner, was the newly erected governor's mansion. The state executive home was itself a wonderful building, though not so large or so beautiful as the Hill home. Because of this comparative smallness, much of the entertainment which would normally have centered in the governor's mansion, was transferred across the street, on the governor's request, to the Hill mansion.

The distinguished group of governors from many states, for instance, which came here to attend the exposition, was entertained in the Hill residence and, shortly thereafter, a national convention of doctors meeting here found that in this home was centered the warm hospitality which the people of their convention city extended.

Center of Culture.

Mrs. Hill, mother of Mrs. Carroll Payne, was a woman of remarkable culture. On the upper floor of the home she had constructed a private theater with footlights—gas, of course—drop curtains and fittings just like a regular playhouse, though in miniature. Here many Atlantans of today played roles in the private theatrical productions which were a social feature of the eighties.

The downstairs portion of the house was remarkable for its spaciousness. Doors slid into the walls, and the great hall, sitting room, dining room and music room could thus be thrown into one great reception room.

On the Cain street side was a large bow window and at night, with the lights shining within, the glimpses of a great oil painting was visible from the street, it formed a picture that has stayed in the memory of many present-day Atlantans, as a warm vision of their younger days when they passed and repassed the Hill house on their way to and from the city.

The location at that time was far from the business section of the city. Mule-drawn street cars rumbled back and forth down Peachtree, at twenty-minute intervals, from the "outskirts" to the business district on Whitehall and Alabama. Henry Grady and other leading citizens of the day discussed politics, baseball, bicycle racing and the theater, standing on the front platform of the mule cars.

Mr. Hill died in 1895 and, about five years later, Mrs. Hill followed him to rest.

Until 1907 Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll Payne lived in the old home but then decided the city was creeping up too much and they moved further out Peachtree.

Courtesy to Remain.

For three years, 1907, 1908 and 1909, the house was the Elks' clubhouse. For another year it was occupied as a boarding house and then, in 1910, Mr. Payne decided that the time had come to recognize the site as business property. In that year he razed the old dwelling and erected a block of stores. For two or three years he thought he had outstepped the expansion of the city, as the stores remained vacant. But then tenants came and the history of the later years is known.

Tomorrow morning the newest occupant of the property steps in, welcomed across the threshold by Mrs. Payne, daughter of the man who built Atlanta's finest home there in 1877. Tomorrow she will welcome the occupants of what is, in many respects, Atlanta's finest store. The golden key will turn in the lock and the final step in the transaction from home to business use will have been taken.

The golden key is typical of the change in this, and all other property in the city area. The golden key of time has worked its miracle. The lot which sold for $7,000 fifty years ago is today valued at one hundred times that amount.

The place where southern hospitality extended its welcoming hand, when the glowing lights of home shone through the old-fashioned bow window, has become the home of a great retail establishment.

But one thing remains. The same spirit of courtesy and hospitality still permeates the spirit of southern business. In this respect, the shadows of the past will not resent, but, rather, will appreciate with a smile, the heritage of their day, which still colors the daily life of our own.

School Pupils Asked To Aid In Archaeological Work

Cooperation of the school children of Georgia in the collection of information for an archaeological atlas of the state is being urged by Miss Margaret Ashley, of 522 Boulevard place, N. E., in letters to all county school superintendents.

Miss Ashley asks that the matter be brought to the attention of the school children through their principals and teachers and that the children inquire from persons in their local communities concerning Indian mounds, graves and village sites.

Dr. S. W. McCallie, state geologist, and M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools, have expressed their approval of the plan and copies of their letters to Miss Ashley are included in the letter Miss Ashley is sending out.

Realizing the interest that children take in all matters pertaining to the Indians, Mrs. Ashley said that she was confident that they would give their assistance and help in making the atlas complete.

Superintendent Duggan, in his communication to Miss Ashley, said: "It is to be regretted that Georgians, while being vitally interested in the future of Georgia, have neglected recording history of the past. Our state is rich in forgotten history, which, if available, would be an inspiration and encouragement towards future development and progress. Particular have we been neglected in the rich field of research in which you are engaged and I sincerely hope that every agency will cooperate with you heartily."

In expressing his approval of the plan, Mr. McCallie said: "This line of work I am sure will especially appeal to the public school teachers of the state as well as to the students who are always interested in Indian relics. It is a rare instance in the country to meet with a teacher or a pupil who does not know of an Indian mound or village site. If you can assemble only a small part of the data that is actually already known and place it upon a map, you will have done something that is really worth while."

ATLANTA MERCHANTS TO MEET JANUARY 26

One of the most elaborate entertainment programs ever given by the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association has been planned by a special committee in charge of the annual meeting and election of officers, which will be held Thursday night, January 26, in the ballroom of the Biltmore hotel.

Several unusual features have been planned for the meeting and some of the city's most prominent business men are listed on the speaking program.

Special tribute will be paid the retiring officers who are: Walter O. Foote, president; John C. Sage, first vice president, and the following vice presidents: Harry Sommers, L. M. Anderson, J. G. McRae, George Beck, Nat Ullman, Carleton Smith, William M. Todd.

As a tribute of respect to W. W. Orr, deceased past president of the association, and for many years one of the leading figures among the retail merchants of the city, the members will stand in silence while resolutions memorializing Mr. Orr's death are adopted.

Another outstanding feature of the meeting will be the reading of highlights from the annual report of the president, dealing with the activities of the association during 1927. Foremost among these is the part played by the association in assisting the recent summer session of the Georgia legislature to frame legislation, not only fair to the state itself, but to the retail merchants. The work of various committees during 1927 also will be emphasized, particularly the work done in protecting the retail trading public against fakes, itinerant merchants and peddlers, and against temporary, fly-by-night businesses, which, by reason of their transient character, are usually conducted with little regard for the rights of the retail-buying public.

New Aeronautics Course Offered By Georgia Tech

A course in elementary aeronautics will be offered for the first time at the evening school of applied science at Georgia Tech, beginning with the opening of the spring term, January 23, according to the announcement of Professor R. S. Howell, director of the institution.

Students taking this course will cover the historical development of the airplane, aeronautical nomenclature, general machine performances and other phases of the work. The course will be taught by Professor T. W. Moodie, of the machine design department of Georgia Tech, and the class will meet two nights each week.

Another new subject of interest will be offered this term in fundamentals of geology, which will deal with the earth's common minerals and rocks. In this course the director announces that special emphasis will be given to the study of Georgia clay, as ceramics is rapidly becoming an important factor in Georgia industry.

The course will be conducted by Major Theodore S. Dunn, prominent mining engineer and head of the department of geology and metallurgy at Georgia Tech. Classes will meet two nights per week.

Children's Home Society Aided 1,069 Kiddies in 1927

Illustration of economy in administration of Atlanta's charity funds by agencies of the Community Chest was given Saturday in the annual report of Miss Emma S. Hardcastle, superintendent of the Georgia Children's Home society, which included the detail of care for children in its receiving home at an average cost of 93 cents a day.

The report, presented at the annual meeting of the society, covered activities throughout Georgia, although the funds the society receives through the Community Chest are devoted to its work in the Atlanta region alone. It was shown that in 73 counties of Georgia in the last year the society has touched the lives of 1,069 children—abandoned, neglected, orphaned and ill treated.

This means, Miss Hardcastle explained, that the society has undertaken to find suitable homes for these where necessary, to improve their conditions of life generally and to fit them for existence, mentally, morally and physically.

Helped 439 Families.

"During the year," Miss Hardcastle reported, "we have given study and help or advice to 439 families, involving 777 children, which number with the children already under its care with the start of the year, means that we have touched the lives of 1,069 through the year.

"Of these 777 children it was found necessary to take into permanent care only 51 children—an object lesson in what can be done to build up and reestablish families."

In the receiving home at Ormewood court, Atlanta, where are placed these children whose permanent care is undertaken and whom it is necessary to rehabilitate in mind or body before homes are sought, a total of 16,298 "child's day care" was given—an average of 45 children a day through the year—at cost of $15,174.02, or a per capita cost of 93 cents a day.

Officers of the society were elected for 1928 as follows: Robert E. Harvey, vice president of the Atlanta Trust company, president; Hal G. Voorhis, manager of A. G. Spalding & Bros., treasurer and chairman of the executive committee; John Bishop, secretary, and Miss Hardcastle, superintendent.

Organized in 1911.

The Georgia Children's Home society, organized in 1911 by a group of leading Georgians who were distressed at their helplessness in the face of needs of the neglected children of the state, is announced as dedicated to the task of placing in the wholesome and serene atmosphere of pleasant homes those waifs who otherwise would become flotsam upon the world's sea, buffeted by circumstances and perhaps wrecked on the shoals of undesirable associations.

Through its five field workers, who cover as much of the state as possible, the society works to improve the condition of child derelicts, placing them in circumstances where they are built into useful citizens, it was explained by Miss Hardcastle. The means used are varied, only a small proportion being placed by adoption in private homes.

"Every human effort, we feel, should be made to keep a child with its own people," said the superintendent. "Cases where temporary care is asked during an emergency that need not break up the home, others where assistance from the outside may serve to hold a family together; others where jobs must be found for the parents; cases where children, subnormal, are neglected or misunderstood and should be placed in institutions for training or development, all come within the scope of the work."

George W. West To Aid Campaign Of Local Elks

Gratifying progress has been registered in the selective membership campaign of Atlanta Elks lodge No. 79, which was begun last Thursday under the direction of Dr. Herbert B. Kennedy as chairman, and B. C. Broyles as secretary.

George W. West, who has just completed his term as president of the Chamber of Commerce, and who is one of Atlanta's best known citizens, has been appointed vice chairman of the campaign by Dr. Kennedy and will go directly to work to assist in making the campaign a success.

At the organization dinner held on Thursday, a large number of chairmen of the different committees were present and much enthusiasm was shown. The organization was fully completed and members are now working to secure applications.

Dr. Kennedy announces that there will be a first-report meeting held at the Elks home, and a dinner at 6:30 o'clock Thursday night, January 19, to hear first official reports on the progress of the campaign.

The Elks of Atlanta are now situated in one of the most beautiful homes anywhere throughout the order, and membership provides access to the home. It is located at Peachtree and Fourth streets.

Jaycees Sponsor Home Equipment Exposition Here

Atlanta's first "home show," that will display under one roof virtually everything that makes the modern home, from building materials to phonograph, will be given by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the auditorium during the week of March 19-24, it was announced Saturday by Baxter Maddox, president of the organization.

Indications are that every square foot of floor space in the huge auditorium will be taken by exhibitors, Virgil W. Shepard, experienced in handling many exhibits of various types, is general manager in charge of space contracts.

The Southern Building and Household exposition is the official title of the big exhibit, which will be far more inclusive than similar expositions of the past, which were confined to one definite class of exhibits.

"Everything that goes into building, furnishing and equipping the home, large or small, will be included," said Mr. Maddox. "Held in the early spring, when Atlanta folk are making plans for building or redecorating or furnishing a house, it will provide them with hundreds of new ideas which will be helpful to them and a spur to business.

Building Equipment Exhibits

"We expect to have large exhibits by builders and dealers in building material, labor-saving household devices, furniture, musical instruments, kitchen equipment, electrical apparatus. We have had a great deal of interest shown by dealers in various foodstuffs. There is nothing that enters into a home which will not find a place in this big show."

Committees will be appointed this week by President Maddox to assist in the sale of exhibit space and to make plans for the sale of tickets.

Various special nights, devoted to civic and other organizations, will be designated, and there will be a different stunt program every afternoon and night. A band or orchestra will be engaged.

Virgil Shepard, who has direct charge of exhibit space contracts, said Saturday that he expected to use every bit of space in the main auditorium building, Taft hall and the exhibit building adjoining.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is working to bring to Atlanta the 1909 national convention of junior chambers of commerce, and will devote the proceeds of the Southern Building and Household exposition to that effort.

The shortest people in the world are found in climates of extreme heat or cold.

RABBI STEPHEN WISE TO SPEAK HERE FEB. 7

One of America's most famous orators among religious leaders, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Free synagogue, New York, is coming to Atlanta. Rabbi Wise will deliver his famous lecture on "Jew and Gentile" at the auditorium on February 7, under the auspices of the Junior Hadassah.

ASSOCIATED PRESS (DE STRELECKI)

STEPHEN S. WISE.

This organization of young women, one of the most effective and active groups working for relief of human suffering and social welfare in the city, is bringing Rabbi Wise to Atlanta for the dual purpose of introducing to the city one of the greatest cultural speakers of the modern platform and at the same time of securing funds for the further prosecution of the many charitable activities of their organization.

The fame of Rabbi Wise will thus serve two purposes, in delighting his audience and in providing a substantial sum for important and worthy purposes.

Rabbi Wise founded the Free synagogue of New York city in 1907. Previously he had been rabbi at Beth Israel in Portland, Ore., for six years. The Free synagogue is a center for Jews and Christians alike, where any man can worship according to his own religious faith.

Dr. Wise is of that class of scholarly religious teachers whose convictions, through independence, public spirit and breadth of view, are of inestimable service in a community. He is nationally known as an advanced thinker—an eminent social worker and unquestionably one of the most eloquent speakers in the religious life of America.

Miss Sara Shuman is chairman of the ticket committee for the lecture, with Mrs. J. Abelson as co-chairman. This committee of the Junior Hadassah is busily selling tickets for the lecture and reports a splendid response even at this early date. Miss Mollie Bressler is chairman of the program committee.

"Lady Be Good," from the successful stage musical show, is to start next week also. Herein will be found comedy in large quantities mingled with a lilting love story. Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall have the featured roles. Richard Wallace will direct.

Mrs. John R. Hosch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Turner, who before her marriage December 21 was Miss Gladys Elizabeth Turner. Mr. and Mrs. Hosch will be at home after February 1 at 251 Third avenue in Decatur.

Highlights of Annual Meeting Of League of Women Voters

Atlanta League of Women Voters annual convention came to a close at the Henry Grady hotel after a two-day session last Thursday. The progress of the past year was shown in the reports of the retiring president, Mrs. R. L. Turman, and ward leaders, committee chairmen and director. Mrs. Turman pointed out that the growth of the league had been steady and continuous rather than spectacular which is natural considering that the function of the league is educational. The results, Mrs. Turman said, were shown in the growth of the membership, it now numbering over one thousand members, a greater number of members contributing financially to the league than ever before, and a considerably greater number of workers volunteering their time. The work of the office is becoming better systematized every day and more service is being rendered to individuals and committee chairmen than before, Mrs. Turman said. She especially pointed out the system of filing which gave at a glance a variety of information about the membership of the league.

Miss Kock's Report.

Mrs. Katherine Kock, chairman of the ward officers' council, which is made up of the officers of all the ward organizations, sent her report, illness preventing her attendance, showing monthly meetings of the council, work done in the "Get Out the Vote" and the charter campaigns and general progress in organization. Mrs. Alfred Bailey, chairman of membership, showed the kind of work done to keep up the membership, and stressed the importance of stimulating responsibility in the individual member. She reported practically the same number of members in the league this year as last, numbering in all over one thousand.

Finance Report.

The report of Miss Eleonore Raoul, chairman of finance, and treasurer, showed a doubling of the amount in donations since she took over the chairmanship three years ago, and an increase in other income accounts. She reported that last year was the first time the ward organizations had accepted quotas in order to raise the budget and this had been a distinct step in advance, as it is hoped through this method to sooner attain the league's goal of hundreds of small donations and no large ones. She reported the organization of a men's committee to assist and advise.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, chairman of efficiency in government, showed that under her committee such subjects fell as citizenship schools, pre-election rallies, and meetings in the interest of the new charter. Registration week, "Get Out the Vote" campaigns, questionnaires to candidates, and information about voting. She reported three citizenship schools during the year, and pre-election rallies before the two elections held last year.

League Elections Committee.

Mrs. Palmer Johnson, chairman of elections, reported that the league elected its officers by the modern method of proportional representation, the purpose of which was to give every group of any size representation upon the board being elected, rather than only two major groups. The report showed only one defective ballot cast, and about a third of the total vote cast by mail and two-thirds in person. A demonstration of proportional representation was given prior to election.

Child Welfare.

Mrs. J. R. Weithington, chairman, reported that the league had supported actively the five children's bills in the 1927 legislature, the juvenile court bill, the legal adoption, the non-support, the illegitimacy and the mother's aid bills, all of which passed the house but only the legal adoption passing the senate.

The Pilgrim is the monthly organ of the state League of Women Voters and goes to every member of every local league. Mrs. Alfred Bailey made a short report on the business management of the Pilgrim, and announced that at present the organization department of the Georgia league was responsible for the editing of it.

In the absence of Mrs. W. F. Trenary, chairman of hospitality, who has been ill in the hospital for several weeks, Mrs. A. W. Waldman gave a report showing that Mrs. Trenary had managed all of the league luncheons and teas given at headquarters during 1927.

Director's Report.

Miss Eleonore Raoul, director of the league, showed in her report how during the past three years, she had been more an organizer for the league than a director, heading and organizing the work of the main committees, relinquishing a few each year, first topping the membership, then the ward officers council and for 1928 the finance chairmanship and the position of treasurer. Miss Raoul recommended three things she considered of the greatest importance in the organization work for 1928, first the tightening up upon the requirements of membership, as it is of no consequence to have members who do not understand the policies of the league; second, the perfection of the ward organizations through the ward officers' council, and thirdly, the publication of a monthly bulletin to go to all members and containing especially local political situations and comparisons with what other cities are doing.

1928 Program.

The next two sessions of the league were given over to a discussion of the program for 1928 and the following was adopted as the political program:

Better registration laws and proper enforcement; reduction of council to one chamber of 15 members, one elected from each ward by the city at large and three from the city at large.

Schools—(1) Reduction of school board to seven members, elected at large; (2) school revenue to be not less than 30 per cent of city's gross income.

City Democratic Executive Committee—(1) Reduction of city democratic executive committee from 48 to 24 members; (2) adoption of ruling forbidding city elections prior to October 1.

A budget of $4,600 was adopted and a large part of it raised at the finance and festivity luncheon which followed the closing of the session.

Finance Luncheon.

The social event of the meeting was the gala finance and festivity luncheon, Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Federation of Clubs, and Mrs. Fred Rice, chairman of the Georgia products committee, cooperated with the league committee in putting on a Georgia products luncheon and securing Georgia products to represent every month in the year.

Mrs. P. H. Jeter presided over a Georgia products table and introduced each month in the year, calling for donations of certain amounts for each month. Two thousand three hundred dollars of the $4,000 budget was raised and the meeting adjourned after resolutions of appreciation to The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta Journal and the Georgian-American for the assistance during the year, and to the Henry Grady hotel for the courtesy extended during the convention, and to Mrs. R. E. Rollins and Mrs. Harry Gershon, chairman of hospitality and arrangements, respectively.

Tony Sarg's Puppets Will Give Matinee Friday, January 20

In addition to the regular evening performance of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" that Tony Sarg's Marionettes will give at the Woman's club auditorium Friday, January 20, there will be a special children's matinee at 3 o'clock sponsored by the Fine Arts club.

The well-known story from the Arabian Nights lends itself exceptionally well to puppet presentation. Mr. Sarg and his corps of skilled mechanics and highly trained puppeteers have labored unceasingly for the past six months to make the show even more wonderful and interesting than the earlier plays, "Rip Van Winkle," "Don Quixote" and "Treasure Island," that have toured the country from coast to coast so successfully during the past four or five seasons.

"Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" is the last word, as it were, in marionette achievement. Mr. Sarg has created the most villainous set of robbers and a delightful menagerie, including a beautiful white elephant which performs most amazing tricks! All the stage settings, as well as the "props" for the different scenes, are constructed to scale with true artistry.

These little "wooden-heads" of Tony Sarg's promise Atlanta grown-ups as well as children some amazing and truly delightful hours.

Members of the Fine Arts club will be admitted on membership cards. Tickets to the public may be obtained from Phillips and Crew, Cable Piano company or from Mrs. Ewell Gay or Mrs. Edwin Peeples. Admission $1, children 50c.

Biggers, associate editor of the Savannah Morning News, who are on the program of Farmers' week at the State College of Agriculture here, January 23-28, have been invited to address students in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism.

The new Commerce-Journalism building, which is being constructed on the University of Georgia campus at an approximate cost of $250,000, will be ready for occupancy in February.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS K. GLENN'S Myrtle street home, hospitable and elegant in its comfort and artistic adornment, was open to their friends Friday afternoon to meet that distinguished and youthful author, Richard Halliburton, blessed with the same arresting personality issuing from every page of his books. Mr. Halliburton, traveler, author and lecturer, totally unspoiled by adulation, bubbles over with a flow of genuine good humor, and proved most responsive in his enthusiastic greeting toward strangers. He is decidedly blond in coloring, his blue eyes sparkle with delight when acknowledging an introduction, and he converses in a most natural, unaffected manner, placing everyone perfectly at ease with this gifted scribe who has achieved greatness at 26 years of age. His next book will be written around Rupert Brooke, the English poet who died from blood-poisoning, is buried on a lovely Grecian isle visited by Mr. Halliburton in his travels, and featured in his "Glorious Adventure." It's the author's ambition to keep forever active through this biography the memory of the young Englishman for whom he manifests vast admiration. When in England he met and talked with John Galsworthy and John Drinkwater, relative to obtaining data and photographs for just such a poetical book as he plans to write immediately. Mr. Halliburton's biography of Rupert Brooke will be patterned after "Ariel," by Andre Maurois, the French author who took the life of Shelly and created most romantic reading. With such children of his brain to his credit as "The Glorious Adventure," and "Royal Road to Romance," the eager public will "stand by" awaiting to "tune in" on the "Biography of Rupert Brooke," destined to reap the remarkable popularity of his first books.

Possibly a hundred guests wandered through the reception rooms which excited admiration for the artistic decorative treatment thereof, entering the reception hall and passing into the drawing room where stood Mr. and Mrs. Glenn, the latter costumed with distinction in gray chiffon, and Mr. Halliburton, the author who has accomplished such brilliant achievements in the kingdom of imagination. Here in the drawing room handsome Oriental rugs, rich in design and texture, covered the floor; brocade draperies over ecru gauze curtains were hung at the windows; inviting sofas with downy cushions, upholstered in satins of the finest quality; a beamed ceiling adding an English touch of architecture; together with exquisitely shaded lamps, made the setting so beautiful that the guests would have been contented to linger therein for many hours. Out in the sun parlor, leading off from the above room, colorful and appropriate furnishings charmed the eye. Spring flowers were arranged in vases all over the house, preference given to roses, narcissi and hyacinths. In the dining room, reflecting the taste of such a perfect hostess as is lovely Mrs. Glenn, the table was overlaid with a blush pink crepe de chine cloth bordered with a three-inch hem, and was made to order in Paris for the gracious hostess. The cloth was entirely without adornment save for the graceful and elaborate spray of flowers done in Brittany embroidery in each corner. Springtime blossoms in January in the pastel colored sweetpeas placed in a low bowl of white marble in the center of the table, encircled by four smaller receptacles holding sweetpeas. Guests paused at each end of the table to chat with Mrs. William H. Glenn, serving coffee, and Mrs. John Glenn, pouring tea from heirloom silver services.

LAST WEEK chronicled the entirely unheralded arrival of petite Mrs. James E. Bishop, arriving from New York in her handsome motor, having been chauffeured to Atlanta for a two-day visit with her very good friends, Dr. and Mrs. A. G. DeLoach, out in Druid Hills. It was her first glimpse of the Gate City of the South, and so greatly was she impressed with the hospitality showered upon her here and yonder by a coterie of Atlantans scattering seeds of pleasure in her pathway that when good-bys were reluctantly said she promised to play a return engagement in the springtime.

Mrs. Bishop's sparkling personality and extreme good looks added greatly to Mrs. Walton Clarke's party, and she was a central figure at many other affairs. With Palm Beach as a destination and a sojourn with relatives whose days and nights are filled with the attendant gaieties that go to make this spot such a heavenly winter resort, Mrs. Bishop will spend the remainder of the season in the Land of Flowers. It was her father-in-law, the late Heber Bishop, who presented to the Metropolitan Art museum in New York the wonderful collection of jade of such inestimable educational value to Americans. He was a man of many millions, a world-wide traveler, a connoisseur and an incomparable judge of this exquisite stone.

One of the attractive souvenirs carried away from Atlanta by Mrs. Bishop when she departed for the south was a colored picture of Stone mountain, framed so as to bring out all the beauty of this world-famed monolith, and presented to her by Mrs. Priestley Orme, one of the owners of the mountain, whose home, "Mont Rest," is builded at the foot of Stone mountain, upon the majestic face of which will be carved some future day a memorial of the Confederate cause.

ORDINARILY, a bedspread is only a spread. But in one instance at least it is evidence that the first household of the land is a model indeed.

Last summer, in the Black Hills, President Coolidge flashed his amazing statement, "I do not choose to run in 1928," in his people's eyes. But the matter had been definitely settled in the Coolidge household many years before.

Let the doubtful listen to this story of a spread:

In one of the sumptuous bedrooms of the stately white house, which sits like a white swan on the capital lawns, is a Lincoln bed, rich mahogany, deeply carved, and of sufficient length to accommodate even the late President Abraham Lincoln. Several years ago Mrs. Coolidge, who is never idle, never incapable, and never unmindful of the needs of her household, knitted an elaborate spread equally as magnificent as the inimitable Lincoln bed. And then she took her needle in hand to knit into this lustrous cover the dates of the two presidents: 1861-1865 for Lincoln, and 1923-1929 for Coolidge.

"But," protested Mrs. Eberle, wife of the recently retired admiral of the navy, an intimate friend, when she realized that Mrs. Coolidge through the medium of her matchless spread was definitely determining the president's term.

"Never mind," was the reply from the first lady. And she gave this dear friend of hers to understand that she knew exactly what she was doing when she wove those dates into her spread.

And so in another way President Coolidge has proven himself a model president. Lesser men may manage their own affairs, but not the illustrious president of the land. In his quiet way he thrashed out even so weighty a matter in the heart of the family, and settled this problem of problems with due appreciation of the opinion of the first lady of the land.

Mrs. Coolidge, it seems, is noted for her handiwork. When she left the Black Hills she left a spread of rare design, but even it cannot compare with this tell-tale spread for the old Lincoln bed. In the center is the coat of arms of the United States and in each corner is an appropriate piece of embroidery. The enlightening dates and names of the two presidents are upon the sides, making this new addition to the presidential linen chest an heirloom among white house treasures.

MISS MARY SCHULTZ departed all too soon for her home in Baltimore after spending only a week with her cousins, Misses Ann Lane and Ellen Newell, in Druid Hills. Her cleverness did not reach the ears of Four Women until she returned to Maryland capital, where this talented young girl is an exponent of aesthetic dancing, teaching pupils four hours daily.

She interrogated the masculine gender by a very original and clever system of quizzing, the likes and dislikes of the person determining his penchant for cynicism or the absence of this characteristic.

Her questionnaire ran thusly: "Do you like dogs or cats? Is pink your favorite color? Are you an admirer of the American Mercury?" These three questions were propounded by Miss Schultz, and if she received an answer that the gentleman favored cats, did not like pink, and devoured American Mercury, she declared him a confirmed cynic. One liking dogs and having no antipathy to pink was dubbed an optimist.

Miss Schultz danced divinely, her interpretation of the ballroom fox-trot and waltz arresting the attention of all the beaux at the Biltmore teadances, her popularity being a foregone conclusion the moment she appeared on a ballroom floor.

THE RECENT RUMOR of the approaching marriage of a charming Atlanta widow to a supposedly confirmed Atlanta bachelor has actually passed the stage of speculation. With the next Sunday issue of The Constitution we will announce the formal engagement. Since her days as a member of the "pink gingham apron brigade" the beautiful bride-to-be has enjoyed extreme popularity. For the benefit of those who do not recall the former brigade, it was composed of a number of young society girls who, under the leadership of Mrs. William H. Kiser, rendered valuable service to their country during the world war.

Though she has experienced the bitter cup of sorrow, having suffered the loss of her devoted life partner so soon after her former marriage, she has retained that sweetness of nature that has made her beloved by all with whom she has come in contact.

'Tis said that the somewhat timid and bashful groom-elect had pledged himself to bachelorhood, but it remained for the fascinating brunette to make him forget such vows. His marked attention to his mother and sister forecasts a loyal devotion to his prospective companion and her adorable young son.

Literati of Atlanta Arise

:: Isa Glenn, Former Atlantan, Writes Third Brilliant Novel ::

To Acclaim "Southern Charm"

BY ANNIE LOU HARDY.

Again Atlanta rises to acclaim her own, thrilling with more than the usual zest to the nation's recognition of her gifted sons and daughters. From the rapid pen of Isa Glenn has come a third novel, "Southern Charm," which challenges the south's belief, and mayhap its ancient pride, in the transcendent charm of its womanhood, at the same time summoning for an airing the petty jealousy of northern critics, who mistake true delineation of human character with its attendant weaknesses, for obvious satire.

Pertinent is the title "Southern Charm" to the study of this celebrated quality, as is the author to the selection of her subject. Atlantans—those of you who remember the lovely Miss Glenn—easily recognize in Mrs. Habersham something of the innate charm of her creator, portrayed carefully with an eye, which, in fairness, admits only a retrospective view. A too-close perspective is shorn of all prejudice by Miss Glenn's extensive travels in the Orient and remote corners of the earth, furnishing her a wide range of types.

Mise En Scene.

The story covers a period of twenty-four hours and revolves around the widowed Mrs. Habersham, who is the embodiment of that grace of manner, beauty of appearance and charm of personality indigenous to the south, and her two daughters. Mrs. Habersham has seen to the successful marriage of the languid, beautiful Alice May to a prosperous northerner, Roger Blanton, and the story is enacted in their Park avenue apartment in New York city.

The author relies on a sleepless night's reflection on the past by Mrs. Habersham, turning back through her memory for the story of her daughters' youth in a small Georgia town. Graduating from Miss Cassandra Toombs' correct seminary for young ladies at the ages of eighteen and seventeen, Alice May, the elder, exists to be beautiful and admired, while Laura hasn't a figure and goes unnoticed by the boys. In spite of their mother's careful training in what a southern woman should know, they are woefully ignorant of the fundamentals of life and the plan of creation, except for Miss Cassandra's farewell lecture on morals, which admonishes them "that a lady must be pure" with vague allusions to the scarlet woman of Babylon.

The loss of her virtue results for the daughter who doesn't attract men, due to Mrs. Habersham's preoccupation with marrying Alice May and Laura's determination to make a man look at her in spite of not having got her figure. Later, Mrs. Habersham abandons her wayward daughter in Europe with a small income, announcing her death of fever in Rome when she returns home.

Fashions in Breeding.

Twenty years later they meet by accident in New York—Laura having grown into a poised, attractive and brilliant woman, perfectly gowned and supporting herself. The contrast to the delicate, helpless Alice May produces doubt in Mrs. Habersham's mind as to the hitherto conceded success of her careful rearing and sends her ideals crashing around her. There are, surely, no fashions in good breeding—and yet here is a female of good birth who has achieved something!

Incident to the story are two other characters, Aunt Sallie and Cousin Natalie, whose presence as visitors in the Blantons' apartment at the time of Laura's reappearance creates a situation which serves to redeem Mrs. Habersham's self respect. For the first time she becomes aware of the vital things of life which force into the background her predominating sense of being a lady, and she glories in the realization of a new standard for women as exemplified in her own flesh and blood.

Charm Prevails.

In the end, the charm of the south prevails! Laura's sudden reappearance, which for a short time threatens the age-old tradition, does little more than ruffle the exterior calm and dignity of a well-ordered existence. The idea is carried to a splendid climax in the triumph of Laura's early training over the extenuating circumstances.

The fact that Miss Glenn harks back to the scene of her childhood for theme and atmosphere makes the story especially delightful for many Atlantans, who remember her as a titian-haired belle residing at the corner of Forrest avenue and Courtland street The red brick house still stands on the spot and is little changed from the time when it was built by her father, the late J. T. Glenn, a prominent jurist and at one time mayor of the city. Her marriage to a brilliant West Pointer, the late Brigadier General S. J. Bayard Schindel, carried her to the romantic atmosphere of the South Seas, where she gathered a wealth of material for her first novel, "Heat." The second effort from her pen was the vastly popular "Little Pitchers" which appeared just a year after her first work.

Simplicity of Style.

In all of her writing, Miss Glenn clings with a purpose to the telling of the truth. "Southern Charm" is dealt with in the masterful way which demands attention from the reading public and assures its author a place in the sun among contemporary American novelists. No elaboration of style or burden of detail hampers her fidelity to the picture she paints, much of the subtle charm of her story arising from the clipped manner in which she records it.

Mrs. Habersham belongs, without doubt, among those portraits of American types which live after the vehicles of their expression have passed into the limbo of forgotten things. To have added even one name to the list justifies Miss Glenn's best efforts and ranks her among the notable twentieth century novelists.

Traveling Loan Art Exhibit Sponsored by City Federation

Mrs. James R. Little, chairman of art in the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, announces the completion of the miscellaneous collection of reproductions of masterpieces known as the Traveling Loan Art exhibit in the federated clubs, owned by and called the Cara F. Hinman loan collection. Mrs. Hinman has been gathering pictures here and in Europe for years and it is through her generosity that we are able to give the clubs the privilege of this loan.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the federation, is so enthused over this collection she suggests Mrs. Little extend the privilege to any club desiring an exhibit for an art program or for study. Any club may have this collection—no charge except transportation—and keep them for 10 days, for study, even passing the pictures around through families for study, by making request to Mrs. James R. Little, chairman, Hemlock 6031, 2472 Peachtree street.

The Cara F. Hinman loan exhibit includes those acknowledged by the best art critics to be the masterpieces of the world. One critic gives the following 12 of the most popular masterpieces, not the most artistic or the finest creation, but have touched the hearts and been the genuine delight for many years. They are as follows: Raphael's "Transfiguration" and "Sistine Madonna;" Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment;" Fra Angelico's "Angels and Madonnas;" Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa;" Titian's "Assumption of the Virgin;" Correggio's "Santa Notte;" Guido's "Aurora;" Rembrandt's "Night Watch;" Murillo's "Immaculate Conception," and Ruben's "Descent from the Cross." Besides these 12 many other popular artists of the renaissance have been added. This miscellaneous collection has 50, and will be sent 25 at a time. A short history of artist and picture on the back of each, adds much to the study of the exhibit. This collection will be followed by other collections that are classified in the different schools; these will be ready by February 1.

Social Items.

A congenial party motoring to Miami, Fla., and leaving Monday includes Mrs. Sterling J. Elder, Miss Margaret Elder, Miss Edythe Coleman and M. H. Elder. Mrs. Elder and Miss Elder will visit Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Elder and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Nolan, and Miss Coleman will be the guest of Miss Edith Carpenter.

Liberty of London

Cottons and Linens

Davison-Paxon, Atlanta

Liberty of London.

WHERE Royalty promenades its spectral beauty, there the hearts of the multitudes center. For whatever vogue of fancy may be created within this queenly circle, be it gown, fashion, or decree, the desires of an eager public follow.

So has it been with the use and popularity of anything created by Liberty of London. And now here in Atlanta we have Linens and Tana-Lawns imported by Davison-Paxon company for the women of Atlanta.

You have often heard the saying that there is nothing new under the sun, but these fabrics prove the exception to the rule, for never before have such linens and lawns as these been created.

This marvelous store of Liberty's in London is one of the show places of Europe, in fact it is one of the most beautiful stores in the entire world. It has a romantic and royal atmosphere, for it counts among its patrons numerous royal and titled persons, including Her Majesty Queen Mary, the Queen of Rumania and the Queen of Norway, in fact it is nothing to meet kings and queens walking through the stately chambers of this wondrous store.

American women visiting London invariably pay a visit to Liberty's. Those who have seen this store will recall the stately gentleman who greets you at the door. One might almost mistake him for some ambassador, he is so stately looking, and as you go from one department to the other you are greeted and waited upon by gentlemen in full dress and ladies beautifully, but simply dressed.

The show rooms in which the Liberty Linens and Lawns are displayed are like the rooms of ancient underground palaces, with their treasures of art under sealed glasses, from which many of the designs upon the linen and lawns are taken.

This new linen has drawn the praise of the royal personages. But this is not unusual for Liberty's creations, because nothing except that which is different, having charm and beauty, and made of the very best could come from Liberty's, the show place of London.

Liberty Linen is a fabric that prints even better than silk. The color is brought out in a far more beautiful manner and it improves with laundering. It is distinctive and different, for without that it could not hold its royal patronage. The mark "Liberty" on wash goods bears the same stamp of high quality we associate with the name "sterling" on silver.

The designs on this cloth are delicate, beautiful, and the coloring exquisite. This cloth is printed from wood blocks, some of them a hundred and fifty years old.

Davison-Paxon is featuring its first Liberty offering for spring and summer wear, in designs of flowers and fruit whose coloring demonstrate conclusively the art which is Liberty's alone.

And it is with a justifiable feeling of pride that Davison-Paxon presents the Liberty fabrics exclusively, and they are one of the few stores in America that have been fortunate enough to secure the exedlusive sale of Liberty fabrics. If you will go and see these linens and lawns you will not be able to resist the desire to have numerous spring and summer dresses and smocks made from Liberty Linens and Lawns.

When I Go Shopping.

It seems that it's just impossible to get around to all the stores that are selling such marvelous things this time of year, and at greatly reduced prices. But, you know, I've found a way that not only makes it possible, but provides a much needed period of rest to break the tediousness of the morning of shopping.

Atlanta has broadened out its shopping district until today we have two shopping centers, a considerable distance from each other, and how to get from one to the other on one shopping tour presents a real problem.

Here's the way I did it, and I thoroughly recommend it to all shoppers:

I rode the street cars between the two. I wanted to go to stores in both the districts, and I only had the morning in which to do it. I didn't see how in the world I was going to get to them all, but while I was down in the Whitehall section the thought struck me that I could get up to the Peachtree district in just a few minutes by taking a trolley.

I finished visiting the stores I wanted to go to, caught a street car, and in just a few minutes I was in the Peachtree district.

And not only did I get to go to all the stores on my list, but I got a few minutes of rest and breathing space while I was enjoying the cross-town trip. Hereafter I won't worry about how to visit both districts. I know the answer, and I believe that all women shoppers will find it the best way to visit both districts in one morning.

Mr. Rich Says:

WHAT do you see in the glass of fashion?

Do you see a smartly coiffeured head? Yes, because Dame Fashion's first concern is that her hair be cut in one of the latest swirls. And so the up-to-date miss should by all means wear the bob, and she "must be individual" to accomplish this.

I would advise a visit to the Artistic Bob Shop on the Balcony of Jacobs' Main Store at Five Points.

Mr. Rich is one of the south's most modern hairdressers and is known far and wide for his ability to cut the hair to exactly suit the personality of each person. This is one of the many reasons for his fame.

Mr. Rich specializes in personality bobs and finger waves your hair with the knack of the true artist, into soft lengthened waves that follow the shape of the head.

He also gives the most perfect permanent waves. I highly recommend Mr. Rich and his thirteen trained assistants, specialists in hair bobbing, marcel waves, finger waves and manicures. The Artistic Bob Shop.

Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. McKenzie Honor General Robert E. Lee

Mrs. W. C. Merchant, president general of United Daughters of the Confederacy, sends the following greetings to the Georgia division relative to the birthday of General Robert E. Lee:

"E'en as he trod that day to Go, so
walketh he from his birth
In simpleness and gentleness and honour and clean mirth."

"Robert E. Lee was born at Stratford, Westmoreland county, Virginia, on the 19th day of January, 1807—died in Lexington, Va., the 12th day of October, 1870. Sixty-three years so covered with laurel, so crowded with public services, so honored by men throughout the world, so revered by those who knew his exalted character, has not been the part of any other man. He left not only the memory of his dauntless courage, and efficient leadership in military campaigns and on the field of battle, but also of that serene greatness of spirit characteristic of those who recognize the obligations of civic duty.

From the close of the war between the states until the time of his death by word and deed he was ever striving for the reconciliation of his countrymen, for peace, for harmony; and to fit the youth of the south for a lofty and broad-minded citizenship.

Was there ever any other general who could say as Lee said: "I have fought the people of the north, but I have never seen the day when I did not pray for them," truly "in righteousness did he make a war." A successful man lives but for an hour, an efficient man for a day, a good man for a generation, but a holy man upon the mountain top passes down through all the ages. He rests in the quiet little mountain town in the valley of Virginia, Lee, the soldier, Lee the statesman, Lee the educator, Lee the American, Lee, the Christian gentleman!

Would you know the thing of greatest beauty in all Virginia? Some will say the lawn at the University of Virginia by moonlight, of Goshen Pass when the laurel is in bloom, or the view from the Blue Ridge where the "Shenandoah rolls along," or the more rugged but no less beautiful country of the southwest; but few will deny that among the greatest beauties of the Old Dominion is the recumbent statue of Lee at Lexington. A marvelous and exquisite memorial, stately in its white calm, majestic in its peace, almost holy in its everlasting rest. Tread softly, let your voice be but a whisper, we stand almost in the presence of the sublime.

The great commander is at rest!

MRS. OSCAR M'KENZIE PAYS STIRRING TRIBUTE.

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, of Montezuma, Ga., first vice president general of U. D. C., issues the following stirring tribute to the south's noblest soldier. Her message follows:

"More than half a century has elapsed since the name of Robert E. Lee as a statesman, a chieftain and a Christain gentleman became the symbol of hero-worship to the people of the south. Each year of the halo of praise and appreciation due his name, becomes more radiant. Today not only is his name synonymous with that of the greatest geniuses in our beloved south, but the world recognizes the man who won for himself the name of the south's military genius during the war between the states. The cardinal fact of Lee's life was God—everywhere he had God in his heart, not so much the God of power or the God of justice, but the God of love, tempering the austerity of virtue, sweetening the bitterness of failure, above all breathing kindness with the intolerable hell of war. It is rare to find a soldier making stern war with the pity, the tenderness, the sympathy of a true follower of Christ. Thomas Nelson Page said: "When was that constant soul ever shaken! God has established it beyond the power of adversity to touch, much less to shake it." So many gifted pens have through the years eulogized General Lee, that today we have but to refer to countless authorities who agreed on the greatness of General Robert E. Lee. The Duke of Wellington said: "A man of fine Christain sensibilities is totally unfit for the position of a soldier." But no one doubts that General Lee, the great soldier, was also a great Christain.

Dr. Jones Pays Tribute.

"Dr. J. William Jones, who knew General Lee well in peace and in war, has said, "If I have ever come in contact with a sincere and devout Christian who humbly tried to walk the path of duty, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith and where piety has constantly exemplified in his daily life, that man was the world's greatest soldier and model man, Robert Edward Lee." Gamaliel Bradford said: "Lee had one intimate friend—God." General Lee was always a man of prayer, depending always on the efficacy of prayer. Likewise he was a constant reader and a diligent student of the Bible. Even amidst his most active campaign he found time to read every day some portion of God's word. The one fault which was accredited to his followers was that he was far too lenient. That is a fault rarely found in many men. General Lee is quoted as saying: "I have fought against the people of the north because I believed they were trying to wrest from the south our dearest rights, but I have never cherished bitter or vindictive feelings. I have never seen the day when I did not pray for them." The life of General Lee at home, as a statesman, as a soldier, as college president, as a husband and father ever exemplified the true Christian gentleman."

Among the most recent histories, Robert E Lee—the Soldier, by Major General Sir Frederick Maurice, a noted English authority, is without doubt the most impartial, eloquent and true history of General Lee as followed in the war between the states. The military tactics, maneuvers and masterful leadership are wonderfully portrayed by that great historian and yet he sees the reason for defeat. Sir Maurice says: "The campaign against Pope has seldom been surpassed; and the greater counter stroke at Manassus is sufficient in itself to make Lee's reputation as a tactician. Tried by this alone, Lee stands out as the greatest soldier of all time, not only against Pope, but against Burnside at Fredericksburg, and against Hooker at Chancellorville, he succeeded in carrying out the operation of which Molthe speaks, and in each case with the same result of surprising his adversary. None knew better how to apply the great principle of strategy—to march divided, but to fight concentrated. It was not due to the will of Lee that Pope weakened his left at the crises of the battle of Manassus—but in the rapidity with which the opportunity was seized, in the combination of three armies and in method of tactics Manassus is in no way inferior to Austerlitz and Salmanca. "The result of these seasoned and temperate if highly laudatory appreciation of Lee's generalship has been a steady increase in the northern states of the union in recognition of Lee's claim to a place among the great Americans."

Roosevelt's Tribute.

Another tribute comes from Roosevelt: "Washington himself cannot rank with that wonderful war chief, who for four years led the armies of northern Virginia—Lee will undoubtedly rank as without any exception the greatest of all the captains that the English-speaking people have brought forth, and this although the last and chief of his antagonists may claim to stand as the full equal of Marlboro and Wellington. As time has passed the enthusiasm of the partisan is no greater than that of those in whom no grain of political sympathy with Lee or with his cause can be found." No sketch of the life and military genius of Lee could be complete without the immortal tribute to the great southerner by Benjamen Harvey Hill. He said: "Lee was a foe without hate, a friend without treachery, a soldier without cruelty and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vice, a private citizen, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocracy and a man without fault. He was a Caesar without his ambition, Frederick without his tyranny, Napoleon without his reward. He was obedient to authority, as a servant and royal in authority as a king. He was gentle as a woman in life, pure and modest as a virgin in thought; watchful submissive to laws as Socrates and grand in battle as Achilles."

It behooves the United Daughters of the Confederacy in this the anniversary of the birthday of our great chieftain to pledge ourselves to see that their children are taught that no greater general was ever born to bless the lives of men. That throughout the ages they shall honor, revere and love the name of Virginia's peerless statesman, the south's stainless chieftain, America's ideal hero citizen, General Robert E. Lee.

Chairman of Commemorative Days Memorializes South's Heroes

Mrs. Forest Kibler, chairman of commemorative days, pays the following tribute to three of the south's noblest heroes, Maury, Jackson, and Lee, whose birthdays occur this month:

"To me there is no more beautiful work done by the United Daughters of the Confederacy than that of commemorations of beloved heroes of our southland for, "Poor is the country that has no heroes, but beggard is that country which having them, forgets. I wish to call to your attention the days of commemoration observed by the Daughters of the Confederacy, which include the birthdays of Lee and Rafael Simms in September. Nor are these all who merit eternal commemoration, for the Confederate soldier did not live and die in vain, for his unchallenged devotion and matchless heroism shall continue to be the wonder and the inspiration of the ages.

"'Although the flag they died to save
Floats not o'er any land or sea,
Over eternal years shall wave
The banner of their chivalry.'

"How fitting it is that Robert E. Lee's should be the first of these birthdays to be observed in each new year of our work, for the grand figure of Lee towers above all others in the history of our fair southland, and will tower still higher when future races of American historians shall record its stirring events with impartiality, because he forsook home fortune, a certain future, all in his endeavor to choose what he considered right. When his father, Lighthorse Harry Lee, said of George Washington, 'First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen,' he did not dream by the united voice of the south the same would be applied to his noble son.

"We accept Robert E. Lee as the true type of the American man, the southern gentleman, blood of noble ancestry flowed in his veins and he was a type of the race from which he sprang. His only peer in social life could be found in courts and among those educated amidst the refinements of courts and thrones. How very appropriate that he should become in the latter years of life the educator of the young.

"At the beginning of the war between the states, Lee was 54 years of age, he had served in the United States army for 32 years. He was called upon to make the decision of his lifetime, on one side the tradition of his army service the allegiance to the country which he had served so well; while on the other side was the tradition of family, friends and state. He was destitute of a vulgar greed for fame and without ambition, kept duty as his guide. At his surrender, his greatness and dignity made of his adversary but a humble accessory. Robert E. Lee was deeply, sincerely religious, with a perfect trusting faith in God as is shown from the course of his life and his writings. He spent his last afternoon in a vesper meeting and his last conscious act was on the same evening to attempt to ask a blessing upon the evening meal, when God called him.

"How very fitting that while we observe the birthday of our great leader, we may also pay tribute to the memory of Stonewall Jackson, for the brightest page in history is that which carries the names of Lee and Jackson. Sydney Lanier wrote 'The colossal statues are now set up in fame's glittering gallery of stately souls. There their stand, high reaching, eternal sculptured images of stateliness in sight of all the nation. Glory has set but a simple inscription upon them, on one, Robert E. Lee, and on the other, Stonewall Jackson.'

"It was in the noontide of Jackson's glory that he fell; but what a pall of darkness suddenly enshrouded all the land in that hour! His loss was a severe blow to the Confederate cause, for he had been a tower of strength in every campaign. He combined a deeply religious nature with the highest military talents, beginning every battle with prayer. He was without doubt the greatest lieutenant upon either side in the great struggle between the north and the south. In Valhalla, beyond the grave, where spirits warriors assemble, when on the roll of heroes the name of Jackson is reached, it will be for the majestic shade of Lee to pronounce the highest eulogy known to our race, 'Died on the field of duty.'

"The north and the south now clasp hands across the dark chasm of an unfortunate past and the orator of a memorial address once said, 'By a miracle of American patriotism the riven heart strings of a nation have again been welded so firm and strong that no future tension can ever force them to snap as asunder. The north and the south have clasped hands in an undying friendship.' Let me urge upon you to not let pass one birthday of the south's immortal heroes without some fitting observance of same. Cooperate with the schools in your vicinity in the presenting of historical programs and the teaching of our children the proper love and reverence of those who were honored and respecetd by two hemispheres."

Un Mot Ici Est Bien

By Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor, Ga. Div. U. D. C.

Those who, with valiant deeds enscrolled
The south's greatest story in letters of gold
Upon Life's page, were soldiers three:
Maury, Jackson and Robert E. Lee.

Courageous ever—heroes, indeed,
Devotion to honor their life's great creed;
Adherance to Cause their message must be:
Maury, Jackson and Robert E. Lee.

Down the annals of time in greatest splendor
We read of their valor and noble surrender;
And through our tears the glory we see
Of Maury, Jackson and Robert E. Lee!

Mrs. Bankston's Card Expresses Thanks To Judge Ernest Kontz

Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, of Covington, president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., expresses thanks to Judge Ernest C. Kontz, of Atlanta, in the following card for providing the floral wreath placed on the statue of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy, unveiled recently in Washington, D. C. She says:

"Your president wishes to extend thanks to Judge Ernest C. Kontz, of Atlanta, who represented the mayor of Atlanta at the unveiling of the Alexander Hamilton Stephens statue in Washington, D. C., recently for providing the exquisite wreath of red and white roses and carnations that was placed on the statue by Mrs. Horace N. Holden, of Athens, as the official representative of the president of the Georgia division, U. D. C. and for other courtesies extended the representatives of the Georgia division.

"We have received a copy of the brilliant address he delivered on this occasion in behalf of Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, who could not attend, from which we quote the following beautiful thought:

"'Georgia places this memorial, not because he was a member of congress, not because he was senator-elect, not because he was governor of Georgia, not because of the mere brilliancy of his intellect nor indeed because of the purity of his soul, but because there was in him that which flowered in his matchless defense of the south, and because of his vision of the soul of liberty which dwells in the principles of the sovereignty of the states, without which our American government would be a sham and a delusion, the cloak of tyrann and the instrument of oppression.'"

R. E. Lee Chapter To Honor Lee.

The Robert E. Lee chapter of College Park will give a program in honor of the birthday of General Robert E. Lee, January 19. Miss Mary Gray will award a medal which will be given with appropriate ceremony, Rev. Carter Grey acting as chaplain for the occasion. Dr. B. D. Grey will deliver the address.

Historical Quiz Issued For Program On Confederate Heroes

1. (a) What was the watchword of Lee's life?
(b) What were his orders toward the innocent and defenseless?

"The commanding general thinks that no greater disgrace could befall the army and throughout it, our people than to commit outrage on the innocent and defenseless. It must be remembered that we make war only on armed men."

This order will remain the "undying message of Lee," for all his property has been taken by the federals. His wife and daughter were homeless, yet he did not fail to return good for evil.

2. (a) How many generals were placed in command of the federal groups before Lee surrendered?
Four.
(b) Name them.
McDowell, McClellan, Meade and Grant.

3. (a) What caused Lee to surrender?
Insufficient supplies and men, and his inability to obtain either. When he surrendered to Grant at Appomattox Court House he had only 8,000 men, while Grant's army numbered about 200,000.
(b) What did he say about surrendering?
He said "There is nothing left for me but to go and see General Grant and I would rather die a thousand times." So with heart bursting with grief he once more did his duty. He went to General Grant and surrendered himself and his men.
(c) How did Grant later befriend Lee?
There were steps taken to try General Lee for treason, but General Grant went to the president and told him that his (Grant's) honor was pledged for the safety of Lee, and that he wished him to be let alone. So this request being granted, no trial took place.

4. What was the tribute paid Lee by the London Press?
"A country which has given birth to men like him and those who followed him may look the chivalry of Europe in the face without shame; for the lands of Sidney and Bayard never brought forth a nobler soldier, gentleman and Christian than Robert E. Lee." He was called also the great captain of his age, the great general of the south, "a good knight, a soldier and a gentleman."

5. What of General Lee's fame?
His fame is not bounded by the limits of the south, nor by the continent. It should rest on its own foundation. He did not draw his sword in the cause of slavery—he did not seek to overthrow the government of the United States. He drew it in the defense of constitutional liberty.

Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson.

1. When has it been said that some of Stonewall Jackson's hardest work was done?
In planning for the next campaign when both armies were inactive.
2. (a) How many councils of war did Jackson hold?
One, council of war.
(b) Where was this held?
At Winchester.
(c) Why did he never hold another?
A Winchester he had about 5,000 men while Banks had fully 30,000. He called his officers together and proposed a night attack on Banks. When his officers disapproved he declared he would never call another council of war. Subsequently he took council with God and his conscience.
3. What was the secret of the place he held in the hearts of the southern people?
The non-combatants regarded him as their deliverer and loved him. His hold on the army was his triumph of character. He had by his firmness inspired the soldiers with unbounded confidence. His indomitable will, his sublime moral and physical courage, his faith in his cause, which he believed in his heart was a holy cause, his almost uncanny confidence in the success of his plans could not fail to fill the hearts of his troops with dauntless courage.
4. Upon what does his great and imperishable fame finally rest?
Upon his Valley campaign when his army was never more than 17,000 men and with this small force he was holding 60,000 federal soldiers in the valley and 40,000 at Fredricksburg.
5. What did Dr. Hunter McGuire say in an address at Richmond in 1897?
He stated that he had heard some of the most eminent soldiers and military students of England declare that the English-speaking race had produced but five soldiers of the first rank — Marlborough, Washington, Wellington, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson.

A committee to be known as the "Sunshine committee" was named with Mrs. Sexton as chairman and Mrs. J. H. Bousse, Mrs. Cobb Lumpkin, Mrs. Mildred Rhodes, Mrs. E. D. Pusey and Mrs. Arthur Booth as members.

Resolutions, introduced by Mrs. Cobb Lampkin, were passed, expressing the thankfulness of the chapter that the life of Miss Millie Rutherford had been spared in the fire that recently destroyed her residence, with deep regret that the greater portion of Miss Rutherford's magnificent collection of Confederate relics and historical papers had been destroyed.

A half hour was devoted to a historical program. Mrs. Sexton read a paper on Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. Mrs. Paul Hadaway giving a paper on the battle of Chancellorsville, while Mrs. Reed contributed an article on Lee, and Mrs. Pusey one on Commodore Matthew F. Maury.

Mrs. Wilson Writes Timely Eulogy on Southern Leaders

Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, chairman of Georgia U. D. C. memorial committee and president general of "Confederate Southern Memorial association, memorializes the noble leade General Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and Andrew Fontaine Mauray in the following article:

"Out of the twilight of the past
We move to a diviner light,
For nothing that is wrong can last;
Nothing's immorta' but the right.

"January gave to the world three great and leading lights which rose amidst the pall and gloom of impending strife like meteors, luminous, brilliant, each writing in letters of gold his name upon the scroll of time—his name among the immortals.

"Robert E. Lee, the idol of the south, the peerless leader, the intrepid soldier, the devoted patriot, the Christian gentleman, the highest type of the Anglo Saxon race, whose purity of purpose and fearless bravery won the idolized devotion of the men who followed on through four long years of suffering and hardships without a murmur. Truley we shall not see his like again, but the memory of the stainless name of Lee will be sung in song and story while time shall last.

"Stonewall Jackson, the intrepid strategist, whose strokes, like the lightning's flash, swept all before him. Impetuous, dashing, darin the foil of his matchless leader, through his counterpart in subservanc to his Lord and Master, and who became, at a touch, as meek and lovely as a little child, yet one who rode at the call of duty into the very jaws of death giving all, even life itself, for the cause which he loved wit, a devotion which made sacrifice a joy, ending in the catastrophe which shook the foundations and wrecked th hopes upon which his leaders builded. Their works do follow them, and on through the ages the strategy of many an army will follow the brilliant meneuvers of Stonewall Jackson, of blesse memory.

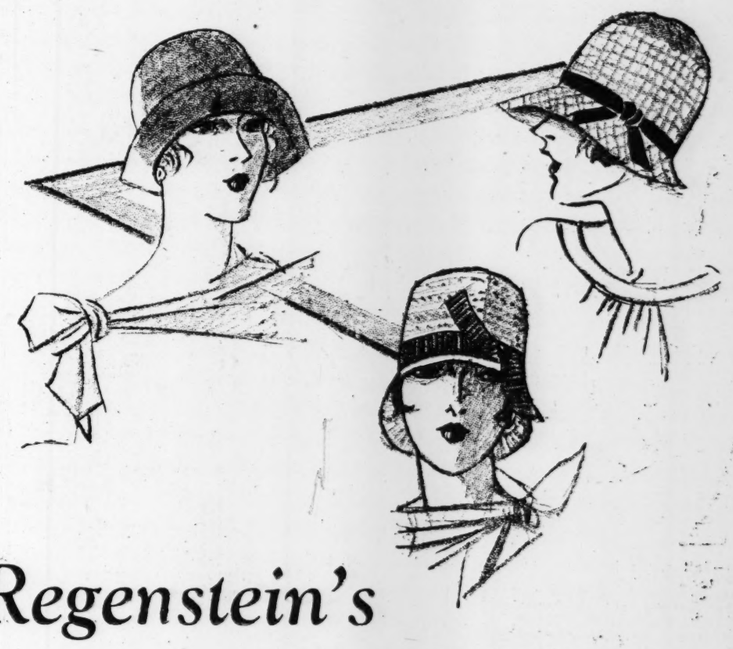

"'Andrew Fontaine Mauray, wizard of the ocean, who gauged and triumphed over the billowy foaming sea, acclaimed the pathfinder by whose chart and compass the nustless multitudes ride afraid in pleasure or duty bent. May our hands l e their cunning and our eyes their vision ere we forget these immortal leaders and the heroes whom they led.

"Lord God of hosts be with us yet
Lest we forget—Lest we forget."

State D. A. R. Chairman Writes On 'Woodrow Wilson, the Leader'

Mrs. George G. Riley, state chairman for Woodrow Wilson day, sponsored by the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution writes the following interesting article on "Woodrow Wilson, the Leader."

"I would rather fail in a cause that I know some day will triumph than to triumph in a cause that I know some day will fail." Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth president of the United States and the first democrat since Jackson to serve two successive terms. Wilson occupied the presidency during eight years of such world upheaval and turmoil, that his proper place in history cannot yet be assigned him.

"Empires grumbled, thrones collapsed, the map of the world was made over and under his administration the country abandoned its policy of isolation and became an active participant in world affairs. A lawyer by nature, a man of letters, he became an educator and won his first attention as president of Princeton university. Wilson was such a great figure that the present can never tell or see how high he stood. If the human race continues to advance in intelligence, good will and the power to pull together for common good, he will doubtless go down in history as our greatest statesman, idealist and prophet. If there should be a retrograde movement on the part of humanity, he will still be remembered by the choice souls to the end of time, as one of the sublime and tragic heroes of mankind.

"While born for a better future than his time was ready for, he yet achieved more in the way of concrete results than any other idealist. It was not overwork that put him out of the active firing line, but the failure of a less advanced humanity to take the great step that he was raised up to take and to lead the way in taking. As Emerson said of his beautiful child, it was not the infant but the world that failed, it was not ready yet for one of so fine a strain. Born in Staunton, Va., December 28, 1856, of Scotch-Irish parentage, he was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson and he was known in early life as Tommy. His father was Rev. Joseph Wilson, a Presbyterian clergyman, and his mother was Jessie Woodrow. He began his presidential career by reviving the practice of Washington and Jefferson in delivering his message to congress in person. His was the responsibility of deciding when a country with a people torn by conflicting sympathies was ready to throw itself into the great world war and when the moment came he took the responsibility of throwing in the men and millions which turned the tide of victory. America has been particularly fortunate in the type of leadership that has been given her and that she has contributed to the world.

"At the time of the revolutionary war George Washington incarnated not only American virtues, but the advanced human virtues of Europe flowering in a new world. There was Benjamin Franklin, the voice of wise, thrifty America, and Jefferson, who had in him the scholarship and the vision of the democratic movement that was sweeping the world. And around this trio was a company of men as fine as ever experienced the hard actualities of statesmanship.

"In the great formative era of domestic and world struggle over the hardest and most vital human problems the race has yet tackled, Wilson emerged as the American, the world statesman, lawyer, seer and prophet. As long as the world listened to him he carried his country, the allied world and the human race to greater heights of generosity and hope and forward marching towards a greater goal than any other leader. After having borne the burdens of a war president he undertook the task of making a peace which he sincerely believed would be a lasting one, and although he succeeded in getting Europe to accept it in large measure, his own country rejected it. And in the fight he broke his health, wore himself out, suffered a stroke of paralysis which led to his death, and declared through it all that he would have been happy to give his life for success of his efforts. As H. G. Wells, recognizes in his history, 'there are few superlatively great years of history that will not have to be written in terms of Woodrow Wilson.' He so projected himself and his ideals and so leavened the hopes of the best men the world over, that the future, even more than the great years of human triumph, is his."

Mrs. Mell Knox Sends Message To Georgia Society

Mrs. Mell Knox, state consulting registrar, sends an important message to the Georgia society today, relative to supplemental papers which are now ready for distribution. She asks that she be notified at once the number required by each chapter, and a report made to her when the work is finished. The letter follows:

"My Dear Chapter Regent and Chapter Registrar: At the twenty-ninth conference meeting in Thomaston, the following resolution was proposed by Mrs. John W. Daniel, regent, Savannah chapter:

"'Whereas, in 1894 Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, the state regent, in her annual report made the following recommendation: "The names, with dates of birth of the children of a member, added to her duplicate application paper, in the hands of a chapter's registrar, or to the biographical sketch in the book of the historian, thus commencing a line of descent, will in time become as valuable to the family record as the line of ascent therein established."

"'We, realizing the wisdom of her recommendation and wishing to honor our children, desire to put in a supplemental paper their names, which may be kept in our state society for reference by those who follow after us:

"'Resolved, That we in this conference assembled of 1927 adopt the foregoing recommendations and authorize the purchase of these papers, and when authorized the state regent shall appoint a committee to pass upon the correctness of these supplemental papers.'

"The resolutions committee recommended that this resolution be indorsed and placed under the supervision of the consulting registrar, with power to act.' The resolution which was adopted by the conference is self-explanatory.

"These supplemental papers are now ready for distribution, and if you will kindly write me the number you need I shall mail them to you at once. You will find one only for each member. This record will be attached to the membership application paper, which is the property of your chapter. The blanks have been furnished by our state society and there will be no delivery cost. For this particular cause you are asked to contribute only the time required to fill out the papers.

"Won't you please notify me immediately how many blanks you need, and upon receiving them fill them out at once and report to me when the work is finished?

"This does not help a chapter to a coveted place on the honor roll, and I have purposely waited until most of those requirements have probably been met. To preserve these supplemental records is a wrothwhile work, so let me urge upon you please to make this one of your first tasks for 1928."

Later a delightful social hour was held.

Wesleyan College News Is of Wide Interest.

The opening year was celebrated at Wesleyan college in the first college chapel after the holidays, Tuesday morning, when Dr. Charles E. Burts, pastor of the First Baptist church, discussed the characteristics college women should resolve to attain at the beginning of the year. Mrs. Glenn Priest Maerz, of the Wesleyan conservatory faculty accompanied by Director Joseph Maerz, gave two violin solos. All Wesleyan students were back, 100 per cent after the holidays.

Of interest to Wesleyan as well as Macon is the announcement that the Georgia Press institute meets at Mercer university February 15-18. The Georgia Press association is sponsoring the institute. Miss M. Virginia Garner, head of the department of journalism here and professor of journalism at Mercer, and Mrs. Willie Snow Etheridge, an alumnae of Wesleyan and former student of Miss Garner, will be among the teachers. Miss Garner will appear on the program, making the address of the Friday afternoon session. She is a member of the committee of arrangements.

David Lawrence, publisher of the United States Daily and president of the Consolidated Press, will deliver the chief address of the meeting Friday night in the Wesleyan auditorium. Following his address, Wesleyan will honor him with a reception in the grand parlor. Other prominent speakers are "Fuzzy" Woodruff, of the Atlanta Georgian; Dr. Andrew M. Soule, of Georgia State College of Agriculture; William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, considered the foremost editorial writer of America, and Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, and former editor of the Century Magazine.

Judge Ogden Persons, of the Flint judicial circuit, gave a striking address to the students on "World Problems" in the chapel Tuesday, January 10. Judge Persons, who is of Forsyth, is the son of Mrs. Mary Barzy Persons, a graduate of Wesleyan in 1869.

Although grand opera is here during the fall term examinations much enthusiasm is being shown by the students. Nearly all have bought tickets and are attending as many of the operas offered by the San Carlo company as they can afford. The students are especially interested since Director Joseph Maerz, of the conservatory, is one of those in charge of the opera arrangements.

The first bulletin issued by the department of Biblical literature came off the press this week. Those in charge of it were Miss Helen White, of Macon, editor; Miss Martha Taylor, of Macon, literary editor; Miss Maude McGehee, of Buena Vista, exchange editor, and Miss Allene Brown, of Cordele, business manager.

Students as well as faculty members attended various conferences during the holidays when Wesleyan was represented at the International student volunteer conference, which was held in Detroit, Mich., December 30 to January 1.

State W. C. T. U. Will Celebrate Anniversary of 18th Amendment

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

Today practically every church in the state and throughout the nation, and tomorrow in hundreds of schools and colleges, at luncheons and public meetings, the eighth anniversary of the 18th amendment will be celebrated. The central theme of the celebrations will be: Prohibition is the best method of dealing with the liquor traffic.

Prohibition is a conservation measure just as are laws about quarantine, impure food or contaminated milk. They all prohibit something, but their object is the conservation of public health and welfare.

Again the Woman's Christian Temperance union approaches Victory day with glad hearts, for there have been many victories and much for which to be grateful and joyful.

Retrospective Look.

We look back over the half century and more and speak with reverent voices of those who so many years ago with no flying flags, no trumpets, no army, but with faith in God, and determination to make an end of the liquor curse, started that movement known as the temperance movement. It grew rapidly, gained strength and momentum, passed milestone after milestone, including pledge signing, low license, high license, no license, dispensary, local option, township, ward, town, city, county, state prohibition, until nation-wide prohibition was reached and fixed into the constitution of the United States.

Tedious Procedure.

Securing the 18th amendment was not a hurried procedure. Other societies and clubs joined hands with these pioneers from the various churches and brought to bear on the question new methods and the inspiration of numbers; medical societies revealed astounding facts regarding the effect of alcohol on the human body; industry showed the markedly good effect of sobriety on business, and when at last 92 out of a possible 96 legislative bodies ratified the 18th amendment the peak of the victory was reached.

The health, prosperity and better living conditions everywhere attest the success of that wise start and sane building of more than 50 years. And now eight years of testing convince the honest thinker he who has no ax to grind, that prohibition is the best method. In the city and perhaps even more through the countryside its blessings are felt.

Resolutions by the two great educational associations in 1927 called for emphasis on teaching the effects of alcohol in schools. Youth should be taught that saloons were prohibited because they sold alcoholic liquors.

North Carolina Glee Club Sings At Woman's Club January 30

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, and Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, past president of the North Carolina society and general chairman of local arrangements for the club, announce the appearance of the North Carolina Glee club, recently returned from a successful invasion of Europe, at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium Monday evening, January 30, 8:15 o'clock.

The story of the development in eight years of this club from a mixed aggregation of voices, banjos, mandolins and dramatic skits that made up a rag-time program to a delicately attuned choral organization that brought down applause from all America and then invaded Europe with equal success reads almost like fiction. It began with the coming to the university of Professor Paul John Weaver and reached its climax last summer when the clubs made a tour of England and France.

One of the milestones along this upward climb was the southern music supervisors' conference in Winston-Salem where the club appeared before hundreds of music teachers from all parts of the country. That ignited the spark that took the organization quickly into the glare of national fame. Music critics attending the conference were generous in their praise. Immediate results were requests for concerts from 30 different institutions and an invitation to appear before the national music supervisors' conference in Kansas City in April, 1925. The club was given a tremendous ovation when it sang at the Kansas City conference. The audience numbered 9,000, including 2,000 teachers from virtually every college department and school system in the country, and its program was broadcast throughout the nation. The New York success was in March, 1926, and the club appeared in the national intercollegiate glee club contest. The New York critics lavished praise on the Tarheel singers. The New York Times described the work as being of "unusual good quality and wide variety. The singers were well drilled in ensemble work and gave the numbers with intelligence and expression." State tours were made and North Carolina was aware that a musical organization had been produced at the university of such quality as to be recognized by the nation. Last summer, not content with American fame, the club set out to gain foreign recognition, and so marked was the success that before coming home the club was offered a contract for an 11-week tour next summer that will carry them through England, France and Germany.

Patrons and patronesses include Governor and Mrs. Hardman, former Governor and Mrs. Clifford Walker, Senator and Mrs. Hoke Smith, Mayor and Mrs. Ragsdale, former Governor John M. Slaton, former Governor and Mrs. Hugh M. Dorsey, Mr. and Mrs. George West, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Kennedy members of the North Carolina society, University of North Carolina alumni, Mesdames J. R. Hornady, De Los Hill, J. P. Billups, J. P. Womble, D. F. Stevenson, John S. Brogdon, E. B. Havis, Jr., Wilmer Moore, Shepherd Bryan, W. F. Melton, J. K Ottley, A. McD. Wilson, Bolling Jones, Hamilton Douglas, A. P. Coles, J. N. McEachern, Irving Thomas, Alonzo Richardson, Norman Sharp, and entire executive board of the club.

Extension Classes Show Few Vacancies.

The Oglethorpe extension classes and educational classes of the Atlanta Woman's club are being filled rapidly, but a few vacancies can be registered by calling Miss Moran, Walnut 7842, for English and journalism; Miss Moran, for French; Dr. Gaertner, Hemlock 0724-W, psychology and dancing; Miss Cobb, Ivy 4280, literary interpretation and public speaking.

Miss Kathleen Rice has been recently elected secretary of Y. W. C. A., filling the vacancy caused by Miss Harlow Thompson, of Comer.

Sacred sentiment marked the ceremony taking place Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at which time the entire student body participated in what is to be known as the annual pilgrimage to Dr. M. M. Parks' grave. Led by the seniors, with Miss Wynelle Otwell, of Augusta, as president, the students marched silently to the cemetery where flowers were placed on the grave of the recent president.

An interesting drama presented Wednesday, January 11, in the chemistry department was "Sir Chemist and His Elements of the Labtoratory." The cast of characters included Miss Frances Fordham, taking the major part, Sir Chemist, and Marteil Hunt, Idell Collins, Clara Brake, Helen Holsenbeck, Dorothy Dunlap, Kathleen Pound, Frances Pound, Mary Harris, Kate Harris, Martha Gill and Catherine Caldwell.

Miss Hortense Breckler Speaks To Council of Jewish Women

Miss Hortense Breckler, field secretary of the National Council of Jewish Women, visited Atlanta during the past week and spoke at a board meeting of the Atlanta section held Thursday morning in the vestry of the temple.

The hard years of reconstruction in Europe, Miss Breckler spent in social service work abroad, and is well equipped to give first hand accounts of the national organization in its function of improving the condition of the immigrant Jewish girl both here and abroad.

"Unless you have seen the need of wandering women and girls for the shelter and protection the council affords internationally, you can have no conception of the work it is doing," said Miss Breckler. "In thousands of cases the men of the family have been admitted to America, the families, awaiting their admittance, wander from the home town working nearer and nearer the coast to be ready for the ship; they become lost to the male member, who imagines them either at home or in the town he had left them, and he in turn is lost to them. It is this lost family that the council best serves, for the authorities immediately get in touch with the council, whose reputation abroad means a solution of the problem." Miss Breckler complimented the work of the Atlanta council particularly in its Americanization methods and results. Searching out through a questionnaire to the child in the school, it is discovered which families are in need of English teaching and on to citizenship. The immigrant education committee provides through the proper channels, principally night schools and home classes in groups where women cannot leave their families, for the teaching of the adults and opens new avenues in hitherto partly blind lives. Miss Breckler is making a tour of the southern cities and taking a stimulating message of fresh interest and greater need for social service to all sections of the council.

Keep Smiling.

When we find it easier to sigh than to laugh, and easier to grumble than to sing, it is high time to take ourselves in hand. It is evident that we are not keeping fit. We need to check up on our habits of body, habits of mind, habits of heart.

Perhaps we are not walking enough, perchance not playing or singing enough, possibly not forgetting ourselves and our cares enough in loving care for others; most likely of all, we are not spending enough time in sweet companionship with our Lord.

The teacher who is not light hearted and cheery is sadly handicapped. As flowers turn gaily to the sunlight, but droop on gloomy days, children respond to good humor and happiness.

The business man blunders stupidly both at home and among his employees, if he fails to keep his spirits up, and a smile at least within easy reach.

Mrs. Apperson's Message.

Mrs. L. L. Apperson sends the following message to the new publicity superintendents of North Georgia W. M. S.:

"Requests come for missionary bulletins to arrive in time for certain metings. It is my intention to have them out in ample time for your first Monday meeting, but they do not always reach me in time for this. This time, for example, they did not come to me from Nashville until after the first Monday's meeting. It is impossible for me to write each superintendent (nearly 500) each time this occurs, as this would greatly increase my postage bill. I always endeavor to get them out to you as soon as they reach me.

Information about your clippings will be given at your first district meeting.

It was stated that no apportionment would be assigned the circles for this year, though the amount of $8,000 apportioned the women of this church will again be the goal. Reports showed that every circle met the opportionment for 1927, and most of them went far beyond this amount last year in paying a deficit of 1926.

Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, third vice president, was placed in charge of this department. The devotional chairman, mission study, literature and stewardship chairmen have been assigned for service in this department, together with leaders of the Y. W. Mrs. Gordon Singleton was welcomed home after an absence of some weeks in Texas.

Jeffries' resolutions looking toward the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Second Baptist church in 1929 were adopted, the plans to include the publication of a historical record of the church in book form, similar to the valuable semi-centennial record by Dr. M. L. Brittain 23 years ago, and this celebration to be known as the diamond anniversary.

Chinese Christians Form Novel Plan.

The January bulletin of Missionary News gives a most interesting article on how the Chinese women raise their money. The following about their "Memorial Roll" gives an idea of how ingenious they are and at the same time keeps their loyalty to their new faith:

In non-Christian families large sums are wasted at every funeral for "ghost money" and other articles that are burned for the use of the dead. The Christians cannot engage in such rites; and yet their refusal to participate often brands them as stingy and unfilial. By a happy idea, they now pay into the missionary society the money that would formerly have been used for heathen practices, and they receive in return a handsome certificate which can be displayed at the funeral and even carried in a chair of honor in the funeral procession. There are three kinds of certificates for adults, costing, respectively, $25, $50 and $100 each, and two kinds for children, one at $5 and the other at $10.

Briefly Told

Paxon, founder of the Business Woman's league of the Second Baptist church, has the great satisfaction of knowing the recent annual report of the organization revealed that more than $100,000 has been expended for church and charity purposes during the 14 years of the existence of the society.

Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, director of the social department of the women's work, was hostess at the dinner Wednesday in the Second Baptist church assisted by the women's Bible class. Many enjoyed the delightful dinner, followed by a meeting of workers' council and prayer meeting.

Miss Royden's Engagements Cancelled.

A triumphant note comes from Chicago, to quote from the Associated Press: "The Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church in Chicago has cancelled an address scheduled for February 12 because Miss Agnes Maude Royden, British evangelist, uses cigarettes. The Boston branch of the same society broke an engagement because the members objected to her views on the companionate marriage." Miss Royden is one of England's foremost preachers. The engagement before the Chicago society was booked some time back, but Mrs Dan D Brumbitt, wife of the representative of that name, on learning of Miss Royden's habits and ideas so entirely out of unison with the women whom she represented, immediately took steps to cancel the engagement.

It is loyalty like that which will keep floating the unsullied banner of pure womanhood with its high ideals and lofty aspirations.

Miss Baxter Receives Request For a Georgia Lantern Slide

Interesting data has been sent Miss Alice Baxter, chairman of forestry and conservation for Georgia federation, by Mrs. Charles Cyrus Marshall, chairman of conservation for the New York State federation. She requests of Georgia a lantern slide depicting some outstanding natural scenic spot in Georgia, to use in honor of the birthday of John Burroughs. She calls this a special feature of conservation week and is asking various states to give her slides for this exhibit.

Miss Baxter requests the Georgia State Forestry association to select this slide and the association, through its president, C. M. Harmon, 701 Forsyth building, Atlanta, Ga., in cooperation with Georgia's federation chairman, will carefully consider any photographs or suggestions coming to the association from the state.

America Beautiful Contest.

Mrs. Marshall originated the slogan, "Keep America Beautiful," and it has been adopted by her division for the season's work. In addition to the request for a slide from Georgia, Mrs. Marshall is offering from the National Life Conservation society, of which she is president, a series of prizes for the best original poem on some specific American scene, this offer being open to the United States and Canada. Mrs. Marshall's letter is as follows:

"To those valuing the beauty of American scenery and to those interested in the development of native poetry this communication is addressed. The National Life Conservation society offers prizes for the best original poem written about some specific American scene, preferably one situated in the writer's native state or in one in which he resides. The poems will be read by a committee, which will select the best one from each state and these will be sent to the final judges.

Object.

"To arouse appreciation of the outstanding features of American scenery, to the end that neglect or exploitation shall not be allowed to impair or destroy their beauty, and at the same time to stimulate the production of poetry which directs attention to those scenic spots by depicting the beauty and sublimity of some such manifestation of nature in each state.

"Anyone residing in the United States or Canada is welcome to enter the contest. There is no age or sex restriction. Teachers and leaders of organizations are requested to invite those who come under their influence to take part in the contest.

"The prizes include: First prize, $100; second prize, $50; five prizes, $10 each (seven prizes).

Rules of Contest.

"(1) All poems must be original; (2) not more than two poems may be entered by one writer; (3) no poem will be returned, writers should keep copies, and please do not send return postage; (4) an assumed name should be signed to the poems with the correct name of the city or state, enclosed with the poem in a sealed envelope must be the name and address of the writer; (5) the contest opened November 1, 1927, and closes March 1, 1928."

Mrs. Marshall is president of the National Life Conservation society and is conducting this America Beautiful contest in cooperation with the New York State federation. Mrs. Marshall writes "we would appreciate it very much if you will extend the invitation to write for the contest to those in your state who may be interested. I know that you have very beautiful scenes there, full worthy subjects for the most skillful pen. It is our intention to have the prize-winning poems of the contest read at the celebration, April 3, as part of our program." Please send all poems to Miss Alice Baxter, chairman of conservation and forestry, Georgia State Federation of Women's Clubs, 826 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga.

Tallulah Principal Receives Letter of Thanks From Mr. Beck

Miss Ann Carrington Davis, principal of Tallulah Industrial school, is in receipt of a letter of thanks from Lewis H. Beck, benefactor of the school and donator of $25,000 scholarships. He gave the fund to purchase Christmas gifts for over 200 children enrolled as pupils at the school, and also furnished fruits, candies, nuts and raisins for the group.

Mr. Beck holds the interest of the school very near to his heart and is ever ready to aid in the education of underprivileged mountain children. The gifts for the tree were wrapped and packed in Mrs. Howard McCall's room at the Georgian Terrace, by a coterie of ladies residing at the hotel, who assembled several consecutive evenings to finish the undertaking. Mr. Beck's letter to Miss Davis follows:

"December 22, 1927.

"Miss Anne Carrington Davis, Tallulah Falls Industrial School, Inc., Tallulah Falls, Ga.

"Dear Miss Davis: I received today your letter of the 21st and along with it came the pretty and useful scarf. I am very much gratified that the Christmas tree was such a success and am indebted to you and other good ladies who made it possible by preparing this tree for the children this Christmas. Of course, I could never have done it myself, but it seems to have been such a pleasure for the ladies to take the matter in hand and through you to carry it to such a success that it has given to me a most delightful Christmas.

"I wish you to express my hearty thanks to those who prepared the scarf, for me, which I will wear at the proper time, I know, with a goodly amount of pride. On yesterday my mail brought in quite a floodtide of Christmas greetings from the children of the school, who seem to have been a recipient of some gift from the tree. I never saw such a mass of Christmas cards gotten together at one time. To all of these, who were so thoughtful of 'Uncle Lewis' please convey my love and best wishes.

"And now, good lady, for you and those, who assisted you in preparing this tree for the children, I wish to express my heartiest thanks and best wishes,

"Sincerely,

"(Uncle) LEWIS H. BECK."

Cairo Club Plans To Erect New Club Building

Cairo Woman's club opened its January meeting with an invocation offered by Mrs. J. S. Weathers. In the absence of Mrs. W. B. Roddenbery, clubhouse chairman, Mrs. J. B. White stated that the blue prints for the new clubhouse had been given to contractors and that bids were beginning to be made.

The committee appointed at the December meeting to canvass in regard to securing the services of Mrs. Dull for five cooking lessons to be given the latter part of January was asked to continue their work and especially to confer with Miss Dora Marshall, county demonstrator, in an effort to obtain the cooperation of the ladies throughout the county.

A letter from Mrs. Norman Sharp, editor woman's department of the bureau of markets, was read to the club members, in which she urged that beginning with New Year's day one Sunday each month be observed as Georgia Products day. A motion was carried that the Cairo Woman's club observe the third Sunday of each month as Georgia Products day.

The visit of H. W. Harvey, state landscape gardener, to Grady county on January 12 and 13 and his speech at the Cairo school auditorium Friday afternoon, January 13, were announced.

Mrs. John Wight, Mrs. O. G. Rosser, Mrs. B. W. Twitty and Mrs. Frank Massey were welcomed as new members. The special feature of the program was the life sketch of "William Alexander Percy." Miss Corinne Womble brought out the characteristics of Mr. Percy as a lawyer, a prominent worker in the Mississippi flood relief work, and as a classic and modern poet in a way that made the audience feel a just pride in another of Dixie's sons. Mrs. W. R. Eskew rendered the humorous reading, "A Love Letter," from Booth Lowry.

Mrs. Farmer Gives Publicity Rules To Clubwomen

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, chairman publicity Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs, writes on "Efficient Club Publicity." She says: "A newspaper's stock in trade in space. When we ask for that space we should reciprocate by filling it with news, not views. The latter are furnished by highly paid men and women. Certain rules govern all newspapers; others govern each particular paper. These we should learn and respect. The Atlanta newspaper women are long-suffering and kind and many club reporters have won newspaper positions by being willing to take advice from the women on the job.

"One word of an advance story is worth ten as an obituary of past happenings. The general federation news prizes are all for advance stories. Whenever possible, give the club program before it is presented. Let your next story tell only what was interesting at the meeting. Much of the proceedings of a meeting are merely routine such as govern all well regulated clubs. More is only a matter of record and can be found in the minutes. But if a club has done something new or unusual; if it has developed a better method of carrying out a federation project; above all, if it has found a painless method of raising funds, that's news and will be welcomed. Give the item of chief interest the lead even though it was last on the program; timely stories get the best positions; concise stories are read; newsy stories advertise your club and help others; nouns and verbs tell news; adjectives are usually only opinions; handle with care."

Clubwomen Urged To Select Leaders With Standards

Washington, D. C., January 14.—Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the mid-winter meeting of the board of the directors, in session in Washington, D. C., last week urges women to select leaders by standards that they demand in men representatives. Ability instead of personality was stressed as the most valuable trait of women leaders at the meeting.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Georgia director for the general federation, was selected to preside over the directors' breakfast at the convention in San Antonio, May 29 to June 6. A committee from the board present at the committee hearing in both house and senate on the Capper-Ketchum bill in order to keep the body informed was pleased to know that the amendment asked for by the federation was agreed to by leaders.

One thousand new subscribers to the Federation News and 30 clubs with 100 per cent subscribers were reported. The club at Round Oak, Ga., received honorable mention in the list of clubs in outstanding achievements, and answers to the questionaires sent in by the clubs chronicling achievements were astounding.

Mrs. Sherman, in her report, gave proof which, she says, furnishes testimony of insurgent efforts against the government through efforts to reach women and children.

Tallulah Falls Industrial school in the mountains of north Georgia was described at the meeting by the director, Mrs. Richardson, giving a splendid report of this institution. At a tea given for the presidents at the residence of Mrs. John Spiel, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia federation, was an honored guest.

Crew, under whose guidance and direction the the 300 canvases done by Georgia artists is being assembled and hung in the gallery on the sixth floor of the department store.

The exhibits will be divided into seven general classifications, as follows: Original oil, water color or pastel paintings; etchings and drawings in black and white; sculpture (not over 30 inches high); original designs in textiles, rugs, tapestries, book plates and architecture and block prints; hand weaving from original designs; feather fans; wood carving and inlay and pottery.

Cash prizes will be offered in each classifications, the winner being selected by a special committee of the Atlanta Art association, including J. Carroll Payne, J. J. Haverty, Mrs. Frank Inman, Dr. M. L. Brittain, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Wilbur Murtz, Mrs. C. M. Jerome, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High school.

The purpose and aim of this exhibition is to concentrate attention upon the artistic talent of Georgia, and follows the lead of great department stores in spreading general appreciation of things artistic, and planting the fundamental principles of good taste. The exhibition will continue ten days, and provide a means for the public to view the canvases without any cost whatsoever, and an opportunity to learn at first hand the high quality of the work being accomplished by Georgians. It will also build up and encourage a patronage for paintings done by these artists.

Tennille Club Redeems Bonds At Meeting

Tennille Woman's club held the January meeting at the clubhouse with Mrs. R. F. Theis, Mrs. J. C. C. Wright, Mrs. Will Brantley and Mrs. Lamar Brantley as hostesses.

The president, Mrs. W. C. Little, presided. Mrs. Meriwether, the treasurer, gave a most gratifying report, in which nearly $140 was realized from a bazar, the club's total assets being a goodly sum, it was voted to use $200 for the bonded indebtedness. The women, with an intensity of purpose that will carry things over, have striven every year to pay as much of this as possible and hope ere the expiration of the time limit that every bond will have been redeemed.

Mrs. Theis, building chairman, reported some money made during the month, and projects afoot for work to be done at an early date. Mrs. Brantley, chairman of grounds, reported work done at an expenditure of $5 during the month. She asked that some action be taken to protect the shrubs and plants. Mrs. Brantley has worked untiringly to build up and beautify the grounds and she deserves the cooperation of every member; so, a committee was appointed to ask the city fathers' help in keeping the flowers and shrubbery from being trampled or molested. Mrs. Roy Smith, music chairman, who is also state chairman of American music in the federation, reported having organized a junior club—32 members enrolling.

Among the communications read by Mrs. Alex Brown, corresponding secretary, was a letter from Mrs. E. L. Barnes, Jr., of Milledgeville, asking our assistance towards equipping a band for the boys of the Georgia Training school. Each district is to furnish an instrument, so, the club voted that a contribution be forwarded to Mrs. Barnes for this worthy purpose. An interesting theme for discussion was the laying of plans for the entertainment of the Washington county federation, which met Tuesday, January 30, with the Tennille Woman's club as hostess. Every federated club in the county was invited, and every local member is looking forward with pleasant anticipation to their coming.

Mrs. Roy Smith was in charge of the subject, "The Fine Arts." The program was as follows: Vocal solo, "Little Girl Blue," Marjorie Corbett; paper on "Art," Miss Clara Davis; clipping, "Inspirational Moments," Mrs. H. M. Franklin; vocal duet, "Wild Irish Rose," Catherine Purvis, Winifred Scott; paper on "Literature," Mrs. Dan Blitch; vocal solo, "Sorter Miss You," Miss Evelyn Meadows.

Mrs. Blitch and Miss Meadows have recently come here to reside and they will be charming acquisitions to literary and musical circles.

Blackshear Club Honors Mrs. Brantley.

The Blackshear Women's club recently entertained with a beautiful luncheon in honor of the state president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, the affair formally opening and dedicating the recently completed club rooms of the Blackshear organization. The dedication address was made by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, who spoke to the large number of women present. Mrs. G. V. Cate, president of the eleventh district federation, and Mrs. C. H. Leavy, corresponding secretary, of Brunswick, were among the guests, as were other officers of the district.

In the absence of the club president, Mrs. D. B. Brantley, vice president, presided at the luncheon, which was faultlessly served in three courses in the large banquet hall of the recently completed Community building. An interesting guest was Mrs. J. H. Redding, of Waycross, who represented the Georgians of that city.

Following the luncheon, the hostess club convened in its attractive new rooms, Mrs. D. B. Brantley presiding. Mrs. J. H. Littlefield pronounced the invocation. Mrs. A. P. Brantley, a member of the local club, and state president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, dedicated the club home.

In a splendid speech Mrs. J. L. Pomeroy, of the Blackshear club, presented Mrs. A. P. Brantley for the office of director from Georgia to the general Federation of Women's Clubs, and her campaign for this high office was formally launched. Mrs. Brantley, who has made an enviable record as head of the Georgia federation during her administration, was unanimously and with rising vote indorsed by the Blackshear club for the office, as well as by the other clubs of the district represented at the meeting. Mrs. Pomeroy spoke in glowing terms of the brilliant career of Mrs. Brantley in club and other work, as did Mrs. G. V. Cate, president of the eleventh district clubs, in an interesting speech.

Homemaking Should Be Taught Girls by Women, and Not Men

By Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, Chairman Home Demonstration Work, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Dispatches from Washington last week carried an interview with Mrs. John G. Sherman, president General Federation of Women's Clubs, stating the position of the general federation regarding the Capper-Ketcham bill. Also the information that a delegation from the general federation board, in session in Washington, attended committee hearing on this bill, being told it would be presented for passage in accordance with the wishes of the federation. But many things can happen to a bill after it leaves the committee and every club woman in Georgia is requested to write immediately to her congressman and to Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George, stating the position of the clubwomen regarding this legislation. The senators may be addressed care U. S. senate and the congressmen care house of representatives.

The bill is to provide additional funds for extension work in rural districts. The federation asks that these funds be divided fifty-fifty between the men and the women. Also that the words "and for boys and girls' club work" be omitted. This does not mean club boys taught by the farm agents and the girls taught by the home demonstration agents as we in Georgia know it, but it provides for a third worker, in every case a man, who will teach (?) the boys and the girls. The federation has always fought this movement and a resolution presented by your state chairman at the general federation council in 1923, enthusiastically and unanimously, indorsed, read:

"Be it resolved, That we reaffirm our previously expressed approval of the slogan, 'A Home Demonstration Agent in Every County;' that we reaffirm our indorsement of the policy that club girls shall receive their homemaking training from those trained women agents and women club leaders rather than from men; that we protest against any administrative policy, state or federal, that tends to decrease the number of home demonstration agents in the field, and that we insist upon a policy that will carry equal opportunity, both to men and women, for useful and practical information as the Smith-Lever bill provides."

Club work for boys originated in Newton county, Georgia. Club work for girls was started in South Carolina, just over the Savannah river from Georgia. The extension work has reached its highest development in the south since the government adopted these plans of Georgia and our sister state and made it nation wide. Write to Washington, stating the position of the Georgia women on this legislation and asking support of our congressmen and senators of the bill as the general federation has asked that it be worded.

THE MODEL LAUNDRY

Geo. Griffin, Jr.

C. W. Mangum

THE MODEL LAUNDRY since the very beginning has presented its services on the basis of wholehearted effort supported by the maintenance of a thoroughly modern building equipped with every known laundry facility.

The uppermost desire of the company is to satisfy its customers from week to week and year in and year out. Its policy has been closely patterned after these ideals and the continued growth and rapidly growing clientele is evidence of the strict adherence to them.

Same Efficient Management

The management and ownership of The Model Laundry will remain the same as it has the past eight years; and no other interests direct the course of the company. Its policies are laid down firmly and steadfastly by Geo. Griffin, Jr., and C. W. Mangum, who by their experience and square dealings have won the friendship of families and business organizations throughout the city.

Dependability

In the building of a business, dependability plays a major role. The public demands an observing and attentive service that can be depended upon. And in the laundry business there must be no irresponsible factors to disrupt the operations and schedules of household or institution. A laundry service must be dependable above all things, and in fulfilling the public's demand we have secured the most responsible driver-salesmen and equipped them with trucks of most dependable make.

Our clientele includes homes in every section of the city as well as some of the leading institutions here. We have a special department for all classes of institutions, such as clubs, hotels and restaurants, whose laundry work must be absolutely clean and sanitary in every respect. Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, state chairman of publicity for Georgia branch P.-T. A., issues the following state and national P.-T. A. news:

Mrs. J. L. Matheson, of Hartwell, chairman of thrift, has arranged for W. A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta schools, to talk from WSB January 17, at 10:30 a. m. (Atlanta time) on "Significance of National Thrift."

The Georgia Bulletin, ably edited by Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, is attracting much favorable comment among the national leaders. A letter from Newell W. Edson, secretary Social Hygiene Association of America, reads: 'In my parent-teacher routine I see many state Bulletins and browse over them all. I read few carefully. The December number of the Georgia Bulletin I read practically from cover to cover and found it brief, newsy and snappy. It should prove of considerable help in your local associations in keeping in touch with parent-teacher news and progress. I congratulate you upon it.' Edwin Mason, national chairman of endowment, speaks highly of the December Bulletin and the message of the president, indorsing her suggestion of "doing things together."

Mr. Edson and Dr. Ernest Groves, noted psychologist, will be among the speakers at the state convenion, April 10-12, in Atlanta. A feature of the convention will be the press breakfast April 11.

Daddies Quizzed.

At a successful daddies' night recently at the South Rome P.-T. A. the daddies were quizzed: Who is your child's teacher? What grade is he in? What was his mark for last month? What salary does the teacher receive? How much did the new building cost? How many fire escapes has it? What is the approximate cost per day to operate? Were some of the questions propounded to show it is well sometimes to learn how much we do know. Finding no 100 per cent papers turned in, the superintendent requested them to stay after the regular program when he gave some facts which the local report said "They just ate up." North Rome also had a successful daddies' meeting in connection with a safety program.

Social Hygiene.

Thirteen state conventions have held social hygiene programs, in addition to several round table conferences. It is evident that parents and teachers are facing squarely the problem of boy and girl relationship with a determination to solve them. Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, efficient president of the sixth district, continues to bring in associations. The Jenkinsburg association, Mrs. John Bankston, president, has affiliated, with others soon to become members.

Mrs. Slate introduced the teachers with appropriate poetry that she composed. The attendance prize was won by Miss McIntyre's class, kindergarten.

P.-T. Council Pre-School Work Discussed by Atlantans

Pre-school department of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council met Wednesday in Rich's school rooms. The study class conducted by Miss McAlpine reviewed the work of the past three months and will take up sex education, a new phase of the work in February. Mrs. Kate Jolly, P.-T. A. fifth district chairman of kindergarten and extension and teacher of the Nellie Peters Black kindergarten, gave a talk on the "Teacher's Viewpoint" and pointed out the many advantages in the school the children and young mothers enjoy that were denied those of a few years ago.

Willis Sutton spoke on the "Value of Pre-school Work," citing it as the most important phase of P.-T. A. work because so much depends in after-life upon the physical well being and training of the young child. Mrs. W. H. Parks, council pre-school chairman, read an excerpt from Arthur Dean's column, "Your Boy and Your Girl," relative to what the teacher has a right to expect from the parent. Miss Lillian Alexander, supervisor of city nurses, offered to secure speakers for the circles when needed if notified several days in advance. The assistance and cooperation received from the city health department through Miss Alexander's department in all phases of pre-school work has been of invaluable aid in assuring the splendid success achieved. Miss Swann, head of the state nursing department, gave the information that literature on the work could be secured by writing the state health department. The Malone prize book was tied for by the Kirkwood and Pryor street circles. This book is offered monthly by Mrs. J. C. Malone to the circle bringing the largest representation to the pre-school council meetings.

Whitefoord P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

The Whiteford Avenue P.-T. A. met at the school Wednesday afternoon with a large number attending. Mrs. B. M. Smith, chairman of citizenship, of the fifth district, was the speaker. She urged all the mothers to register and vote. The P.-T. A. has purchased a chart, showing when and how to register, and it will be displayed at every meeting.

Mrs. Coley's grade, high four, won both prizes for having the most mothers present.

S. M. Inman P.-T. A. Presents Flags.

Samuel M. Inman P.-T. A. met January 6 at the school, when United States flags were presented, also a Georgia flag, to ten classes. The mothers of the P.-T. A. feel that the pride and reverence felt by the children in owning and protecting the "flag of our country" would be a stepping stone towards patriotism and character building.

Mrs. Marvin Perry, president of S. M. Inman P.-T. A., made the presentation speech. She was accompanied by Mrs. A. L. Myers and Mrs. Alfred Barili, Jr. Mrs. Myers made the occasion more interesting by explaining the meaning of the stars and stripes on the flag, red for courage; white for purity, and zeal; blue for loyalty and truth.

The children in each class welcomed this gift with original speeches and expressed themselves with unusual facility and appreciation. Mrs. Albright, principal of the school, also expressed her thanks for the many kindnesses received by the school from the P.-T. A.

S. M. Inman school also sponsored Arbor day. Appropriate songs and poems were read as six fine dogwood trees were planted on Virginia avenue by the school. Many plans for beautifying school grounds are on the way for the spring—a garden, with bird bath and bench is already established, the children work and study plant life there and enjoy the outdoors.

R. L. Hope P.-T. A. To Have Daddies Meet.

The R. L. Hope School P.-T. A. meets Tuesday evening, January 17, at 7:30 o'clock when the annual "Daddies' Night" will be featured. Judge Garland Watkins will bring a message of value and interest. Mrs. Sam A. Johnson will contribute several musical numbers to the program and Misses Sue Downing and Barbara Settle, pupils of Mrs. LaFontaine, will present interpretative dances, the popular "Powder Puff" being featured. A cordial invitation is extended to all the friends and patrons of the school. Situated on Piedmont road.

Benteen P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Benteen P.-T. A. had its regular meeting Wednesday, January 10. A full attendance is urged at the next regular meeting Wednesday, February 8.

POPULAR VISITOR AND ATLANTA BELLES BEFURRED AGAINST WINTER'S COLD

The attractive trio above presents at the left Mrs. Byron Morrison, of Minneapolis, Minn., who, with her two small daughters, is one of the most charming of the winter visitors and is being extensively feted as the guest of her mother, Mrs. F. Burgess Eckford. Mrs. Morrison was formerly Miss Emily West, a belle and beauty of Atlanta society. The lovely figure in the center is Miss Mary Armstrong, beautful young sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Armstrong, and one of the most popular of the younger members of society. At the right is a lovely likeness of Miss Julianne Hagan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hagan, who, with her parents, left last week for her winter home in Sarasota, Fla., where she will spend the remainder of the season. Photos of Mrs. Morrison and Miss Hagan by the Little studio; the photo of Miss Armstrong is the work of Brubacker's studio.

Prominent Visitors Feted At Many Social Gaities

A group of prominent matrons and an equally attractive bevy of young belles vie for social honors as popular mid-winter visitors in the city. The usual post-holiday lull resolves itself into a round of gay and brilliant parties incident to the presence of these visitors.

Mrs. Frederick Remington Greens, of Amsterdam, N. Y., is a charming guest at "Broadlands," the handsome West Pace's Ferry road estate of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, and is receiving much social attention.

Cultural circles are extending a warm welcome to Mrs. Bernice P. A. Fernow, of New York and Clemson, S. C., a well-known miniature painter whose exhibition is now on view at the High Museum. Other artists recently arrived in the city, who are being honored at a series of social affairs, are Roland J. McKinney, new director of the High Museum of Art, and Mrs. McKinney.

Miss Dorcas Hutcheson, lovely member of the debutante ranks of Chattanooga, Tenn., is the feted guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McGonigal. Sharing honors with this popular belle at a series of parties planned by the members of the younger set, is Miss Isabelle McPheeters, of Cleveland, Ohio, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman.

Much social activity is planned around Miss Dolly Hurt, attractive bride-elect, whose marriage to Toulman Williams Hurt will be an event of February 4, a group of teas and luncheons to feature the week's social calendar.

Richard Halliburton Is Complimented.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson entertained at an informal luncheon Saturday at "Broadlands," their home on Pace's Ferry road, with Richard Halliburton, the distinguished author of "Royal Road to Romance" and "Glorious Adventure."

Mrs. Fernow is from New York, but has visited Atlanta before with her husband, Professor Fernow, head of the theredynamics at Clemson college in South Carolina, the study of which deals with heat generation. Mrs. Fernow has also been commissioned to paint portraits of distinguished Americans. Her exhibition is attracting the interest of art lovers in Atlanta's cultured circles.

Can We Renounce WAR?

By James T. Shotwell

Professor of History at Columbia University and Authority on International Policy

ON the 6th of April, 1927, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of America's entrance into the World War, M. Aristide Briand, foreign minister of France, sent through the Associated Press a message to the American people, which, if the events of last summer and more especially those of the opening weeks of congress, furnish any true indications of what is likely to happen, may prove to be a historic message.

"France is willing," said M. Briand, "publicly to subscribe with the United States to an engagement tending to outlaw war (to use an American expression) between these two nations." Then, to make his thought precise and to show that this was no verbal gesture, M. Briand described exactly what the "outlawry of war" means in terms of practical and responsible statesmanship, for he continued in the next sentence with the significant phrase, "The renunciation of war as an instrument of policy is an idea already familiar to the signatories of the covenant of the league of the treaties of Locarno."

France, therefore, according to M. Briand, is ready to make a treaty with the United States which will "renounce war as an instrument of policy," leaving as legitimate only those measures for defense which every nation, as well as every individual, must be prepared to take as a condition of its continuing existence.

When this message of Mr. Briand was widely circulated through the agencies of the American press there were many who asked what it could possibly mean, for in view of past history and the continuing and unbroken friendship between the two republics any such formal engagement seemed to many at first sight to be a needless and almost meaningless formality. The answer to this must be sought in an analysis of M. Briand's record. The man to whom the destinies of France have been confided eight times in all as its prime minister, and who held that position through the most critical months of the World War, is not the kind of statesman to dally with empty phrases on the fundamental relationships of the great nations of the world.

As a a matter of fact, M. Briand's offer is a part of that new statesmanship of peace to which he has devoted himself as a result of his experiences during the battle of Verdun. He was prime minister of France then, and he has told the world since how, as that long and ghastly tragedy proceeded with its sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of the youth of Europe, he determined from that time on to do his best to prevent a recurrence of war between civilized nations.

The treaty of enduring peace which he now suggests we make with France and the replies to this offer proposed in congress now are, therefore, direct historical results of the battle of Verdun. It may yet prove true in spite of what cynics have said in these last years that the World War was, after all, a "war to end war." Whether that is to be the judgment of history or not will depend to a large degree upon the answer which the American people through our government now make to the proposal of France.

But, taking the French offer at its face value, what does it mean in terms of American institutions, history and commitments? Can we safely "renounce war as an instrument?" It is an "instrument" older than history. It has been used to establish nations, to maintain independence, to safeguard liberty. It has been freely at the disposal of our government since that government was founded. Its possibility is provided for in the constitution. How would it fit in with our existing treaties; and what would we have in the place of war if we were to give it up as a means of realizing our national policies?

Senator Capper, of Kansas, has taken this step in answer to the Briand peace offer, which is gathering momentum in popular support all over the country. Like Senator Borah, Senator Capper proposes first of all "by treaty with France and other like minded powers formally to renounce war as an instrument of public policy" and to "settle its international disputes by mediation, arbitration and conciliation." So far this is identical with the first part of Senator Borah's

Things New and Old About the Bible

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga

THERE is the false attitude in its various forms.

There is the attempt at isolation from sorrow.

It was the law of the ancient Persian kings that no one should enter their presence clothed with sackcloth. All surroundings were to be joyful.

It is needless to say that such efforts were vain. Sorrow finds its way sometime, somewhere into every home, into every heart. I trust no one will think that I am preaching a religion of gloom. I am simply endeavoring to be true to the facts of life. We are told that when Marie Antoinette passed to her bridal in Paris, the halt, the lame and the blind were kept out of her sight, lest their appearance should mar the joyousness of her reception. But ere long the poor queen had a very close view of misery's children, and she drank to the dregs the cup of life's bitterness.

I remember a physician in a certain town who became very much concerned about the salvation of his soul, but he refused to come out openly because it would cost him suffering, and he soon drifted back. In a letter sometime afterwards I was told that the son of that man had committed suicide, giving as the reason the cruelty of his father, and that the father, wild with grief, came near taking his own life.

There are people who have the delusion that Christianity is a religion of sorrow and that in escaping it they are escaping sorrow. But Christianity is not a religion of sorrow, but a religion for sorrow.

There is the denial of suffering.

A man may carry many delusions to the grave but there come too many rude awakenings to allow him to remain steadfast in the illusion of pain. The folly of Christian Science must pass away like many other religious fads as against experience and reason and Scripture. A little girl is quoted as saying, "I am crying because I can't feel that I ain't hurt."

Falling over a chair several times on a dark night, striking the wrong nail with a hammer, or bumping your head suddenly against a harder object, that is if you can find a harder object, all tend to bring us to sanity.

Christian Science is the philosophy of universal mush. It tells all who are smitten with any sort of trouble, that their troubles spring out of "unpleasant thoughts." It says, to the great army of physicians, you are fighting an illusion.

It would make no sanitary regulations, if consistent, because disease is imaginary.

It is a very comfortable doctrine, since it allows us to keep all our money for our real comforts and not spend it on the imaginary troubles of other people.

It makes a strong appeal to pride of mind, which imagines that it has a marvelous insight into the occult mysteries of life which is not given to the ignorant and uninitiated. In this respect it is a recrudescence of the old Gnosticism with its boasted superiority of knowledge.

The same theory is held by the Hindu devotee who grips the fingers of the hand, until the nails come through on the other side, and stretches himself on a bed of spikes and declares that he feels no pain. But with all the absurdity of the theory, there are people truly conscientious and morally pure who hold to it, and its appeal comes from a modicum of truth which the theory contains.

There is the method of self-sufficiency.

This is after the manner of the old Stoics.

The self-sufficient man does not try to get away from suffering, nor does he try to deny it, he simply bears it and asks for no help, human nor divine. He bears it without a sigh, without a prayer, without a tear.

This is his lauguage:

"Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever Gods may be
For my unconquerable soul."

"It matters not how straight the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul."

This attitude often leads to insanity as in the case of King Lear, who defied the very storms and elements, but whose faculties soon became as wild and disordered as the storm that raged about him.

There is the method of cowardice.

This in its extreme form leads to suicide.

The more usual form, however, is to dull the keen edge of the sensibilities with drugs or to endeavor to drown the sorrows in the flowing bowl.

We can trace this cowardice through every order of society from the highest to the lowest.

The degraded negro of the slums under the spell of cocaine or his heavenly dust walks the Elysian fields. If carried to prison, the foul prison walls are the frescoed walls of a palace. His rags are the purple robes of royalty. But in a little while the dreams pass away, and all the troubles increased and enlarged are back again.

But here is a more respectable sort of man who has not sunk to such gross wretchedness. He has his troubles and takes to drink to help him bear them.

All the sad warnings that speak to him from the experience of others amount to nothing. He may turn himself into a beer-keg, brutalize all the tenderer and finer feelings, but instead of removing a single sorrow, he sows the seed for a new harvest of troubles.

With already more troubles than he knows what to do with, he simply adds to the weight of his burden.

Broadway Banter

—By—
FORNEY WYLY

AMIDST the avalanche of plays which descended on Broadway during the holidays, none has caused such a furor as has Mr. Ziegfeld's "Show Boat." As a general rule, producers spend staggering amounts to obtain the stage rights to certain best-sellers, and then promptly throw all semblance of the original book away, the result looking suspiciously as though the producers themselves wrote it or paid somebody thirty-five cents to do it.

"Show Boat," it is my pleasure to report, clings almost frantically to Miss Ferber's novel.. In all the years Mr. Ziegfeld has been giving his days to see that his showgirls look nice and pretty, he has never done anything more gorgeous than "Show Boat." The musical score which Jerome Kern has provided is disturbingly beautiful, the number I liked best being one called "Ole Man River."

Norma Terris is the lucky girl who was finally selected to play Magnolia and she plays it, I thought, with much taste. Edna Mae Oliver as the mother is her usual comic self. Also in the cast is the same Helen Morgan whose supper club the federal officers recently ransacked and closed. On the evening I saw "Show Boat" the indestructible Miss Morgan seemed quite unharmed and it appears they at least left her that plaintive voice she knows how to use so well.

Won't some of you please help me out by coming to New York once again and, after you're here, throw yourself in front of my unbelieving eyes? It would do me so much good to again be able to fill up this second paragraph by letting the world know that Lizzie Glutz, of Pace's Ferry road, had again been in town and was among the charming girls taken to the station the night the Dizzy club was padlocked. Also make it possible for me to maliciously hint to Mrs. Whosis that her husband, while here, lost no time in meeting lots of hennaed honeys and bleached bandits. Do this little thing for me, won't you?

Getting back on "Show Boat" again, you've no idea the hectic time it had finally getting produced. About a year ago it seemed both the Hammerstein organization and Mr. Ziegfeld thought they had the rights to the stage version and that held things up for a while. Then Elizabeth Hines was selected to play the hotly-contested Magnolia, only to be dislodged mainly by the rumor that none other than Marilyn Miller would be Miss Ferber's heroine. That seems to have fallen through, too; but, at any rate, what I'd like to know is what is wrong with the enchanting Miss Hines these days? For she it was who was the original choice for "Manhattan Mary" and, in fact, went so far as to open in it in Atlantic City. What happens to her in all these shows is a mystery to me, for I found her in the easily-forgotten "June Days" a a ravishing and competent performer.

Among the non-musicals, Philip Barry's "Paris Bound" seems easily the biggest hit. The star is Madge Kennedy, whom you kept from her adoring Broadway during the time you had her playing stock last spring. "Paris Bound" concerns itself with infidelity in the upper circles. Its solution, it may seem to the more conservative of you (Are there any?) makes a gracious concession to one particular sin you've not always considered so harmless. At any rate, it is a deft and wise comedy, equipped with all the smart chit-chat Philip Barry can write so easily. It all ds the rem- make, or at least would like to ake. Miss Kennedy is offered no opportunity to reach down into that bag of tricks of hers and pull out a few of the choicest. Instead, she is given an opportunity to really act, and she comes out magnificently, I thou-

You'd think a play by Robert Sherwood, taken from a short story by Ring Lardner, would be pretty good, but that's just where you're wrong. "The Love Nest," while having its moments, is far from a good play. Again is the movie colony attacked and this time with the same discouraging results which met "Los Angeles." This latter play, you remember, was the one which Donald Ogden Stewart and Max Marcin made such a mess of.

In securing June Walker to portray the fatuous movie director's wife, the producers of "The Love Nest" were indeed lucky. She is responsible for the few bright spots in the play. I suspect the real secret of it is that "The Love Nest" was just a good short story, which was never meant to be a play. And those who've seen it can assure you that it isn't.

It is a curious thing to note just which stars have actual followings. By that I mean actresses who can draw large audiences, no matter how inferior the plays they're in might be. It seems the four feminine stars who are like that are Jane Cowl, Lenore Ulrich, Ethel Barrymore and Beatrice Lillie. I seriously believe audiences would rush in to see Jane Cowl do "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," Miss Ulric do "Cinderella" or even to see the painful spectacle of Miss Barrymore as "Little Red Riding Hood" should she so choose.

As for Miss Lillie, it is a generally conceded fact that her New York opening-night audiences are the most enthusiastic of them all. The recent evening on which she opened in "She's My Baby" the applause was louder and more uncontrollable than I've heard in a year. And that was when "Oh, Please," opened, a show in which the star was a lady named Beatrice Lillie.

When Anna May Indulged in a Fit of Temperament It Shook the Earth and Wrecked a Village—For This Movie Actress Was An Elephant.

ANNA MAY was early for work. Fate had put Anna May into pictures. Time was when her name had been the less elegant title of Mazie and when she had stood third in the line of the passively ponderous predomination of preposterous pachyderms which enlivened one end of the menagerie tent of the Mighty Marvel Three Ring Circus.

They sold Mazie down the river, the show being at Albany at the time. After a lowly two months' vaudeville she was sold again, with the sequel that Shorty Harris, her trainer, Mazie herself and what "props" had been salvaged from two sales moved out to Los Angeles to a more lowly place still, a zoo where Mazie must eke out her existence by doing a few tricks on Sunday afternoon, meanwhile begging for what peanuts came her way. It wasn't a prosperous zoo.

That is, it hadn't been prosperous until the Greatfilm company of Hollywood decided to put on a feature film called "Pachyderm Passion," the story demanding a thoroughly amiable and easily directed elephant. Then Mazie had come into her own. The usual studio elephant had gone bad, causing his dismissal from the role.

"Pachyderm Passion" had gone into production, Mazie had risen to inconceivable heights of elephantine action, and a zoo had ceased to be that in the cold sense of the term. "Pachyderm Passion" had made a hit, with a resultant string of elephant pictures crowding behind it from other makers.

Mazie, like many another shooting star of the films, had taken a screen name. Shorty Harris, her trainer, had come to know motion picture beauties and to hobnob with a few of them, while the little zoo had caused a new sign to be painted over its entrance:

SEEMAN ANIMAL PARK
HOME OF ANNA MAY WORLD'S GREATEST ELEPHANT
SCREEN ACTRESS

They sometimes do things that way in Los Angeles. Nor can it be said that Anna May herself failed to notice the change. She did. Instead of merely being a lonely elephant, swaying at her picket chain for six cheerless days a week that she might glean a few peanuts on the seventh, she now had become fat and prosperous and happy. Anna May had definitely taken her place in the sun, or rather in the Kleigs. And this morning she was early to work.

Her chauffeur had caused it, by the mistaken belief that she was to be taken to the Highart studios in Hollywood instead of the Keenart in Culver City.

Now Anna May wandered the somewhat deserted lot of the Keenart studios, a rather abandoned lady. Upon her broad head was fitted and properly tied a large picture hat of the drooping type, lilting roguishly to the left, thereby tickling one ear and causing thereby a constant flapping. About her fulsome abdomen and protruding airily over her wrinkled hips was a perky ballet skirt of pink tulle. At last, other diversions failing, she lifted her wrinkled trunk, wiggled her piglike eyes, pushed against a large gate, and then, as it opened, she shimmied with pleasure and went through.

A jungle village greeted her, thatched huts and pyramids of spears about the council fire as yet unlighted, and in the foreground a very pretty girl, dressed in costume of seaweed, sitting on a log and eating something from a sack.

Sacks always interested Anna May. Closer she went and lifted her trunk, mouth open in pleading. She had been right. A peanut rose, circled, and plumped into her pink mouth. Anna May crunched upon it and shut her eyes in ecstasy. Then she shimmied closer, while the girl in the seaweed dress turned laughingly toward her.

"Well, bull," she asked, with a strain of happiness in her voice, "what are you doing away from the white tops?"

Anna May was blissfully happy. Yet it wasn't all because of the peanuts.

Again Mary Lane cried out, gasping, a sound drowned by the thunder of the elephant, the screams of fleeing natives and the shouts from the camera platforms.

Anna May had never been psychoanalyzed. She didn't know that happiness can be generated through the response of the subconscious brain to scenes and familiarities even when the active or conscious mentality is unresponsive. All Anna May could understand, as she shifted her weight and raised her right hip, kicking her pink ballet dress to a more coquettish angle, was that she liked this fair-haired, bright-eyed little person who sat on the log in front of the jungle village.

And as Anna May had no introspective powers whatever, it was not for her to understand that the reason was because this bright-eyed, happy featured young friend was talking to her of old, familiar things, and using terms which tugged at Anna May's brain for recognition—such as "parade" and "bull line" and "picket pin" and 'ring bank" and "white tops"—words which had been familiar to Anna May in other times, because she heard them repeated and rerepeated every hour of the day. But, cognizant or not, Anna May enjoyed it to the utmost. Then another figure came into the scene.

A dark-eyed man, with a worried expression, he stood for a moment behind the laughing girl, looking down at her with a bit more admiration than is supposed to exist when everything about the set is strictly business.

"Well, Miss Lane," he said, "I didn't know your act included elephants."

"O, it didn't!" The girl had risen. "To tell the truth, Mr. Bruce I was always afraid to work them."

"Yes?" There was a trace of disappointment in his tone, why he did not know. Then, abstractedly, he dipped a hand into the peanut sack and tossed the ecstatic Anna May a goober. "I always thought that circus people knew how to do a little of everything."

The fair-haired Miss Lane cocked her head and laughed.

"Can you do everything around a motion picture lot?" she asked. He laughed.

"I'll be lucky if I can even direct—long enough to finish this wa-hoo I've got now," came truthfully. Then suddenly: "Just between ourselves, Miss Lane, in that sequence where you wade out into the surf and then do that tight rope stunt by walking up the anchor line of the derelict ship—wow, just personally, what do you think of it?"

"Well, it does seem useless, doesn't it?" the girl asked naively. "Because if a person wanted to get aboard the ship, all one would have to do would be to swim out and climb up the rope ladder."

Mr. Bruce reached to his side pocket and, bringing forth the script, regarded it as one would look upon an onion.

"Miss Lane," he said, "it's refreshing, if I may say so—to meet somebody who doesn't say 'yes' to everything. If you want my opinion of this picture," came disgustedly as he jammed the script into his pocket again, "it's hash!"

"But why——?"

He raised a hand to the side of his mouth and leaned closer.

"Mr. Abfinkle's son wrote it."

"But suppose he did?"

"Mr. Abfinkle owns the company," said Bruce, again from behind his hand.

The director sighed anew.

"I wish you had worked elephants," he said sadly. The girl looked up.

"Is she in the picture?"

"Not yet. But—." Then he grasped again at that idea, and lost it. "But we've got to put something in. An elephant or a train of cars, or an epidemic. Something! I've got to find a way to pull myself out of this. You know," he added, desperately, "this is the greatest script in the world. Mr. Abfinkle says so himself. If the exhibitors refuse to buy the thing after I've strung it together, it won't be the fault of the poor goof who wrote it. It'll be my lack of interpretation!"

"So you've got to find a way to remedy it."

"That's it." The director moved a hand wearily over his eyes. Since Mary Lane of the high wire had come to the Keenart lot, George Bruce had taken a great deal more interest in talking things over with members of his company. Especially with this outsider.

So now the conversation became quite animated—so much, in fact, that Anna May at last became bored with the futility of further appeals and, wiggling her picture hat, turned away. As she did so, Eddie Harris came through the big gate, his bull hook poised.

"All right, kid," he said to the elephant, "the set's ready."

Anna May moved forward amiably, only to halt. Bruce, the director, had called to her trainer, then come hastily toward him.

"She's working in Jim Horan's comedy, isn't she?" he asked. "Guess I'll go along."

At the comedy set, Mr. Bruce sought out the other director.

"How long?" he asked, nodding at the elephant.

"Three weeks."

Bruce moved nearer.

"Can't shift to something else, can you, and lend her to me?"

"What for?"

"Blamed if I know," confessed the director of the famous "Flame of the Jungle." "Only I've got to do something!"

"Is it that bad?" asked Horan, grinning as he came nearer. Bruce spread his hands.

"Worse than that."

"What's the story?"

"Ask me!" snapped the director. 'Can't you tell from the title? It's The Flame of the Jungle,' that's all I know. Two people get shipwrecked. That's new, you know. Then they are afraid of cannibals. That's new, too. The fellow the girl is shipwrecked with is a villain. And he makes advances toward her. Isn't that a wow? So she wades out into the surf and walks the anchor rope of a derelict ship."

"If it's a derelict, how can it be at anchor?" cut in the comedy director. Again Bruce spread his hands.

"Why ask me those questions? I'm telling you the story just as Morrie Abfinkle wrote it. She walks the anchor rope up to the ship—that's why we hired Miss Lane, the tight rope walker—and gets on board and who should she find there but her own dear lover, lying ill and lonely. Then what does she do?"

"Well, go on. What does she do?"

"She pulls up the anchor, all by herself, and the ship sails away and leaves the villain on the island."

"Isn't that thrilling!" Horan raised his horn-rimmed glasses with a wrinkling motion of his nose and gazed appraisingly toward Anna May, awaiting her turn before the camera. "I've got to make a kick about that story. They hired me as the comedy director of this outfit!" Then: "So you want the elephant to make it more complicated, huh?"

"I want something to put a punch in the blamed picture," pleaded Bruce.

As for Anna May, all this was nothing to her. She did her duty as her trainer and her director saw it and left studio politics to the hirelings. But when noon came, and Eddie Harris dallied over his luncheon in the cafeteria with the diving damsels she moseyed once more toward that big gate and the jungle village which lay beyond. Sure enough, there was another bag of peanuts.

At last there came another visit from the serious Mr. Bruce to the stage occupied by the various antics of "Anna May's Mistake."

"How's she comin'?" asked Horan.

"Flopping harder than ever," came quietly.

"You know, Horan, I wouldn't care so much if it were just myself. But that little Lane girl—she's got talent! To think of a beautiful girl like that wasting her time in a circus, walking a high wire! What's worse," he admitted, "to think of her wasting her time hanging around the lot on a mess like "The Flame of the Jungle!" You know what'll happen when this opus comes out. She'll work in it like a wooden woman, because I'm directing it like a wooden man. It'll damn her in every studio in the country. If I could just get some kind of punch into the mess. Listen, Jim," he begged again, "won't you please lend me that elephant?"

"Anna May? Me lend you Anna May? Not by a jugful."

"But can't you push things a bit so you can get through with her three or four days beforehand? If you could do that I could switch the script around and argue the genius into believing that he'd done it. This derelict is supposed to be a ship from India, see? It had a rajah on board when it got in the big storm and everybody took to the rafts. Had to put that in—the little Napolean wanted a big ballroom scene, you know. If I can get the stuff shot without him knowing it I can kid Abfinkle into believing that there was the suggestion of the elephant action in the script. That'll at least help the picture——"

"What will?" asked Horan, waving a hand to cut Anna May's work for the moment. Bruce hurried to his point.

"Well, I could run a scene of her in the tank—the elephant, I mean—showing that she was swimming from the ship and another on the rocker, to show that she'd been on board. Then one of her coming out of the water into the jungle. Then, when the villain is about to get his clutches on the girl, I could have Anna May wander in, and Miss Lane could give her a command; the elephant would kneel, and Miss Lane could escape into the jungle on her head, pursued by the villain and the cannibals.

"Then, when they came out of the jungle at the other side of the island, she could sight a ship, be rescued, and then send out a boat to the derelict and rescue her hero. All that would be bad enough, but it would at least be better than this terrible hash I'm working with. I could do it in a couple of days and still make the deadline. I've got to have this chamber of horrors out of the cutting room by the 28th. Abfinkle's set on it."

Jim Horan rubbed his chin.

"Sure you can do it, George?" he asked.

"If I can keep Morrie out of the way until I've made the shots and he looks at the rushes in the projection room. As sure as it's good he'll swear it was his own idea."

"If I finish up three days ahead of time, will that help you?"

"Help me?" gasped the other director; "it'll save me from the madhouse!"

"Hey, Eddie!" snapped Horan, "take that elephant to her dressing room and put the bathing suit on her. We've got to rise and shine on this beach sequence. Hurry!"

It wasn't the first time that Anna May hurried in the activities which followed. To her own particular dressing room she was led, squealing with a slight fit of temper as Eddie Harris, her trainer, jerked her away from her usual apportionment of hay that he might fasten a natty bathing cap over one ear, and then, with the aid of a helper, button upon her robust form a neat little bathing outfit, slightly baggy at the thighs and adorned with a waistline ruffle.

That night Anna May bedded down early in her boudoir at the Seeman Animal park. She was tired and somewhat irritable, why she did not know. But the condition existed, nevertheless.

It was only the beginning. Jimmy Horan, comedy director, might wear plus fours and support a pair of horn-rimmed glasses. He might have his name done in gold letters upon the morocco cover which held the script of the moment; and he might possess his peculiarities about the canvas throne in which no one but he could sit. But when it came to a matter of friendship, Jimmy Horan was of the old-fashioned type, dyed deeply in the wool. He had promised to pull George Bruce out of a muddle. He intended to do that very thing, even if it gave Anna May prostration.

Tired, pettish, the world's greatest elephantine screen actress weaved aboard her motor the next night on the return from the studio with but little thought of the admiring throngs which pointed her out in the traffic jams of Western avenue, or even an eye for the greenery of the park as she turned off the boulevard and dived into the thicker coagulation of vehicles of the downtown district which must ensue before she could cross the viaduct to home. It had been a bad day, wearing day, and Anna May chirruped with fatigue.

Anna May's company was a place of activities as heightened as those of another company were lethargic—on the other side of the fence, Morrie Abfinkle's great opus pursued a slow and inane course along a line of scenes which George Bruce shot cautiously, confiding in no one but a girl of the circus.

"You won't be afraid, Mary?" he asked. It had gone this far.

"Why, of course not, George. I've ridden elephants lots of times. It's only when they get skittish that I'm afraid of them. I was caught right in front of a herd one time when it stampeded and I've never gotten over it. The minute I hear an elephant trumpet in fright, I can't help running!"

"Well, there'll be none of that." He turned. "O, hello, Gloom!"

The greeting was addressed to the telegram, not to the boy who had brought it. Instinctively George Bruce knew the contents, a suspicion confirmed by quick reading.

> Hope you are making great progress with my picture Stop Have lined salesmen up for great selling campaign Stop This should make history for our organization besides being a swell picture Stop Think I will run out next week and look it over Stop Better arrange usual meeting station for publicity Stop Should arrive Tuesday Stop Hope you have caught spirit of my scenario with reference to box office angles as this should make swell picture Stop Best regards.
> MORRIS ABFINKLE.

George Bruce read it again.

"It's a nice piece of goods," he muttered gloomily. Then to his assistant: "Have the camera men and a couple of girls down at the station to meet the morning train Tuesday," he commanded. "Usual publicity stuff—bunch of roses and pretty damsel handing them up to the Little Napoleon as he gets off the train. Morrie's coming out to look at his masterpiece."

Then he shrugged his shoulders, jammed the telegram in his pocket, strove to concentrate on the script, failed, left his company flat on the lot and hurried for Jim Horan.

"When will you finish?" he asked.

"Tuesday, if the elephant holds out."

"Can't you make it Monday?"

A tired comedy director threw down his script.

"Why not make it now and throw my blamed comedy away?" he asked. "I'm speeding it faster than an express train as it is. What's happened—has she gotten temperamental?"

George Bruce only reached for his pocket and showed the edge of the telegram.

"The Incubus arrives Tuesday," he said. Jim Horan raised his eyebrows.

"That's different," he answered. "I'll do 'er George—some way." Then suddenly with his Irish irascibility, "Say, you might as well know it—I'm doing this for that girl as much as I am for you."

"I know it, Jim," said George Bruce.

"But you might as well make up your mind to one thing. I'll get through with this elephant in time to let you make enough shots to have a few rushes ready for the Grand Nitwit when he pulls in. I'll do that. I'll work Sunday and even Sunday night if I have to. I'll get you out of this mud hole you're in, and I'll turn you over the elephant by noon Monday. But that ends it. When you've saved your skin and everybody else's, just thank me and let it go at that. I won't be anybody's best man."

"You're being that right now, Jim," grinned Bruce. Then suddenly he halted, gazing at the baggy-eyed elephant across the set. "Anna May looks a little tired, doesn't she?"

"And peevish," said Horan.

Bruce rubbed a hand across his chin.

"Gosh!" he exclaimed fervently, "I hope she isn't sick!"

But Anna May was. Not physically; but she was thoroughly so mentally—sick and tired of the whole business. This was the first time in her screen life when she had failed to receive the treatment accorded to one in her position, when she had been deprived of little periods of rest, and when she had failed to receive the cajoleries of an entire studio, allowed as she usually was, to ramble at will during the long periods of waiting between sets or while a director made up his mind whether his leading man should sit at the desk and scowl or merely rest his head on his right hand. Jimmy Horan didn't happen to be that type of director—besides there was the pressure of circumstance that a film owner's son might be saved from himself, a director relieved of the burden of a glorious flop, and a girl whom that director seemed to care about more than anything else saved the ignominy of acting in a conglomeration that would damn her forever in the studios.

Sunday came with its incessant labors—a day upon which Anna May was accustomed to receive adulation and peanuts. Monday morning arrived, bringing with it the truck and a zoo assistant to take the place of Eddie Harris. Anna May recoiled at the touch of his bull hook and showed the whites of her eyes. She leaned on her haunches and refused to budge until at last the point of the prod struck soft flesh, and the voice of the assistant trainer grew gruff and threatening. Then and only then did Anna May go grudgingly to her motor. Temperament had come into its own at last and she didn't give a hoot who knew it.

"Landlady telephoned this morning that Eddie's sick," said the assistant when he at last reached the studio with his pouting charge. Jimmy Horan practiced his usual outlet of throwing his script across the set

"Might have known it!" he grunted when a property man had returned the offending continuity. "Him out until 2 o'clock this morning on the beach at Venice, trying to outswim

When Justice Triumphed

Murder, Moonshine and Romance in Drama of Mountains—Case Traversed Scale of Human Emotion

TODAY we present the Pittman case, which for many months absorbed all public interest in South Carolina; a case which traversed the whole scale of human emotion, from the outburst of hate which dominated its wild opening scene to the display of generosity at its close.

It is a story of grim mountaineers and of a young girl who loved one of them, of government officers, armed and determined, and of one of them who was slain.

In the eyes of Holland Pittman and his father, the killing of Hogback mountain may have been justifiable and quite according to the code of the region. In the eyes of justice it was murder. But in sentencing them to pay the extreme sentence of death, the law apparently overstepped itself—for in the end they escaped the electric chair.

* * * *

The opening scene of our movie-like story took plac ein the rugged mountain country in northern South Carolina. It is a country of moonshiners and feuds and deadly encounters with the law. The particular region we are concerned with is called the Dark Corner, and hundreds of weird tales have come out of it.

This is one of them.

The Dark Corner, about fifteen miles square, is located in the extreme northern part of Greenville county some twenty-three miles north of the city of Greenville. Hogback mountain, locale of the exciting action about to be described, stands in the center of this area, 3,000 feet above the sea. On the eastern side of Hogback, thirteen miles away, in Tryon, N. C., a famous winter resort.

Into this region, shortly before noon on January 31, 1924, came four men, officers of the law, in search of a distillery on Hogback mountain. The men were Reuben Gosnell and E. N. Austin, federal prohibition agents, State Constable J. H. Howard and Howard's son, Clarence.

Alexander Pittman, the father.

The man we are particularly concerned with is Constable Howard. He was a native of this region himself—indeed, he was born within ten miles of the scene in one of the log cabins typical of this section. He had become a state constable by petitioning the governor and served without pay.

Suspicious Characters.

Incidentally, he must have been a brave man, for he was looked upon in the Dark Corner as a sort of stool pigeon, one who, according to the code of the mountains, must be shot on sight.

The quartet, fully armed, had just entered Pacolet valley, which leads up to Hogback, when they came upon three youths whose clothes bore suspicious evidence of a distillery near by. The boys were Thomas, Pinkney and Alexander Plumbley, and they were spattered with bits of dried corn mash, known as "still slop."

The officers placed the three under arrest and with their prisoners proceeded up the valley. Near a footpath that led up the precipitous mountainside, they found a deserted farm. Here they placed their captives in a log-made corn-crib, leaving Austin and Clarence Howard as guards.

Gosnell and the state constable took to the footpath. Pistols in hand, they crept cautiously toward their goal — the distillery, located in a wooded cove near the summit of the mountain. Reaching a point below the still, they separated, Gosnell circling around so as to be able to attack from above. He hid himself in a thicket and waited for Howard to give the signal.

The prohibition agent saw Howard plunge into the cove, then he himself moved into action. As he ran he heard several shots in quick succession. He saw two men scampering in opposite directions. One he chased, caught and disarmed. The captive was Holland Pittman, handsome young son of the mountains, whose opinion of revenue men coincided with the general judgment of the region.

With his prisoner Gosnell returned to the distillery.

More Bullets.

There he found the body of Constable Howard, riddled with bullets. One had struck him in the throat; five others had entered his back. His His own pistol had not been discharged.

"Who did this?" demanded Gosnell. "If you don't tell me who did this, I'll beat your brains out!"

According to Gosnell, the captive replied that the man responsible was Henry Lindsey, another mountaineer.

In the meanwhile Austin and young Howard had been the objects of a mysterious volley of shots fired from Hogback. Several 30-30 rifle bullets tore through the crib containing the three prisoners. One bullet missed Austin's head by six inches, burying itself in one of the logs.

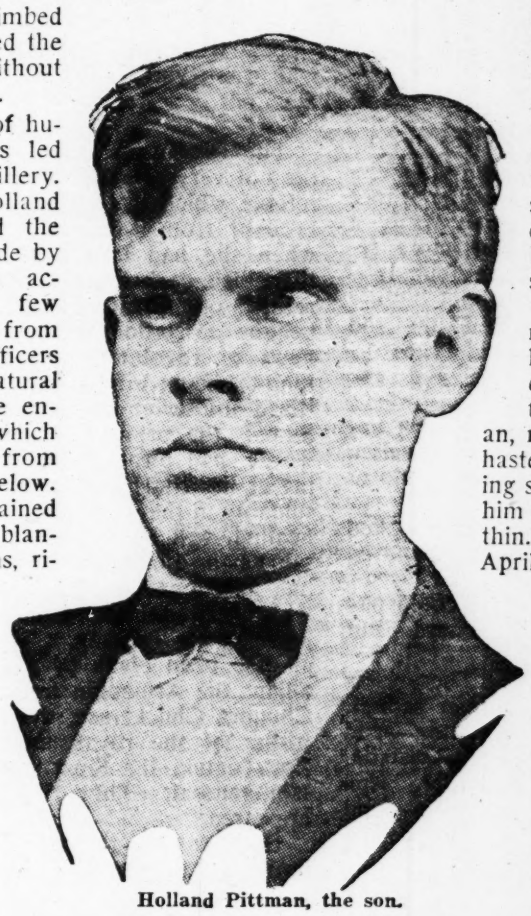

Assuredly an uncomfortable situation.

Gosnell took his prisoner down the mountain to the crib and then all returned to the place where the body lay. While they toiled up the trail there came another volley of rifle shots, this time from the opposite side of the valley, from an elevation called Chestnut ridge. Leaves and small branches were snipped off over the men's heads and bits of earth in front of them ploughed up by the bullets.

"God help us!" panted Gosnell, "I think they are going to kill us all."

But they climbed on and reached the distillery without any casualties.

Two lines of human tracks led from the distillery. One was Holland Pittman's and the other was made by his unknown accomplice. A few hundred yards from the still the officers found a natural rock cave, the entrance of which was invisible from the valley below. The cave contained hats, shoes, blankets, provisions, rifles, pots, pans and a smoldering fire.

Holland Pittman, the son.

Holland Pittman denied that he had fired a shot. True enough, his pistol, an automatic of heavy caliber, had not been discharged that day. The magazine was full and the barrel clean.

Henry Lindsey, whom Pittman had named as the man responsible, was found presently and questioned. The officers were finally convinced that he had nothing whatever to do with the tragedy.

Who, then, was young Pittman shielding?

The Arrests.

The officers visited the Pittman home, located in one of the valleys some eight miles to the south of Hogback, where lived Alexander Pittman, his wife, Malinda, and five children, of which Holland, 22, was the eldest. But they found Alex and his brood in anything but a helpful or revealing mood, so they went on to Greenville with their prisoner.

With Holland in jail an inquest was begun the following day, February 1. After some testimony was taken the session was adjourned until February 11, when the jury decided that Constable Howard had come to his death at the hands of persons unknown.

But later the same day two men were charged with the murder. One was Holland Pittman. The other was his father.

The father was arrested in the basement of the Greenville county courthouse, where he had come ostensibly to pay some taxes. He submitted to arrest quietly, insisting that he was innocent, that in fact he had been nowhere near the scene on the day of the affair at the distillery. He had, he said, been shucking corn all day at his home.

And now, romance, in the form of Holland's sweetheart, Rosemary Keenan, enters the story.

Rosemary and young Pittman had known each other since they were children. They had first met when she was 12 and he 14. Her mother had died when she was 3 years old and her father, a circus man, had committed her to the care of an aunt in Asheville. She had seen much of the Pittmans during frequent visits to the home of her grandfather, not far from the Pittman home.

Her grandfather forbade the girl to talk to Holland, or with any of the mountain boys, for in his opinion they were "a bad lot." But the fire of young love between Rosemary and Holland was not to be quenched.

One story told of the two was that Holland had saved her life after she had been bitten by a rattlesnake.

When the young mountaineer was locked up, charged with murder, the young woman, now 20 years old, hastened to him, vowing she would stick by him through thick and thin. On the 18th of April following the young couple were married in the county jail by John R. Bates, attorney and notary.

Two days after the marriage County Jailer Frank Christopher summoned the girl to the jail. Christopher had prepared a room there for the newlyweds. They were allowed to stay together one night. Then they parted, never—if the decision of justice in North Carolina remains, to be together again.

The trial began on May 15. On the following day the jury returned a verdict convicting both father and son of first degree murder.

The verdict was considered something of a triumph for Solicitor David W. Snoak, for the fight made by the defense attorneys, W. E. Bowen and J. R. Bryson, had been most vigorous and capable.

Judge T. J. Maudlin refused a motion for a new trial and on May 17 sentenced the Pittmans to die June 27 in the electric chair. Neither of the condemned men showed the slightest sign of emotion when the court pronounced sentence. The prisoners remained in the county jail at Greenville, while their lawyers continued the fight.

During the following winter, with the two prisoners still in jail awaiting the outcome of new moves in their behalf, word came that the Pittman

INSTALLMENT II.

"AN ORIENTAL princess—on the Place de Thionville? Citizen," rejoined the driver, "you had a drop too much."

He stepped on the gas.

"En avant, cocotte!" he addressed the wheezy, clanking taxicab.

Nor should you blame the driver for his sardonic incredulity since, after all, the Place de Thionville is the Place de Thionville.

And incongruously, right in the center of this quite improper and rowdyish neighborhood the quite proper and refined Hotel Violette, really a pension patronized by the more serious-minded Anglo-Saxon tourists—the sort who are keen about culture and service and Jane Addams and the League of Nations and behaviorism and Senator Borah and the Louvre.

Therefore a cheap place. But not cheap enough for Sultana Evelyn, who was in her sitting room, a slip of paper in her hand.

It was her hotel bill. She looked at the total: a little over five hundred francs.

She had already paid it; could pay for several more weeks' board. But —afterwards——?

Kivastan was rich. There was money in the treasury of her capital. But there was also revolution—and Iskandar Bek, sultan of Merxvistana, massing troops on the border. And how was she going to get home—and what was she going to do, supposing she got there?

This morning his grace of Hampshire had given her sound advice.

"I heard from Iskandar Bek in a roundabout way," he had told her. "He doesn't want actual warfare unless he's forced. So he'll make you some sort of offer for your claims. Accept it—of course, after bargaining as much as possible——"

She had been indignant.

"What?" she had exclaimed. "You want me to bargain—for what is mine by right?"

"Don't be melodramatic!"

'I'm not. But—I—O—I won't bargain—I'm not a shopkeeper."

"Some quite possible people are these days." At times his grace was not without a certain grim sense of humor. "Lots of Russian grand dukes——"

"There has been a revolution in Russia."

"There's one in Kivastan at this moment."

"Just the same—I won't bargain."

His grace had married and buried two wives. He knew when a woman, logically or illogically makes up her mind.

"Very well," he said, rather generously, "I've another suggestion. Forget Kivastan. Return to England, the real home of your family. England is a sort of congenital asylum for deposed sovereigns. I'll see to it that the foreign office pays you a decent pension."

But she had refused. For there was her Scotch pride; her Scotch stubbornness.

"No!" she replied. "I am the Sultana."

She had added in Persian, which was the court language of Kivastan:

"Bash ustan—on my head be it!"

And such a charming head, ruddy-haired, violet-eyed, girlish. A soft little oval of a face. But a face not devoid of courage and strength and determination.

So determined!

"I am Sultana!" she cried as she paced up and down the length of the sitting room. "I am Sultana!"

"Of course you are, heaven born!" came an answering blending of two voices through the open door where, in a small private hall that connected with her bedroom, a man and a woman were squatting on the floor, rocking to and fro like chained jungle beasts to ease the strain on their ankles.

Now they bent their heads, whispering.

Their whispering disturbed Evelyn, who was trying to think. She closed the door.

The two in the other room were the not very princely remnant of this retinue which the young sultana had brought from Kivastan. Originally, when she had landed at Marseilles, there had been seven. But with the refusal of Great Britain and the League of Nations to interfere, with news of revolution at home and funds running low, Mansur Khan, the Itizad el-Dowleh or "Grandeur of the State," the prime minister, in other words, had pleaded an illness gnawing at his vitals and taken train, presumably in the direction of Karlsbad's healing, gall bitter waters. Yar Hassan Khan, minister of foreign affairs, had mentioned a mysterious law suit which had demanded his immediate presence in Teheran. No excuse at all had been given by Michail Michailian, the Armenian treasurer; Babu Chundra Chuckersee, the Hindu controller of the royal household; and Esa Tugluk, the Sipar-Salar, or captain general. They had simply disappeared.

So now only these two were left; both loyal to the core, both of humble beginnings.

The woman's name was Gul-dur Burram, which means Rose-in-the-Bud—ridiculously, since she was old and shriveled and berry-brown and gnomelike.

A peasant, hill bred, she had once been Evelyn's nurse. Today she gloried in the title of Zil-il-Sultana, or "Shadow of the Queen"—and woe to the careless slave who forgot it!

The man was Arslan Khan, a gigantic Turkoman, hook-nosed, blue-eyed, yellow-bearded. He had been the late sultan's chief executioner; had often in the course of his calling —which he as well as his countrymen considered honorable and enviable—given the swish of the two-handed sword when it was crimson with blood and caused rebels' and malefactors' heads to roll about the ground like rather ghastly pumpkins.

He was still chief executioner. But his official title of Rawan-Sultana, "Killer of the Queen," was an empty one, and he was complaining of it to the old nurse.

"Heads off," he said, "is a profitable maxim of statecraft. For a dead horse cannot eat grass, nor can a cut-off head chew the stinking cud of lies and intrigues. Rebellion was rife before we left home. Then we had time to appoint my sword firman firma, decreer of decrees. So I advised the heaven-born. But she——" He shrugged his shoulders.

"I know," replied Gul-dur-Burram. "She thinks—wrongly thinks—that the well of turbulence can be filled with the dewdrops of gentle forgiving."

"As soon expect a goat cheese at high noon to smell like a rose!" Arslan Khan added with a sigh, nor meaning it disloyally, "Ah—if but the old sultan were alive!"

Which was exactly Evelyn's prayer as she paced up and down the length of the sitting room:

"If but my father were alive!"

Her father, Sultan Colin III, had ruled his lawless subjects with an iron, rather saturnine hands. Never had he permitted intrigue to raise its flat head, to whisper craftily, crookedly, in palace and bazar and behind the harem curtains. Suddenly he had died; suddenly—direct from a Belgian finishing school—Evelyn had been summoned to the grim pomp of the peacock throne.

She had strength, courage, a certain Scotch shrewdness. But she had not yet learned—they did not teach that sort of thing at her Belgian school—to cope with gliding Asiatic minds, nor to bury the soft poetry of her youth beneath the drag and smother of stark, stony resolve. How childish she had felt—she remembered—that day they had proclaimed her sultana, the nobles and Moslem priests salaaming before her where she sat cross-legged on the throne, dressed in gorgeous robes, her small head clutching a scepter topped by an immense blue diamond known as the "Sea of Light."

"I wish I had that diamond now," she said to herself. "I'd pawn it. O, to be broke—a sultana and broke —isn't it positively silly!"

Up and down she walked, thinking thinking—to have her thought suddenly interrupted by a series of shrill, staccato yells that drifted through the door and sounded very much like the shrieks of an enraged parrot:

"Wah! Wah! Yahee! Yahoo! Yahai!"

A silence.

A man's apologetic stammer:

"I b-b-beg your p-pardon."

Then again the shrill voice—it was the old nurse's — pouring out a stream of most memorable abuse in a mixture of Tartar, Persian and Hindustani: "Go away, O face of misfortune! Go away, O brother of a naughty sister! Go away, O festering pimple on the nose of the world! Go away, O cousin to a dung heap! Go away at once, O especially illegitimate grandson of a leprous hyena!"

"But — please — won't you announce me to your mistress?"

"No! Go away, O creature!"

"But—my father sent me——"

"Your father? I know him—by Allah and by Allah! Like father, like son! Wearers—both—of most lousy turbans!"

Evelyn laughed. She knew her nurse's temper of old.

She opened the door and saw there, on the outer threshold, with Gul-dur-Barram and Arslan Khan barring the way, a tall man gesticulating helplessly.

His turban, a gorgeous, monumental affair of purple silk shot with gold and tilted rakishly over the left ear, proclaimed him an oriental. Even more oriental—because too exaggerated, too foppishly European—were the rest of his clothes.

Chic, though, the whole man; tremendously chic, down to the great white orchid in his buttonhole and the malacca stick topped by a huge Siberian amethyst.

He was a little over thirty, broad-shouldered, narrow-hipped, and with absurdly small feet and hands, true signs of his pure Arab descent. His dead-white face was rather dissipated, yet kindly and amiable, and from under his broad forehead the eyes looked out, large and coal black, and they were full of pride and a certain whimsical melancholia.

It was Mustaffa Bek, Sultan Iskandar Bek's oldest son. Evelyn had met him the week before at Geneva, where they had both been cooling their heels in the ante-room of the League of Nations.

"How are you?" she greeted him.

He bowed.

"My father sent me——" he began.

"Do not listen to him, heaven-born!" cut in Gul-dur-Burram, while even Arslan Khan, usually slow to show wrath, boomed out a deep-throated: "Anna senna, anna baba! —cursed be his father, cursed be his mother!"

"Peace! Peace!" commanded Evelyn, and she led her visitor into the sitting room and closed the door.

She smiled at him. Politically, he was her enemy. But, personally, she liked him. In a way—for he had told her a good deal about himself in Geneva—she felt sorry for him.

At heart he was gay, with all the simple, half gayety which is the charm of the unspoiled Asiatic aristocrat. His ideal of a worthy life centered about a neat little apartment within easy distance of both the Bois de Boulogne and the boulevards, a smart motor car upholstered in maroon colored leath, a chef who knew how to blend a filet of sea bass with seeded white grapes and how to tone and truffle a youthful squab, cognac 1820, brown sherry 1837, creased trousers, English sporting prints, and the sort of dancing where you jam your partner's head hard against your neck, crouch as near the floor as you can without losing your balance, and fling yourself first to this side, then to that, with the undulating motions of a hypnotized cobra.

Instead, apart occasional short trips to London and Paris, he had to live in Mervistan, the country at the back of the beyond which, early in the sixteenth century, his Arab forefathers had hewed out of the Central Asian plateau with the sword and the battle ax. He disliked Mervistan; disliked its chilly climate, its crude pomp, its bad plumbing, its meretricious splendor, its coiling intrigues, its indifferent cooking.

Still more he disliked the fact that, at home, he was another "heaven-born," a man who, except for the members of his immediate family, had no equals and could have no friends —a simple statement which holds the most poignant tragedy in the world. But he was afraid to voice his dislike of his native land, for his father was a despot quick at punishing malcontents, nor the sort to show mercy to his own flesh and blood. Indeed, there is throughout Central Asia the whispered, hushed telling how, on ascending the throne, he had had his two half brothers put to death. They had not been rebels.

But to quote Iskandar Bek's own words: "Human nature is human nature. Envy is envy. They were bound to be rebels some day. On that day I should have had to kill them. So I took fate by the forelock and attended to their demise ahead of time."

Hard, sardonic old man! He trusted nobody; not even his first born, whom he had continuously watched and supervised.

Even now, waiting downstairs in the hotel lobby, was Iskandar Bek's chief spy—though officially he passed as a private secretary to His Royal Highness Prince Mustaffa Bek—a certain Captain Evan Jones, a renegade Englishman, drummed out of the Welsh Fusileers because—well—let's say that he had played cards too well.

On the drive over to the Hotel Violette Captain Jones and Mustaffa Bek had had a heated argument.

"I shall speak to the sultana alone," the latter had insisted.

"But—your father's wishes."

"I read his orders. He did not even mention that you should be present at the interview."

"I know that he expects me to."

"I don't care." Perhaps it was the Paris spring air, perhaps the fact that he was far away from home, which gave to Mustaffa Bek this unwonted self-assertion. "I repeat that I shall speak to the sultana under four eyes. Your presence would be the height of indelicacy. After all, it's really an intensely personal matter, don't you think?"

"I suppose so,' 'the other had admitted grudgingly.

So now Mustaffa Bek was alone with Evelyn. He sat there sprawling negligently in a chair, one long leg thrown across the other to show a heliotrope silk sock, and speaking the perfect though slangy English of Harrow and Cambridge—he was proud of his British slang.

"Terribly sorry I must do it," he said after several not so bright remarks about the weather.

"Do what?"

"Propose to you." He inserted a cigarette in six inches of emerald green jade holder, lit it, and went on: "Will you marry me, and all that sort of drivel?"

Evelyn's astonishment swept her out of her chair and brought her up facing her caller.

"Did I hear right, Mustaffa?"

"Right-bally-O!"

"Marriage? You proposed—marriage—to me?"

"Right again-bally-O! Jolly old weddin' bells. Voice that breathed o'er Eden. March from Lohengrin. Slippers. Three pounds of rice. Honeymoon on the Riviera. And then——" he sighed—"Allah, Allah! —both of us back to Central Asia."

"You don't love me, do you?"

"I—O——"

"I want the truth."

'Well, you're right—I don't love you, except—of course—like a brother."

'Then why did you propose to me?"

"My father's orders. Good way out of the mess back home, he thinks. Less expensive than war. Perfers Less expensive than war. Prefers Evelyn laughed. This then was the offer which his grace of Hampshire had told her to expect.

"Of course," she replied, "it's perfectly charming of you to ask me to be your wife."

"Nothing personal, I assure you," he interrupted. "Father's orders."

"Please let me finish my pretty little speech. Yes. It's charming of you to propose to me, and you're really quite delightful—except for your taste in neckties——"

"O"—his hand went up to his throat—"don't you like the one I'm wearing?"

"It's rather heroic. Still, I might even forgive you your neckties. But we're in the same boat, you and I. I don't love you—except as a sister; and so"—with a curtsy—"I won't marry you, kind sir."

"You're quite positive you won't?"

"Quite."

"That's excellent. I feel so relieved."

She laughed again.

"My feelings ought to be hurt, I suppose," she said.

"Hurt? Why? You told me yourself that you——"

"Woman's perverse and illogical vanity, my dear. Never mind. It's settled."

"My father will be furious."

"Why should he? It isn't your fault."

"You don't know him. Tough old egg! By the Prophet—on him the salute—what a tough old egg! I wish he'd let me live in Paris. I don't like Mervistan."

"Some day you'll be sultan there."

"And entirely unsympathetic to the job. Just like the Prince of Wales. Nice boy. Met him a few years ago at the Cowes regatta, and he told me he'd much rather be a professional tangoist than king of England. Terrible bore—this crowned head business. You know our ancient Mervistan titles, don't you?" He rolled them off with mocking magniloquence: Koteb al-Dunia v'al-Din Emir Temoor Saheb i-Keran—Axis of the World and of the True Faith, Iron Chief, Lord of the Stellar Constellations! Tell me," ashing his cigarette, "do I look to you like the Lord of the Stellar Constellations?"

"You don't. Why don't you tell your father—frankly? Hold out the olive branch."

"He'd hit me over the head with it —hard. That man hasn't the slightest regard for human life. I'm afraid of him."

"He wouldn't dare touch you—here in Paris."

"I don't suppose he would. But I'm going home."

"Why do you?" Stay here."

"I haven't the money."

"What? Are you broke, too?"

"Very."

"But—why—how——?"

"That Captain Jones person downstairs holds the purse strings—makes a double entry for every centime he gives me. Another one of my dear father's precautions. What a life—that of an oriental prince!"

"Or of an oriental princess," suggested Evelyn, "counting her pennies in a second rate, dingy French hotel."

Immediately he was contrite.

"I am so sorry," he said. "Here I've been boring you with my troubles and heaven knows you've enough of your own. I do wish I could help you."

"You are a dear. But—you know —you can't even help yourself."

"That has nothing whatever to do with my ability to help other people."

It was the truth. He was the type —nor such a rare type—who, unable to look after his own affairs, was often able and always willing to carry a stray leg of anybody's donkey.

"Let me see," he went on ruminatingly, "what can I do to——"

"Visitors for the heaven-born!" interrupted the old nurse as she entered and salaamed.

"Who are they?" asked Evelyn.

"Three young foreigners."

"Their names."

'Jaw-breaking foreign names. Who am I, a decent Moslem woman, to fill my memory with such devil's devicing of meaningless mumbling?"

'I wager they are bill collectors," Evelyn said with a sigh to Mustaffa Bek.

For she remembered, and regretted, how three times during the last few days, strolling down the boulevards, she had given way to strictly feminine temptation. Once at Mme. Lucinde's, where she had bought such a dream of a white silk tulle evening frock that tucked itself up in the giddiest Parisian way and trailed out one slim strip of peacock blue and gold embroidery in the pretense of a train. Once at Mme. Germain's who specialized in frothy gossamer things of Belgian lawn with ruffled Valenciennes. And once at Mme. Jeanine's, whose short vamp slippers were guaranteed to make the smallest feet seem yet more small.

"Charge it up!" she had said each time, with thoughts of her well filled treasury home in Kivastan. Then, this morning, had come news of revolution; news featured in the early afternoon papers; news doubtless known by this time to Mme. Lucinde, Mme. Germaine, not to forget Mme. Jeanine. Charming women, all three, with charming smiles. But business women —slightly hard—les affaires sont les affaires—even when you are a pretty little sultana with ruddy hair and violet blue eyes.

So, after a few words to Mustaffa Bek, explaining the situation, she instructed the old nurse to tell the callers that she was not at home.

But Mustaffa Bek argued that she was wrong. "They'll lie in wait for you downstairs, in the lobby or on the street. They'll pop out at you from dark corners and make a scene." He sighed. "I know from experience. Better see them and have it over with."

"I've an idea you're right."

"If I can help you with them——"

"No, thanks."

"Well—you may want me."

"All right. Wait in the next room." Then, seeing the rather frightened expression in his eyes, she gave a little laugh. "I forgot," she added, "you're not exactly a favorite with my retinue."

She turned to Gul-dur-Burram, speaking in Persian: "Show the callers in. Then go for a walk. Take Arslan Khan with you.

"And leave you at the mercy of this assassin?" demanded the old woman, pointing a broad grimy thumb at Mustaffa Bek. "No—by the honor of my nose!"

"I shall be safer with the assassin than the assassin with you."

"But—heaven-born——"

"Go!" exclaimed Evelyn more sharply. "Hookum hai—it is an order."

The other obeyed.

"Listen is obey!"

A minute or two later Evelyn was confronted by a very blond young man, a very dark young man, and a very short young man.

Bill collectors? No.

This morning she had met the first at the British embassy, where he had spoken to her so engagingly about the days of high chivalry. She held out her hand. He kissed it.

"I am Lord Carmyon," he said.

"And are you still eager," she smiled with gentle mockery, "to do glittering deeds for my sake?"

"Absolutely, your royal highness. So are my friends." He introduced them; went on: "Here we are, we Three Musketeers—young, strong, reckless, familiar with the trade of war, and—I believe—loyal. Here we are, with no political axes to grind, caring not a tinker's curse what Lloyd George thinks of Clemenceau sneers, what Trotzky dreams or Mussolini threatens. I suppose it's frightfully bad form to blow your own horn. But —upon my word—you could look farther and find worse than us."

She laughed.

"I'm quite sure of it."

"Well, then—here we are: three free men-at-arms, at your service."

"But—sorry to be prosy—what particular service?"

"We will help you to regain your throne."

"War!" cried the Gascon enthusiastically.

"Do men really like war?" she asked. "I thought that—from what I've read——"

"I know," said Lord Carmyon. "Books about the world war, written by rather neurotic chaps, I fancy. We three are quite normal."

He was silent for a moment. Then he continued with that queer, stilled, almost Gothic trick of phrasing which he used when he felt conscious and ashamed of high elation—by the same token making fun of his own reactions in a sort of emotional self-defense:

"It's a good life, is a soldier's life. With the fine melody of men riding with jingling steel and the dramatic rumble of the guns— and the wind in your face and the rain and the sun —and at night your cheek to the naked earth—and red glory——"

"And often red death," said the young sultana in a low voice.

"Better the red death of war than the gray, barren death of peace."

"Besides," commented Prince Tamerlanoff soberly, "what good is peace unless you can afford it—financially? We three certainly cannot."

"And I," replied Evelyn, "cannot afford war. Here you come to me, three beaux sabreurs, three knights in shining armor, willing to do battle for me. And how modernity spoils romance!—I'm as poor as my three champions——"

"We expect no money!" the Gascon interrupted, flaring up a little.

"Of course, you don't," she smiled. "But I haven't even enough money to get you to Kivastan, nor to get there myself—much less to pay for such very necessary things as rifles and ammunition and all the rest. But it was nice of you," she went on, with just the suspicion of a break in her voice, "so nice and gallant and dear. And I am grateful—you've no idea how deeply grateful I am. You see"—she spoke directly to Lord Carmyon—"the days of chivalry are over after all."

"Not in the human heart, the human soul. I know. But—there's this modern world we have to live in—"

"And to live against!"

"Exactly," she agreed. "Sordid, isn't it? Just a question of money—"

She was silent. Then—for it is unreasonable how a woman's thoughts will switch—looking at Lord Carmyon, she said to herself:

"I like him. I like his eyes. They are the very nicest eyes in the world."

And, staring back at her, he thought: "That proud little face of hers—so finely, so decisively chiseled —soaring forward, it seems, as a free bird soars in to the wind! Like a song that Sappho might have sung to the Greeks of Rhodes—or perhaps of Cyprus—a song made of wine and honey—red wine and golden honey! And—why can't I help her? Why can't I? There must be a way——"

He echoed the last words aloud: "There must be a way!"

"There is, my dear old trout!" came a voice from the door; and Mustaffa Bek came into the room.

The others turned, astonished. Evelyn introduced him.

"I heard every word you said," he announced calmly, naively. "I listened at the keyhole."

"You—you didn't!" exclaimed the young sultana, really shocked.

"I did!"

"O, Mustaffa!"

"I'm terribly Asiatic at times. So I eavesdropped. And, I repeat, there is a way. I'll get you the money."

"You're as poor as we are," smiled Evelyn.

"But I have a rich father——"

"Who'll give us money so that we can go to war against him?" Evelyn shook her head. "Miracles do not happen."

"Miracles do happen," said Lord Carmyon, being High Church and devout.

He turned to Mustaffa Bek.

"Won't you tell us?" he asked.

We Watch As the Animals Take to Their Trees

Fighting W... Chimp...

By J. I...
Veteran Wild Anima...

WILD animal collecting, I often think, is like preaching used to be. A man is called to it by some power outside himself. As for me, I am sure my call came early, for I cannot remember a time in my life when some animal did not occupy a large part of my mind. And, generally, it would be some question about the beast's conduct or nature which I couldn't possibly answer to my own satisfaction.

Perhaps it was this curiosity, never quite satisfied, which has sent me over to Africa each autumn. Perhaps it is a thirsting curiosity which sends every man into his life work, provided that life work is a bit beyond the dull routine of buying and selling. At any rate, as I look back upon my life, I remember a yellow cat named Jerry which first stirred my imagination. Somebody told me cats were cousins of the great fierce tiger. Well, if this was so, who tamed Jerry? And why was Jerry so much smaller than the tiger?

Nobody could tell me for sure But the years went by and soo I knew the woods were full of marvelous animals. The raccoon and beaver and otter and muskrat The mysterious panthers or "painters," as the country folk called them. Great, tragic beasts that cried in the woods like a woman, filling me with feelings of wonder and pity. In time I trapped all the smaller animals, but to me there always came a terrific feeling of defeat when I saw the animal dead in the trap.

And then I left my father's Maryland farm to step out into the Mississippi River country in search of my Uncle Josh—a shy, bearded figure of a man in overalls and a corduroy coat living on a houseboat down among the bayous making his living as an alligator hunter He took me to his heart and taught me all he knew about our American wild life Soon I took a bear alive—my first living capture A circus man gave me five or ten dollars for him And from that time I always had a desire in my heart to collect animals in remote parts of the earth, and between spells of collecting to watch the rascals; to try to find out why they did this and why not that and how they felt toward life.

I have "shown" animals in the circus. I have owned performing animals. For a few years I was proprietor of an animal store. But I found my real life work, some twenty years ago, when I set out on a journey round the world with live animals in view. More recently I have specialized entirely on African animals, until to-day my life is almost a routine. In October I sail each year for West Africa. Some time in June I return, with my "catch."

Leopards, wild cats, monkeys, a few lions, hippopotami, crocodiles and chimpanzees—all of these I have taken alive in Africa. But as I sit down to recall feeling moments with my animals, I am sure the tussles I had with two different chimpanzees up in the elephant grass beyond Cape Mount are encounters most worth remembrance

I had set out from my coast headquarters at Konikry, near Freetown, both coast towns of West Africa and had sailed down the coast past Cape Palmas and landed at Cape Mount. Back of the port is Cape Mount the mountain. Near by is a lake. And beyond these lie miles of upland many of them, covered with an elephant grass rising some times six feet or more in height. There I was going to look into the elephant situation, but hardly had I arrived when my boys brought stories of larger and fiercer chimpanzees than had ever been described in the books.

"They be bad rascals, massa," one of them said. "They so vex the women. They go humbug the pikins (babies). They tear up rice fields. They screech—hoo—hoo—hoo—. They fear no man. They chop (eat) him all times."

"Shame your face!" said I, "Where is your man's heart?"

I decided to push into the elephant country despite these rumors. And, since there seemed to be chimpanzees here also, I took along a supply of nets made from liana, a native vine growing in profusion in the woods.

These nets, ten by ten and even larger, are of great help in any encounter with chimpanzees. Just throw them—and you tangle him hopelessly If he is worth keeping you have him safe within them and alive. The climb to the "haunted" country was uphill, over rocky ground, at times through dense clumps of woods. Finally we reached the great wavin upland of high, saw-like elephant grass

Several of my boys walked ahead, beating down a path The grass cut against my cheeks, even then, making progress difficult. And we hadn't traveled an hour before an old animal man's feeling for the jungle told me we were not the only wayfarers there This uncanny sense of being watched by an enemy we could not see persisted for half an hour. Then we heard cries

"Hoo—hoo—hoo"— shouted hidden chimpanzees, their notes rising in fierce crescendo through five notes of the octave. ... me yet. I glimpsed ... caught the swirl of a ...nd boy and ape tan- ...t grass in a whirling ...t Hector was shouting ...ictory:

"I have him, massa. I have big boo. He no humbug the pikins no more!"

We bound the great ape in many nets as one of the boys started back to camp with the baby. But the mother vexed us exceedingly. A grown chimpanzee is valueless to the collector—it quickly dies in captivity. But if I should turn her loose she might hunt up her band. And they might attack us. So we carried her back toward camp, slung to a stout pole borne by several boys. Two miles from journey's end we tied her to a tree. In time she would work herself free.

This success hugely encouraged the boys for the adventures of the day as we toiled through the rising heat next morning into the elephant grass, while the bold blue sky blazed overhead and I perspired under my pith helmet. Soon we neared what was said to be chimpanzee ground. The going was slow. Sometimes we came to a break in the earth where a playful volcano centuries before had parted crag from crag. Painfully we clambered down a rocky ravine and up on the other side.

The day was totally without adventure till late in the afternoon, when once more we heard the "Hoo—hoo—hoo—" of the chimpanzee. "Hoo—hoo—hoo—" came other cries from another quarter. I grasped my elephant rifle as I noted where my gun carrier followed. Suddenly we had reached a land of savage magic I had never penetrated before. On the left, "Hoo—hoo—hoo—" On the right, "Hoo—hoo—hoo—" And each in tones of anger, challenge, foray.

From the Tall Grass He Peered Out at Us

...a Among Animals Than the "Domestic Chimpanzees

I knew in a moment we were wedged between two warring bands which might shortly make peace by falling on us, the mysterious enemy. ... was a fateful moment as I debated. We could not turn back. Those rascals would know at once we were retreating. I might fire—and terrify them into wiping us out in five minutes. The one sane thing to do was to advance, clinging to the desperate hope that our unconcern would leave their mounting fury toward each other to break into a fight.

Then almost as if by agreement the encounter of the day before repeated itself. Again a full grown chimpanzee suddenly stood up out of the elephant grass, as we looked him in the face, taking in the enormous power of his shoulders, the ten-foot reach of his great arms. From a frame of elephant grass he turned his startled yellow eyes upon us. And in that moment came other sounds, swiftly changing. They were the thud and patter and swish of many more great apes coming on at us through the tall grass. Now we reached the point where we must fight for an extra five minutes of life. Now caution was useless. In the extremities a man fights as long as he can. And then——

I raised my gun and fired. "Now," I said to myself. I thought of home and wondered. But instead of falling he came right on, letting out a cry of wounded anger. As I raised my gun again I suddenly felt a stinging at my right leg. A little chimpanzee had stolen up and had bitten my leg. So many things were happening so swiftly. Nothing but a miracle—then transpired that which saved my life. My gun carrier's courage broke. He flung his arms up into the air, letting my Winchester fall. He fled, with a cry. And the angry, wounded chimpanzee went swaying past me, maddened to reach the fleeing boy. Useless for me to shout——

"Turn, me boy! Make you face babboo!"

Bosambo turned for nobody. But the troop of chimpanzees went whirling by me, following their wounded leader. It was a miracle, the distance the boy was putting between himself and the leading ape. Each was quite out of range of my gun before I could get ready to fire. And as I fumbled the boy reached an elevation far away. His lithe young body was outlined against the fading sky. He looked toward me for a moment, holding up both hands. Then I saw him disappear as the first chimpanzee reached him. That was all, except that Hector was shouting:

"We have rescal, Daddy Buck. Here——"

He was holding the little villain that had bitten my leg.

After a painful half hour I had limped to the place where I saw the boy disappear. Nothing was there. Just shelving crags leading down into a rocky declivity. No boy, nor band of angered apes. All vanished.

We worked our way down till we came upon the poor lad's body under an overlapping rock. It was then I finally believed those legends we hear about the hard pressed Indian who long ago jumped into the sea at Land's End to save himself from the pursuing white man. So, in another fashion, had Bosambo jumped. We carried the lad back to camp and buried him, piling many rocks upon his shallow grave to protect it from the foul, defiling hyena.

This adventure with the warring bands of chimpanzees was about as close a call as I have ever had. For, generally, the chimpanzee hunt passes off like well oiled office routine. The raid and net method which I generally use has probably been known since Noah. My boys and I watch in a chimpanzee grove as the animals take to their trees

Can We Renounce War?

resolution. But then, Senator Capper proposes to define aggressive war in the terms already embodied in article 5 of the treaty of Locarno. That nation is an aggressor "which having agreed to submit international differences to conciliation, arbitration or judicial settlement begins hostilities without having done so."

By this definition legitimate defense is also defined, for defense is legitimate if the attacked party at once offers to submit the dispute to the agreed means of peaceful settlement. The aggressor nation is not always that which strikes first; it is the nation which refuses to stand by its pledge to settle its problems in council or court, but goes to war instead. The definition has been criticized as inadequate because it does not deal with the justice of a nation's case. But neither does the definition of murder in criminal law—"premeditated slaying"—deal with what the murderer regards as his "just provocation."

Most crimes have some justification, at least in the criminal's mind; he thinks of the wrongs endured as justifying his act of violence. But organized society refuses to admit this claim; the redress must come through the operation of the law. If there is no redress there, there is no redress at all. Often enough in human history justice has been denied the innocent; yet that is no argument against the existence of courts. Similarly, if we are ever to eliminate the crime of war, we must do so by providing other ways than war for redressing the wrongs of nations. Senator Capper's resolution insists upon this. He points to the alternatives for war—judicial settlement or political conferences—and brands that nation as an aggressor which goes to war in violation of its pledge to go to conference or to court.

It has been urged against this definition that Sir Austin Chamberlain has stated that it will never be possible to define an aggressor, because diplomacy can so disguise or distort a nation's case as to make the real aggressor seem a defendant. But this is just the point we have been dealing with. There was confusion in Sir Austen's mind between the justice of the case and the proper method of its settlement, a confusion which prevented him from seeing that his own signature to the treaty of Locarno would have been impossible but for the distinction drawn in article V of that document which branded as an aggressor the power which goes to war in violation of the pledge that all the signatories must take their case to an established peaceful means of settlement. In article V of the treaty of Locarno Sir Austen had accepted the definition in question and based policies of Britain upon it.

Senator Capper would also base the policies of the United States upon the distinction which lies in this definition. He proposes to bring about something more than a mere peace treaty between ourselves and other nations not likely to go to war with us in any case. In addition to this fine gesture, he proposes that we should pay attention as well to the treaties which exist between other nations for the peaceful settlement of international disputes. At present, by the law of neutrality, the United States is free to deal equally with all belligerents. This means that private shipment of arms can be undertaken on the shipper's risk and that the shipment of supplies, if not contraband, should be protected by our government. Neutrality does not mean that the citizens of the neutral country abstain from aiding belligerents. The citizens of a neutral country can help both or any belligerents by supplying them with the resources which war so imperatively demands and which in any extended conflict must largely come from those nations which retain their peace-time industries.

This formula sums up in a word the change which has come over human affairs with the development of modern industry and the supporting web of international finance. We have reached a period of history when the great civilized nations no longer rest behind their geographic frontiers, but are deeply and sometimes vitally involved in the life, happiness and prosperity of other nations than their own. The financial capital of at least a dozen nations of the world is now either London or Parjs or New York. The arsenals of at least as many nations could be found, if war were again to break out, in Pittsburgh, Bridgeport or Bethlehem.

Now, so long as nations admit and assert the free right of war, there can be no question of war being right or wrong. The rightness or wrongness lies in the issues behind the war; but this most ancient "instrument of policy" is always at hand and any sovereign state has the "right" to use it.

As for America's attitude with reference to these great principles, the answer to M. Briand was already framed forty years ago by a president whom no one could charge with the frailty of sentimentality—President Cleveland. Speaking with reference to a movement for international arbitration in 1887, President Cleveland said, "I believe I may speak for the American people in giving the assurance that they wish to see the killing of men for the accomplishment of national ambition abolished." That President Cleveland's words were true no statesman today living would dare deny.

Fighting for Life with Chimpanzees for the night. These we encircle with tall net fences. When they are asleep we make a terrific racket, beating drums, blowing whistles, screeching, shaking the trees. Down drop the apes within the fence enclosures. We tangle the sleepers in the nets and the raid is finished.

The "outlaw" chimpanzee is an amazingly interesting individual. He is a great male who roams the woods alone. Some authorities say such an outlaw is the deposed leader of a troop, cast out by a younger rival. Others believe these exiles have been sent forth for feeble-mindedness or other eccentricity. Once, when I was on a snake hunt in the Kono country of Sierra Leone, runners from Kanjama, a native village, came begging me to "kill the ghost."

"What ghost?" I asked mystified.

"The ghost of bug babboo (chimpanzee) we kill and chop (eat)."

"He go humbug (attack) the women working in gardens. He kill pikin (baby). He tramp down, dancing in middle of the rice patch. He make swear. Massa, make you kill him for good, one time."

It sounded like an outlaw chimpanzee. And when I reached Kanjama other tremblers told how he had come tramp, tramp, tramping through the village. One old woman left behind when all had fled went shaking up a ladder to a rice loft. The old villain pursued and killed her. I decided to try this chap with a pit, since he impressed me as too wary for nets. I selected a likely approach to the village and set my snare.

After a week of waiting I was about ready to acknowledge defeat when I remembered a story told beside a night fire in a trading village by a drowsy Frenchman. A Swiss by the name of Penderson was said to have kept a pet chimpanzee tethered in his back yard at Freetown, on the coast. One day he was surprised to see a large ape trying to make friends with his little captive. It seemed the interloper was an outlaw driven into civilization by his loneliness for ape companionship. Once I had laughed at his story. But now, as I tossed sleeplessly, I wondered. And conceived a plan.

Next morning I tethered a young chimpanzee near the spot where, we believed, our outlaw came out of the woods. I set watches in a hut within sight. And soon I found that idea, hatched in insomnia, as a last resort had succeeded where all the old methods failed. The same afternoon I had hardly laid down when my boy Hector stood over me. He pointed toward the peep hole cut in the mud side of our hut. I understood his gestures, which are always expressive in the moment when a coveted animal is yielding. I made for the peep hole. What I beheld in the drone of the hot afternoon was epic in its elemental drama.

The old outlaw, a big chap, heavy haired and solemn faced, was stretching one arm out to our little captive, as his morose countenance expressed what to me seemed like an almost human tragedy. His attitude, his quiet gloom, his stark supplication were as if he were saying:

"Here we are, you and I. You are a captive on a chain. I am an outlaw scorned by all other chimpanzees. Come, let us comfort each other!"

The stern scientists of the textbooks may say that I am sentimentalizing. But I am merely trying to put the interpretation that appealed to me upon the acts of this murdering exile. As I watched I was fascinated. But at last reality brought me back. I stepped to the door, I raised my weapon. In two seconds the great chimpanzee had passed out of the land where villages are terrorized by such as he.

a bunch of professional diving dames. Might have known it. You know this elephant?"

"Sure. I knowed her when she was in vaudeville."

"You can make her work then? All right. This is the mistake sequence we're on this morning—the big scene, you know. Now listen, I'll outline the action to you. Anna May's got on her picture hat and her ballet skirt—well, not now, she hasn't," he explained as the rather dumb assistant looked inquiringly toward the sad-faced elephant. "the property man'll fix that. I'm just telling you what the action is. Anna May is all dressed up. She has a parasol in her trunk and she's just going out to pay a call. She starts out the door of the house and forgets that she's left her purse behind. Now, she's superstitious, see——'

"Is she?" asked the assistant. "I never knowed that."

"In the comedy," said Jimmy Horan faintly. 'In the comedy she's superstitious. So we insert the title: 'It's always bad luck to go back unless you count forty.' Get that? So she comes back into the house"—Jimmy was acting now—"and she gets her purse. Then she remembers to sit down and county forty. But the carpenter has come in during her absence and laid a board on the chair with a big nail in it."

"And she sits on the nail?"

"That's right, she sits on the nail. Not really, you know—we take a closeup of the board and the nail on the chair, with Anna May's legs showing, backing up toward it, to indicate that the nail is still there when she sits down. Never mind that—it's the mechanics, you know. What I want you to do is to make her sit down and then jump up real quick like she'd really been stung. Now have you got it?"

"Sure, she sits on the nail and jumps up. "I got it."

"All right. You'd better rehearse it a few times to have everything O. K. Anna May works pretty well when she knows what a thing's about."

Time and again the assistant shoved the recalcitrant pachyderm toward the big chair. Time and again she refused to do the bidding of any one save Eddie Harris, who wasn't there. But at last, tired, disgruntled, at odds with the whole world, she sat, and grunted her displeasure. Horan waved an arm in signal.

"Give her a minute's rest," he ordered. "No—don't dress her yet," he countermanded as the assistant moved toward the tulle ballet skirt. "We'll have to rehearse her some more. Say, Jake!" he called to the property man, "bring out the board with the nail in it while this elephant's resting. We'll take those close-ups."

And while the nail and board went to its temporary position — from which it must be removed ere Anna May could practice again, many things were happening at another part of the Keenart's Film Producing company's lot. George Bruce, talking to Mary Lane in an interim between the jungle village scenes, suddenly gave her a shove and started her toward the thatched hut.

"Get away quick!" he commanded. "I'm about to start cussing. He's a day ahead of time!"

A car had just driven through the studio gates and was headed toward the jungle village. Sitting proudly in the rear seat was the unmistakable form of the great film author, Mr. Morrie Abfinkle. Bruce signaled for a property man.

"Quick!" he ordered. "Get over to Jim Horan's unit and tell him not to let that elephant come this way. Tell him Morrie's already here!"

Then, flattened in spirit and in appearance, he went forward to the greeting of his doom, while the property man sped on, at last to reach Jimmy Horan and pull him from beside a camera. In whispers he delivered the message. The company halted all activities—motion picture companies have a habit of doing that when the director turns his eyes away. That is, all but the new assistant in charge of Miss Anna May, who, noting a temporary lull in activities, decided that the time had come for more rehearsal. He turned the elephant protestingly around. He jabbed her with the bullhook.

At last, unnoticed, he started her backward, toward the chair—and toward something else, which in his dumoness, he had not noticed. It was the board with a three-inch nail protruding.

Over on the outdoor set where flared and flickered "The Flame of the Jungle" a director thought quickly, then shouted directions to a girl who came from a thatched hut.

"Now, Mr. Abfinkle," he said to the beaming gentleman at his side, "we'll take this little shot while you're here. Eloise is gazing out to sea, and wondering when some one will come to rescue her. You understand the action, Miss Lane?" he called. "All right. Ready, cameras——"

But on the set of "Anna May's Mistake" there was no such quietness. Closer went the protesting Anna May. Her hind legs bent. Her rear moved downward with the certainty of fate. Closer, closer—then Jimmy Horan turned and with a shout moved wildly forward.

Too late. Anna May had sat down, heavily. Remorselessly a three-inch nail had pushed itself through the tough outer coating of her hide and into a portion of her anatomy which hurt ferociously.

She crashed to the open, swerved wildly, started upon one course, swung again, tried another, and then, with a surge of hope, moved toward the gate which separated her from the only friend she knew in this place of pain and punctures.

Head down she struck it and crashed through. Head down, she went on, knocking the fuel and the pot from the council fire, and kicking a thatched hut to splinters before she truly understood that she had reached a place desired. Then she trumpeted again, with a different note in it. A girl was before her, dodging and running wildly, while on the sidelines men were waving their arms, and shouting, natives were scattering from all parts of the village and there was pandemonium in general, cut by the piercing cry of the girl:

"Camera! Camera!" called Mary Lane, as she saw the form of George Bruce breaking from the knot of men at the platforms. "Camera! I'm not afraid. Honest!"

Whereupon, gasping the fear which she had belied, she dodged anew, while Anna May went skidding past her, only to whirl and take up the chase anew. Another thatched hut blew up into a mass of straw and dust as Anna May catapulted through it, blasted with her trumpet for her quarry to halt, noticed even a greater burst of speed on the part of the girl, and diligently took up the pursuit.

This figure before her had been the friend of Anna May. Now, in her turmoil and her pain, Anna May wanted her, above all else in the world—unless it could be a cessation of that stinging from behind. Again Mary Lane cried out, gasping, a sound drowned by the thunder of the elephant, the screams of fleeing natives and the shouts from the camera platforms. On—on, dodging, twisting, the elephant gaining as it padded along in her wake. Again and again Mary Lane strove to avoid the beast which pursued her. Then, gasping, her features white in spite of her makeup, she swerved, swung giddily—and fainted.

"And she told me she wasn't scared!" George Bruce gasped it as he leaped from the platform and ran forward. Only to halt, a foot short of the camera lines. For Anna May had halted, too, weaving uncertainly above the still form, as if striving to divine the cause of a sudden inaction. Slowly something moved through her massive brain—something from far in the past, where a silent form had lain before her, and she——

Then it came back. The old "pick-up" finish of her act in the circus ring! Slowly she knelt. Her trunk went gently forth, the concentration of the act taking from her even the thought of that stinging attack upon the rear. The heavy protuberance wound softly about the girl and caught her, gently tight. Then Anna May rose, with the girl in her trunk, and stood hesitant.

"This way, Anna May!" It was George Bruce, coaxing at the camera lines.

"Yeh! This way! This way!" Another voice had joined Bruce's, that of Morrie Abfinkle, as he took his place beside the director and waved his arms for emphasis. "Isn't it a knockout?" he asked, as Anna May slowly began to obey. "Isn't it a wow! And wasn't we lucky that I should be here on the job just the minute it happened, to yell for those fool camera men to start cranking? Nice elephant! This way—this way!"

Five minutes later, when Mary Lane had finished with the smelling salts, George Bruce grasped her by the arm.

"Tell him you weren't frightened!" he whispered. "He thinks he directed the whole thing and that you're the greatest ever!"

"Why, of course I wasn't," said Mary Lane, faintly. Then, with a sudden widening of her eyes, "Why, George, I really wasn't. I was—but you know, I wasn't either, now, was I? All I could think of was to call for the cameras——"

"Sh-h-h-h!" said George Bruce. Morrie Abfinkle was approaching. The director rose. "Now, following out your suggestion, Mr. Abfinkle, I have a little idea. We could have the elephant carry her off to the other side of the island, and there she would sight——"

"I just thought of that," said Mr. Abfinkle.

"But," hesitated George Bruce, "of course this is Jimmy Horan's elephant. I'd have to be given a little more time if I followed this new turn in your scenario."

"Listen, my boy," said Morrie Abfinkle, "when my heart's in a thing like this, when I've put my brains in it, what's a week or two? And be careful," he added, blinking through his heavily lensed tortoise shells, "because I can't stay to help you. I've got to get back and order some special printing for the little girl here. What's the use to discover a new actress if you don't cash in on it? What?"

"O, you darling!" came a distinctly feminine voice. Mr. Morrie Abfinkle turned, a bit aghast at familiarity; Mr. Abfinkle was that way. But he was as quickly mollified. Miss Mary Lane, soon to be featured leading woman of "The Flame of the Jungle," had just taken a bag of peanuts from the hands of a property man——

And was addressing an elephant.

home had burned to the ground and all the family belongings destroyed. Mrs. Pittman and the children moved to the home of a relative. Later they took up their abode in a cabin which had formerly been a barn, on Indian mountain, within three miles of the spot where Howard had fallen.

Late in January, 1926, the supreme court denied the appeal and affirmed the decision of the lower court—and five days later Rosemary Pittman made her great bid to save her husband's life.

On this day the girl proclaimed to the world that it was she who had killed Constable Howard.

"I wanted to tell it from the first but Holland wouldn't let me," she said.

"I don't care what they do with me. I would be just as well off dead as alive. But I want to die with the knowledge that two innocent men are to be freed."

Sheriff Sam Willis listened politely but incredulously. He inquired where Rosemary had been when she shot the constable. She said she had been hidden in the cave that she had watched Howard come up the mountain and then had shot him believing he was going to kill Holland, her beloved. She insisted that Alex Pittman hadn't been at the distillery.

The wheels of justice moved on.

Only one legal move remained for the defense: a petition for a rehearing before the supreme court. The petition was obtained and on September 22 was denied. The two men were automatically sentenced to die on the third Friday following.

But in this denial by the supreme court of the state there was the first display of mercy. One paragraph in the opinion read as follows:

"As to the defendant. Holland Pittman, the writer deems it not improper to say that the record perhaps affords some grounds for the view that the ends of justice might be obtained by the infliction of a less severe punishment than the death penalty."

Thus the matter lay in the governor's hands. He had now become the court of last appeal.

The remaining days of September passed and in October the father and son, watched by a throng that clogged the streets in front of the county jail, were removed from the quarters they had occupied so long. They were taken to the penitentiary for execution.

Governor T. G. McLeod came to Greenville in the middle of the month. Members of the family besieged his hotel—Mrs. Pittman, her sons, Fred and Eli, and the faithful Rosemary. The governor did not see them, but he sent them a message.

The message stated that the governor would see that justice was accorded the prisoners.

Justice? Did it mean they would go free?

The answer came on October 26, when, after a complete investigation of the case and after receiving many petitions asking mercy, Governor McLeod commuted the sentences to life imprisonment.

Holland and Alex Pittman received the news with their usual equanimity.

Mrs. Pittman, according to all reports, received the news in much the same manner. A reporter went up the mountains to the Pittman cabin and asked the mother if she had heard the news.

"No," she replied.

"Why, the governor has commuted the sentence of Alex and Hol!" exclaimed the reporter.

"Aw," put in 17-year-old Wesley Pittman at this junction. "I heard that this mawnin' when I went down the mountain but I fergot ter tell it."

If this were a movie no doubt we would close with a view of the faithful Rosemary taking up her home near the penitentiary, vowing to remain near her beloved always, and to wait for him—even unto death.

But it isn't a movie. The fact is that the girl left the Pittman home some months before the sentence was commuted and has not been seen since in that region.

A NEW SERIAL ABOUT THE CONQUERORS CLUB!

For the Class Cup

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

Author of "Raging Waters" "The Friend of Prince Philippe," "The Ghost at Faversham's," The "Conquerors Club" Stories, Etc.

"As we passed they started to kid me, and Ripley said something I didn't like."

Bob Miller hurried along the icy sidewalk as fast as he could safely travel. It was Saturday morning, and he was bound for the shack that served the Conquerors' club, of which he was president, as a clubhouse. The four members of the club always gathered on Saturday morning after whatever work they had to do at home was finished, but a particularly stubborn session with the furnace had delayed Bob this morning.

The Conquerors' club, as its old friends know, was composed of four boys. Besides Bob there was Bill Jenkins, Red Hopkins and Porky Jones. During the summer they had taken a camping trip which brought them exciting adventures, and which made Bill acquainted with Ruth Sauers—the only rival to the Conquerors' club in his devotion. Then in the autumn Bob had succeeded in getting the other boys out for the Ferriston High school football team, and the coach formed them into a substitute backfield that won the county championship for Ferriston by defeating Fayette in the final game of the season after the school's regular backfield had all been injured in an automobile accident.

But the football season was now a thing of the past, and other matters occupied the attention of the four boys. Chief among these was the annual struggle between the basketball teams of the high school classes for the school championship. Bob's mind was full of basketball as he approached the clubhouse, which he knew to be occupied because of the smoke issuing from a crooked chimney protruding through the roof.

He pushed open the door with a hearty greeting.

"Hi, fellows," he called. "Guess I'm late. Had an awful struggle with the furnace. A grate was burned out and I got the shaker jammed."

"You beat Bill, at that," replied Red Hopkins who was lounging in a corner. Porky mumbled a greeting to Bob between bites of a huge apple which he was devouring.

"Golly, are you eating again?" laughed Bob as he saw the fat boy's occupation. "Ever since you broke training at the end of the football season you've done nothing else."

Porky patted his midsection complacently. "I seem to thrive under the treatment," he mumbled. "Wanna bite?"

"No, thanks," returned Bob. "Where's Bill?"

"Don't know," said Red. "We were just talking about him. Say, Bob, I'll bet Bill makes the varsity basketball team next year if he plays like he has been in the class games. Too bad he didn't go out for the team the first of the year.

"Too bad nothing," snorted Bob. "The varsity team has all the stars it needs, and as president of the Sophomore class, I insist that we need Bill to win the school cup. You're right about his being good, though. Golly, I'm glad we got him out for football last fall and started his interest in athletics. Guess you and I can take credit for that, Red."

"We sure can," said Red. "And I thought we had some chance of keeping this hunk of beef, Porky, interested, too, but he's a backslider. After developing into a sweet fullback last fall he's gone back to the soft old life of frequent feeding."

Porky grunted contentedly. "After winning the game for Ferriston last fall by my sparkling work," he declared loftily, "I feel that I need do nothing more until next autumn arrives."

With a roar Red pounced upon the fat boy and a moment later had him prostrate on the floor.

"YOU won the game!" he howled. "You'd think you did it single-handed! As if Bob and Bill and I, not to speak of those fighting boys in the line, didn't do anything."

"Ouch, you're hurting my apple," protested Porky.

"Thought you'd eaten it," said Red, easing the pressure a little.

"I mean my Adam's apple," sighed Porky, and Red paid him for this remark with a sound clout. Then he arose and Porky clambered to his feet.

Bob, who had been watching this by-play with a grin, now threw another stick into the old stove that heated the shack.

"I sure hope we can beat the Juniors tonight," he said. "They've got the best team among the classes, and if we take this game we're set."

"Well, we're leading now, after beating the Freshmen twice and the Seniors once," pointed out Red.

"But the Juniors haven't lost a game, either, you know,' contributed Porky.

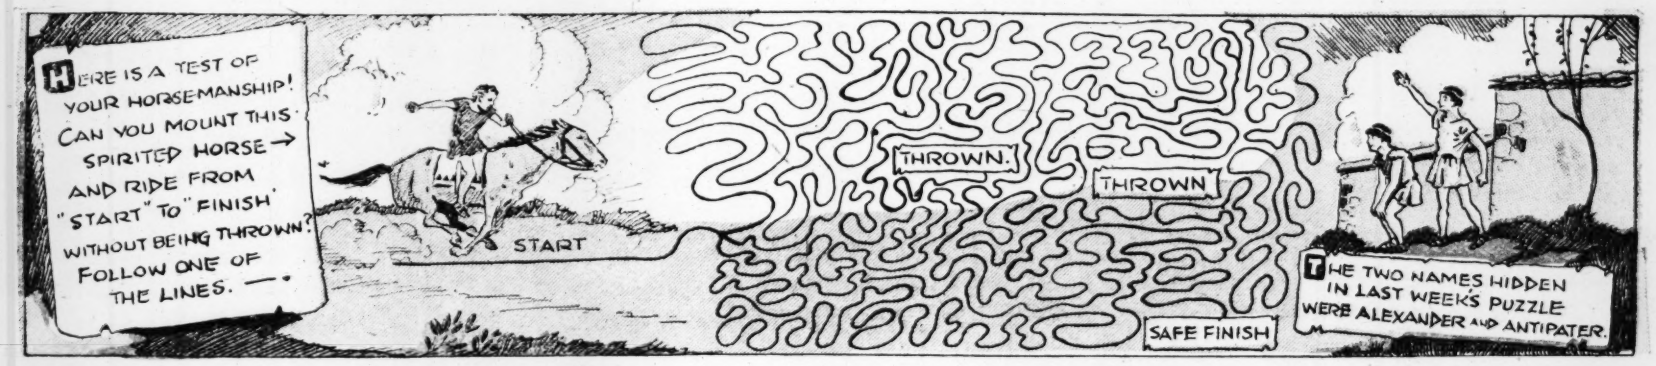

As the class league was organized, at Ferriston High school, each team played each of the others twice. The games were played on Saturday night, so that they did not conflict with the varsity games played on Friday night, and they were causing much excitement in the high school. Bob had gone out for the varsity team before Christmas, but he was not good enough to beat any of the veterans, and so as president of the Sophomore class he was leading its team in the school battle. Bob played center. Red was a guard, and Bill, who had been in the habit of giving most of his time to his studies until Bob showed him

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter 62—The Early Career of Alexander the Great. By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

The BOYS and GIRLS PAGE

THE ADVENTURES OF PETER PEN

BY NICK NICHOLS

THE GIFT OF LANGUAGE

Have you ever stopped to realize that at one time in the world's history people had scarcely any means of conveying their thoughts to each other? Do you know that it took years and years of painful effort and the slowest kind of development to create the languages that we use in talking and writing to one another?

One of the most precious things that countless generations of ancestors have left us is the gift of speech. Yet how careless we are with this priceless heritage! Many of us do not value it enough to take care of it. We use bad grammar, we slur our words, we fret and fume at the study and effort necessary to master the simpler forms of language.

Just think a minute of how much it means to you to HAVE a language. Think how impossible it would be to live without it. And then resolve to respect it enough to use it properly.

POSERS!

If two of you readers read these posers together, you might try the stunt of each answering half the questions—one the odd numbers and the other the even numbers.

1. At what temperature does water become steam?
2. What is the scientific name for quicksilver?
3. Who wrote "Marmion?"
4. In what people's mythology does Thor appear?
5. What trade did Paul Revere practice?
6. What famous cathedral is noted for its gargoyles?
7. Name the five Great Lakes.
8. In what country is the Leaning Tower of Pisa located?

READERS SENT THESE IN FOR YOU TO GUESS

Readers were good enough to send in this bunch of riddles, and some of them are real stickers.

1. What stands on one foot and has its heart in its head?—James Worland.
2. Black within and red without and four corners round about. What is it?—Dona S. Dempsey.
3. What kind of neckwear do hogs like?—Fred Levering.
4. What is the difference between a milkmaid and a swallow?—Ida Guge.
5. When did fruit use strong language?—Viola Brent.

that he was an excellent quarterback on the football field, now surprised everyone by proving to be a lightning-like forward on the basketball floor. With his studies, his participation in athletics, and his attention to Ruth, Bill was a very busy young man.

The other two regular members of the Sophomore team were Ed Hixon and Jimmy Favering. They were both clever players, and together with the three Conquerors, had won their first three games. The league battle looked like a fight between the Juniors and Sophomores, and the first game between these teams, scheduled for that night, had the students at fever heat.

"I particularly want to beat the Juniors because I don't like them," said Bob, after a moment's silence. "Frank Ripley is a dirty player, and Pete Price isn't much better. The game will be rough with those two boys in there. We'll have to warn Bill, for Ripley will be guarding him tonight."

"Just let them get rough," scoffed Red. "We can do a little of that ourselves."

"Oh, I don't mind if they're rough, but they'll be dirty rough," protested Bob. "And we won't do that."

"Let's go skating," broke in Porky. "The ice on the rive is fine."

"Holy Pete!" gasped Red. "That's the first time I ever heard you suggest anything that required action."

"I like to skate," said Porky. "It's so much easier than walking. And if I fall down I don't chip the ice like you skinflints do."

Red was about to make a hot retort when the door of the shack was pushed slowly open and Bill entered. The other three boys, about to shout greetings, stopped and stared at him.

"Bill!" cried Bob. "Where did you get the black eye? Oh, what a beauty!"

Bill slowly closed the door and walked into the shack. Something in his face kept the others from indulging in the kidding that the occasion seemed to call for.

"I had a little argument with a fellow last night," explained Bill in a low voice.

"A fight!" gasped Red.

"Who was it?" burst out porky.

"Bill! Did he lick you?" exclaimed Bob anxiously. Bill was rather slight in build and peaceable by nature. It was not like him to be fighting.

"I'll tell you about it," said Bill, dropping onto a bench. "I took Ruth to the varsity game last night, you know. Well, we were on our way home when we passed three or four fellows on a corner. Frank Ripley was there, and Pete Price, and two or three others. As we passed they started to kid me, and Ripley said something I didn't like. So after I took Ruth home I went back."

"What happened?" cried Porky, his eyes gleaming.

"Well, I told him what I thought of him," said Bill, "and of course we fought. That's how I got the black eye."

Bob uttered an exclamation. "I was going to tell you to look out for him!" he cried. "Did he hurt you much?"

Bill smiled gently, meanwhile carefully feeling his black eye. "Not much," he said. "In fact, they had to rub snow on his face to bring him to."

"Yay!" yelled Red, jumping to his feet. "Nice work, Bill! Boy, I wish I'd been there!"

"But the other fellows started on me then," continued Bill, and I'd have had a bad time if some men hadn't come along and stopped it."

"The cowards!" gasped Bob. "A bunch of them picking on one fellow! Just wait till we get those boys!"

(To Be Continued Next Week.)

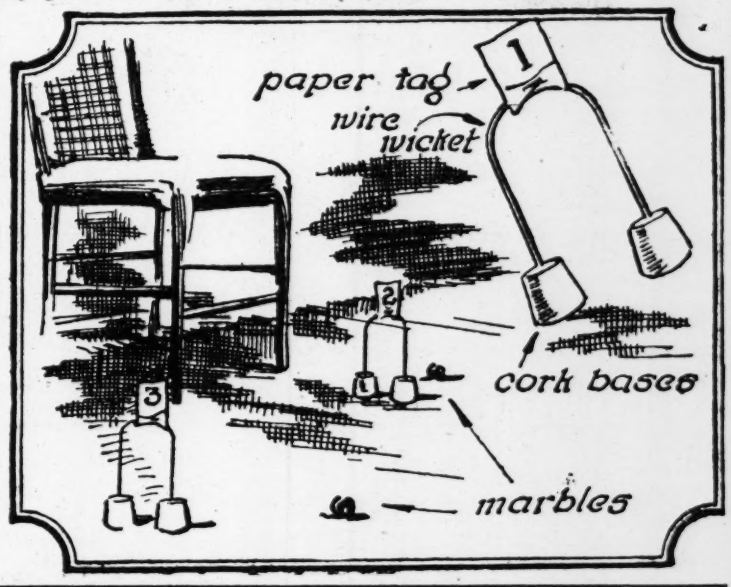

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

Carpet croquet is played indoors with marbles and wire wickets. It requires the same number of wickets and the same general layout as croquet but the size of the court can be varied to suit the size of the room. A carpet is better to play upon than a smooth floor, as it will offer more resistance to the marbles and you will be able to flip them more accurately. On a smooth floor a marble will easily roll from one end of the room to the other.

Use stiff smooth wire for the wickets, cutting them to suitable lengths. After bending them to shape, corks are pushed over the ends. These corks not only prevent possible marring of the floor but offer good supports and hold the wickets upright. The marbles are flipped from one position to the next and no mallets are needed.

Another variation of this game is to rearrange the wickets to correspond somewhat to a golf course. They they are set in a hit-and-miss fashion about the house, in two or three rooms. You "hole" out when you successfully pass through a wicket. Of course, the person who completes the course with the lowest number of flips or "strokes" wins. The rules governing this game should be the same, so far as possible, as those governing regulation golf. Furniture can become hazards and if you tee off to a bad lie, you can drop a stroke and use another marble. If each player uses a marble of different color or composition it will be easy to tell them apart.

Five Thousand Beggars Roam Parisian Streets

Paris.—(AP)—Five thousand beggars in the streets of Paris, it is estimated, have 18,000,000 francs dropped in their hands or tin cups each year. These figures should be multiplied by four for France, says M. Lefebure, of the Paris municipal council.

He is trying to get parliament to take the beggars off the streets and put them to work in special institutions, as is now done in Belgium.

Jail sentences, he adds, only increase the number of beggars. Jail is a place where they can eat and sleep without working.

The average amount collected daily by these mendicants is put at only 10 francs, barely enough for the plainest food and shelter occasionally at night in the great lodging rooms.

FINE DISTINCTIONS.

"I say, old chap, what's the difference between 'abstract' and 'concrete?'"

"Well, when my wife promises to make a cake, that's abstract; when she makes one, it's concrete."

HEART'S DESIRE.

Sambo: "Say, Rastus, what would you do if you had million dollars?"

Rastus: "Dey ain't no question 'bout it. I'd have butter and gravy bofe on de same piece of bread."

A SECRET LANGUAGE.

El Comancho, old-time frontiersman, will start teaching you the ancient Chinook language of the West Coast Indians in this page next week. It will serve as a secret language between you and your friends.

It Was the Greatest Shock of My Life to Hear Her Play

—how had she found time to practice?

"WELL, Jim—I told you I had a surprise for you!"

She beamed at her husband, delighted to see how surprised—and pleased—he was.

And I was astonished, too. Quite casually she had gone to the piano, sat down—and played! Played beautifully—though I had never seen her touch a piano before. I didn't even know that she could read notes. Neither of us could conceal our curiosity.

"How did you ever do it?" her husband asked. "When did you find time to practice?"

"And who is your teacher?" I added.

"Wait, wait!" she laughed. "One question at a time. I have no teacher, that is, no private teacher, and I do my practicing between dishes."

"No teacher?"

"No—I learned to play the piano an entirely new way—without a teacher. You see, all my life I wanted to play some musical instrument, and the piano appealed to me most. I thought I'd never learn how to play it, though—for I haven't much time to spare, and I thought it would take long, long hours of hard work and study. And I thought it would be expensive, too."

"Well, it is hard work, and it is expensive," I said. "Why, I have a sister . . ."

"I know," she laughed, "but I learned to play the piano through the new simplified method. Some time ago I saw an announcement of the U. S. School of Music. It told how a young man had learned to play the piano during his spare time without a teacher. I found that thousands of others had learned to play their favorite musical instruments in this same delightful, easy way, and so I decided to enroll for a course in piano playing."

"But you didn't tell me anything about it," Jim said.

"Well, you see, that was my big surprise. Ever since I received my first lesson I've been practicing by myself—during the day while you've been away at business. I turned my spare moments between housekeeping and shopping into something pleasant and profitable."

"If you planned to surprise, me—you've certainly succeeded," said Jim.

"Venturas" Will It Supplant Antiques?

Here is the latest fad in home decorating and furnishing—called "Venturas." Its motif is a modification of futuristic art combined with the application to furniture of the lines common to industry. The John Wanamaker store in New York sponsored an exhibit of this new art, explaining that scarcity of antiques is calculated to stimulate interest in the "Venturas" fad. The accompanying exclusive photos are by Herbert.

Excess Fat
Bars Goodies

Get Thin without Starvation

Excess fat causes many constant self-denials. Every day brings a new fight, and only a small percentage gain in those ways what they seek. The real cause is left uncorrected.

Over 20 years ago medical science discovered a great cause of excess fat. It lies in lack of a substance which controls nutrition. A factor which Nature employs to turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat.

Then that factor was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. Now people have used them for two decades—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Today everyone can see that excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was. In almost every circle slenderness prevails.

The use of Marmola requires no abnormal exercises or diet, though moderation helps. Users simply take four tablets daily until they correct the cause. They know what they are taking, and why. The formula is given in every box, also the reasons for all results. Every user knows why the benefits come, and why they involve no harm.

You should try Marmola. Consider what it has done for so long, for so many. Watch what it brings to you in new beauty, new health and vitality. Learn the easy, pleasant, right way to a normal figure. As long as you live you may be glad that you found this scientific method. Order now—before you forget it. Do not wait

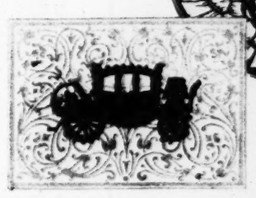

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

FISHER

FISHER BODY and Fisher Body alone made it possible for Chevrolet to demonstrate what wonders can be accomplished in beautifying a car of popular price. There is an obstacle which quite literally prevents any car from giving that which only Fisher gives. This obstacle is the stubborn fact that nowhere in the world is there anything even remotely approaching the unrivaled facilities of Fisher Body in the creation either of beauty or of value. For that reason the several new cars with Body by Fisher which are arousing unusual admiration cannot be duplicated or rivaled because Fisher Bodies cannot be duplicated or rivaled. Chevrolet was able to draw upon these unrivaled Fisher Body resources and the result is an exquisiteness of appearance so unusual and so advanced that it places the car absolutely alone and supreme in its class

I End Gray Hair or Don't Accept a Penny

Send for free test

GRAY hair is proved unnecessary. A new safe way has been found to bring back original shade—to remove the faded streaks and restore graying parts—to make the hair live-looking and lustrous.

Over 10,000,000 women have used it as the sure way to avoid detection—and because it's safe. They warn you not to use the crude, messy old-time dyes. This is clean and colorless. You simply comb it through the hair. It will not wash nor rub off. It's called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer.

Gray hair lacks color pigment. This way takes its place, and gives the natural effect. If auburn, will revert to auburn. If black, black it will be.

Test it free if you wish. Simply write for special outfit. Or go to nearest druggist. A few cents' worth restores color perfectly. Money returned if not delighted.
